WARNE COUNTY, OHIO.

Farm Residences selected for the Atlas.

The following Farm Residences have been chosen for the Atlas of Wayne County. We have made our selection from the finest farms in the County for this work. Due credit is given to the following enterprising citizens; their work and improvements add greatly to the advancement of the present day of progress to the County of Wayne: John Elliott, B. Hershey, and Israel Baughman, in Chippewa Township; J. Gardiner, nursery, in Green Township; Shuman Keister, proprietor of the East Union Hotel; Andrew Milbourn, East Union Township; A. H. and B. C. Byers, D. D. Miller, the well-known hardware store; Wooster; Henry Myer and Philip Troutman, Wooster Township; Samuel Schmuck, a fine farm, located in Franklin Township; John Newkirk, James Aylesworth, and Emmett Eddy, in Clinton Township; Martin Schultz, carriage works, in Dalton; Cline, Sieberling & Co., machine shop, the largest in the County—the manufacture from 1000 to 1200 Reapers and Mowers annually.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF WAYNE COUNTY, OHIO.

Due credit is given to Hon. A. H. BYERS, of Wooster, for valuable aid in obtaining information of the early history of Wayne County.

Wayne was established by proclamation of Gen. St. Clair August 15th, 1796, and was the third county formed in the N. W. Territory. Its original limits were very extensive, and were thus defined in the act creating it: Beginning at the mouth of the Cuyahoga River, upon Lake Erie, and with the said river to the Portage between it and the Tuscarawas branch of the Muskingum; thence down the said branch to the forks at the carrying place above Fort Laurens; thence by a west line to the east boundary of Hamilton County, (which is a due north line from the lower Shawnee town upon the Scioto River;) thence by a line west-northerly to the south part of Portage, between the Miamis of the Ohio and the St. Mary's River; thence by a line also west-northerly to the south-western part of the Portage, between the Wabash and the Miamis of Lake Erie, where Fort Wayne now stands; thence by a line west-northerly to the south part of Lake Michigan; thence along the western shores of the same to the north-west part thereof, including lands upon the stream emptying into the said lake; thence by a due north line to the territorial boundary in Lake Superior, and with the said boundary through Lakes Huron, St. Clair and Erie to the mouth of Cuyahoga River, the place of beginning.

These limits embrace what are now parts of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and all of Michigan, and the towns of Ohio City, Chicago, St. Mary's, Mackinaw, &c. Since then states and counties have been organized out of this territory, and the accompanying map shows the dimensions of Wayne County in 1873.

The surface of the County is mostly rolling, but interspersed with numerous glides of level land; the prevailing soil is a deep clay loam, capable of the highest fertility. Coal of an excellent quality abounds in the north-eastern part, and coal and excellent quarries of limestone in the south. It is one of the best counties for wheat in Ohio. The principal productions are wheat, oats, corn, grass and potatoes. Sheep and swine are extensively raised.

Population of Wayne County in 1810 was —; in 1820, 11,933, and in 1830, 23,327, or 60 inhabitants to a square mile; in 1840, 35,808; 1850, 32,981; 1860, 32,433, and 1870, 35,115. In February, 1840, the principal parts of the townships of Jackson, Perry, Mohican, and Lake, were taken from Wayne to form a part of the new County of Ashland. One row of sections on the east side of each of these townships was retained in Wayne, and added to Congress, Chester, Plain and Clinton. This gives forty-two sections in Congress, Chester and Plain; Clinton being a fractional township.

