The first Atlas of Jefferson County, Ohio, was published in 1871 by F. W. Beers & Company of New York City. This 1975 reprint of that Atlas is identical in size with the original publication, and is printed on special paper designed to outlast ordinary paper used in similar publications.

An index of the names of Jefferson County towns and villages as of 1871 will be found under the Table of Contents. Over the past century, changes have occurred in name and status of several of these towns and villages.

Under the Table of Contents, Salem and Rush Run are erroneously listed as Saline and Bush Run, respectively. Croxton Post Office, in or near Monroeville, is no longer in existence; Bloomfield has become Bloomingdale; McCoy's has become Empire; Trenton has become Emerson; Le Grange has become Brilliant; Portland Depot has become Rayland; Salem has become Annapolis and Sloane's Station has become Toronto.

Jacksonville, Jeffersonville and Fisherville have long since lost their identities, and are now, a century later, part of the City of Steubenville.

This 1975 reprint of the Atlas is published in the interests of the Jefferson County Historical Association.

Anderson John, County Commissioner, "Fairview Farm," West of Hammondsville.
Collins E. K., Collinswood. The Coal on Collinswood differs from all other kinds of Bituminous Coals in the country, in the fact that the atmosphere does not affect it for years, which is the best evidence of its purity. The peculiarities of the ore are that in the analysis of over twenty different strata, not the slightest trace of sulphur or phosphorus can be found. Several of the veins of ore contain manganese as in the celebrated Swedish ores, from which the Bessemer steel is manufactured. Fire Clay is equal to the Stourbridge clay of England. Portland clay is equal to any found in this country. Limestone is of a fine quality, 80 feet in depth.
Dyal G., Dealer in Dry Goods, Groceries, Choice Teas, Coffees, Queensware, &c., &c.
Downer A., Coal Blacksmith, Hammondsville.
Evans John, "Tryon," American House, Irondale.
Lacey Wm., Wholesale Dealer in Coal and Coke. Manager of Fire Brick and Fire Clay. P. O. address Hammondsville. Res. between Hammondsville and Irondale.