This County was named from Gen. Anthony Wayne. Gen. Wayne was born in Chester County, Pa., January 1st, 1745. After leaving school he became a surveyor, and paid some attention to philosophy and engineering; he obtained the acquaintance and friendship of Dr. Franklin, who became his patron. He entered the army of the Revolution in 1775, and was made brigadier general in 1777. He was in the army through the war, and particularly distinguished himself in the battles of Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth. He attacked Stony Point in July, 1779, an almost inaccessible height, and defended by 600 men; he led his troops with unloaded muskets, flints out, and fixed bayonets, and without firing a gun carried the fort by storm, and took 543 prisoners. He was struck, in the attack, by a musket ball in the head, which he supposed to be a mortal wound; he called his aid-de-camp to carry him forward and let him die in the fort. The crowning acts of his life were his victory over the Indians on the Maumee, and the treaty of Greenville in 1795. His life of peril, and faithful discharge of duty to his country, was terminated in 1796, in a cabin at Presque Isle, (now Erie, Pa.) then in the wilderness. His remains were there deposited, at his own request, under the flag-staff of the fort, on the margin of Lake Erie, and were removed in 1809, by his son, to Radnor churchyard, Delaware County, Pa. Wayne was one of the best generals of the Revolution. He was irresistible in leading a charge, and a man of great impetuosity of character, bordering on rashness, but he conducted his last campaign with great caution and skill.

This County lies within what was once called the "New Purchase," a very extensive tract lying south of the Reserve, east of the Tuscarawas, north of the Greenville treaty line, which was established in 1795, and extends as far west as the western line of the Reserve. The land office for this tract was Canton; Col. Thomas Gibson, register, and Col. John Sloane, deceased, late of Wooster, receiver. The first land sold in this district was at Canton, in 1808, when was purchased the sites of Mansfield, Richland County, Wooster, and a few scattering tracts in the other parts of the district.

WOOSTER,

The County seat, named from Gen. David Wooster, an officer of the Revolution, is 93 miles north-east of Columbus, and 52 miles south from Cleveland, on the stage road between the two places. It is situated almost in the centre of the County, in Wooster Township, and near the junction of Apple Creek with Killbuck, on a gradual slope of ground, elevated about 100 feet above the latter, and is surrounded by a beautiful undulating country. To the south, from a more elevated part of the town, is seen the beautiful valley of the Killbuck, stretching away for many miles, until the prospect is hid by the highland in the County of Holmes, 12 or 14 miles distant. Wooster is compactly and well built, and is a place of much business. It has become a manufacturing town. Its population is about 8000. It was laid out in the year 1808, by the proprietors, John Beaver, William Henry and Joseph H. Larwill, on a site 337 feet above Lake Erie. The first house built in the County was a log structure, on Liberty street, immediately west of the late residence of William Larwill. It was raised about the time the town was laid out, and was first occupied by William Larwill and Abraham Miller, then quite young men. The next spring the father of the latter moved in from Stark County, with his family, the first family that settled in the town, and opened it as a house of entertainment. About the same time James Morgan, from Virginia, settled, with his family, on Killbuck, just north of the old Indian town—Killbucktown. In 1810 a brick building, on the north side of Liberty street, adjoining the public square, was erected by John Beaver, being the first brick edifice erected in the County.

A singular legal anecdote is related as having occurred at Wooster at an early day: The court was held, on this occasion, in a log house, and an adjoining stable was used as a jail, the stalls answering as cells for the prisoners. Judge R. was on the bench at the time, and in the exercise of his judicial functions severely reprimanded two young lawyers who had got into a personal dispute. A huge, herculean backwoodsman, attired in a blue flannel shirt, stood among the orators in the apartment which served the double purpose of court and bar-room. He was much pleased at the judge's lecture—having himself been practicing at another bar—and halloed out to his honor, who happened to be cross-eyed, in the midst of his harangue, "Give it to 'em, old gimlet-eyes!" "Who is that?" demanded the judge. He of the flannel shirt, proud of being thus noticed, stepped out from among the rest and, drawing himself to his full height, vociferated, "It's this 'ere old hoss." The judge, who to his last days never failed of a pungent repartee when occasion required, called out in a peculiarly dry nasal tone, "Sheriff, take that old hoss, put him in the stable, and see that he is not stolen before morning."

In the fall of 1810, a road was cut from what is now Massillon to Wooster, which was, it is said, the first road made in the County. The first state road, running through the County from Canton to Wooster, was laid out in 1810, by State Commissioners. When Wooster was settled, there were no white inhabitants between it and the Lake; on the west, none short of the Maumee, Fort Wayne and Vincennes; on the south, none until within a few miles of Coshocton, and those on the Tuscarawas were the nearest on the east. Wooster was made the seat of justice for the County, May 30, 1811.

Wooster was not the first County seat; the spot chosen by the first commissioners was on an eminence now known as Madison Hill, about 1½ miles south-east of the town, on land then owned by Bezaleel Wells & Co., which place they called Madison; but a single cabin was afterwards built there. The selection displeased the people of the County, which resulted in the Legislature appointing new commissioners who located it at Wooster.

The first mill was erected in the County in 1809, by Joseph Stibbs, of Canton, on Apple Creek, about a mile east of Wooster. Some time after, Stibbs sent a man, by the name of Michael Switzer, who opened for him, in a small building attached to the mill, a store consisting of a small stock of goods suitable for the settlers and Indians.

One morning a singular incident occurred: in the store were William Smith, Hugh Moore, Jesse Richards, J. H. Larwill and five or six Indians. Switzer was in the act of weighing out some powder from an eighteen pound keg, while the Indians were quietly smoking their pipes filled with a mixture of tobacco, sumach leaves and kinnickinnick or yellow willow bark, when a puff of wind, coming in at the window, blew a spark from one of their pipes into the powder. A terrific explosion ensued; the roof of the building was blown into four parts and carried some distance, the sides fell out, the joists came to the floor and the floor and chimney alone were left of the structure. Switzer died in a few minutes, Smith, Richards and the Indians were also hurt and all somewhat burned; Larwill, who happened to be standing against the chimney, escaped with very little harm, except having, like the rest, his face well blackened and being knocked down by the shock.

The Indians, fearful that they might be accused of doing it intentionally, some days after called a council of citizens for an investigation, which was held on the Bottom, on Christmas Run, west of the town.

In the War of 1812, a block house was erected in Wooster on the site of Col. John Sloane's residence. It was built by Capt. George Stidger, of Canton, and was intended more particularly for a Company he had here, and other troops which might be passing through the country.

An Indian settlement stood just south of Wooster on the site of the Baptist burying ground. It was named Beaver Hat, from an Indian Chief of that name, who resided there with a few others. His Indian name was Panpelemon, and his camp or residence was called by him Apple Chauncake, i. e. "Apple Orchard." The Indian trail from Pittsburgh to Lower Sandusky, passed just north of Beaver Hat. Killbuck Creek in this County was named from Killbuck, a Delaware Chief. His village, called Killbucktown, was on the road from Wooster to Millersburg, on the east side of the Creek about 10 miles south of Wooster. It is laid down on maps published as early as 1764. When the country was first settled, Killbuck was a very old man. There were several chiefs by this name.

ANTIQUITIES OF A PERISHED RACE.

Ancient work and mounds are found spread over nearly all parts of the State. There are several such in this County. I can allude to no more than two or three. The one that has inclosed the most ground that I have heard of in this County, is on Madison Hill, south of Wooster. In it had been inclosed several acres; faint traces of the ditch and embankment may still be seen; the road from Wooster to Millersburg, passes through its western edge. Another, but smaller one, is on the lands of Rose A. Eicher, in Wayne Township, in which the ditch and embankment can be easily traced, timber of the size and appearance of other forest trees is growing upon it. A third smaller ancient structure is directly west of this last, across the valley of Killbuck, on the land of H. M. Culbertson. When, or by whom these works were constructed, are questions that will probably never be answered; their history seems buried in deep oblivion. In many places—for these mounds and circular embankments are found throughout the entire Mississippi Valley—excavations have been made and relics of various kinds, such as stone tomahawks, knives, &c. have been found, also plates of polished stone, with characters engraved thereon, that some have thought resembled the Hebrew alphabet: in one of the mounds of this County at least, human bones have been found.

REFUSED LANDS, CONDITION OF EARLY AGRICULTURE, THE OPENING OF MARKETS, &c.

It is a fact, probably not known, but yet one well authenticated, that the lands which now produce most abundantly of the great cereal staple of Wayne County, were regarded by the early settlers, as utterly valueless, for purposes of cultivation. The bottom, or valley lands were the first and only sought by the pioneers. The monarch oak and luxuriant herbage which adorned the sides and summits of the lofty hills, at length suggested to those who had a better knowledge of agriculture as a science, that such production could not spring from a soil naturally sterile. This idea of the barrenness of the upland soil, is supposed to have had its origin, from the fact that the substance of its surface had been, for a considerable period, annually exhausted by fire. These fires, for obvious reasons, rarely swept over the lower plains, and hence, their fertility continued unimpaired. The practice of devastating by fire the upland forests, and thus defeating the operation of nature, doubtless had its origin with white hunters, from the trumontane regions, who had introduced this with other more flagrant vices of civilization among the aborigines, after the latter became instructed in the use of fire arms, and the practice of the white hunters. The effect of the fires was to change the natural qualities of the soil—to incrust the surface of the earth, with a material similar to a vast sheet of brick, and where anything like pulverized earth made its appearance, it bore the semblance of brick dust. Notwithstanding this periodical exhaustion, the natural vigor of the soil, during each spring following the autumnal burning, would become so far recuperated as to produce a very rank growth of vegetation, known as sedge grass, pea vine, &c. This vegetation afforded excellent pasture from early spring until about August. The sedge grass, when cut in July or earlier, afforded very nutritious and palatable food for domestic stock, during the winter months. In the lapse of time, it became a matter of necessity, with the cultivators of the soil upon the bottom and valley lands, to fight and subdue these autumnal fires, for the protection of their own fences, cabins and granaries. When protected from the exhausting process, the uplands very soon resumed their natural fertility; a radical chemical change became apparent all over the surface of the soil, and efforts at cultivation demonstrated the fact that those rejected acres are now among the most fertile of any in Ohio, for the production of the staple, which is the chief source of our agricultural wealth.

The Indian Tribes who inhabited this section, were Delaware, and Wyandots. Game was plenty for several years after the first settlement. The streams and ponds that are so numerous, had far more water than now. The general health was pretty good, considering that the climate was much damper than at present; the principal diseases were intermittents and rheumatism, ague, and chills. The early labors of the husbandman were not attended with very good success; to account for this, we must consider that the implements of the farm were rude and imperfect—principally the tiller's own handiwork—and that the seeds first planted or sowed, were placed in ground but imperfectly cleared and partially covered with stumps and roots, and shaded by traces of larger growth, that had been denuded, but still retained their leaves. Hence the "soft" corn, water-soaked potatoes, and perhaps the sick and smut-stricken wheat, sources of general complaint among the early cultivators. The absence of foreign demand for produce during the first twenty years, offered no incentive to a production beyond family and neighborhood wants. Aside from the supply of such wants, there was no stimulus to agricultural enterprise. It is related, on good authority, of a merchant in Wooster, who had accumulated in store a considerable quantity of wheat, for which he had paid the farmers, as an especial favor, twenty-five cents per bushel in goods, that finding his grain would not pay cost of transportation to the lake markets, he transferred his wheat from the warehouse to the street, where it was partly devoured and partly trodden under foot of swine and other animals. Except spasmodic demands, explained among the narratives of the early settlers, the first encouragement the former of Wayne County received for growing grain, or domestic animals for market, was after the completion of the New York and Erie Canal, in 1825, and the opening of the Ohio Canal at Massillon, in 1827. Since then Railroad facilities have been added—Newark Railroad to Mansfield, in July 1846.

The Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad was completed, and the first train run from Cleveland to Columbus, on the 4th of July, 1849, and the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad, which runs through Wayne County, completed in 1852. In the eastern part of the County, the Cleveland, Mt. Vernon and Delaware Railroad was completed in 1856, as far as Millersburg, in Holmes County; it is now built to Columbus. The Atlantic and Great Western Railroad runs through the northern part of the County; also the Lake Shore and Tuscarawas Valley Railroad, completed in 1872. There are now in the County 129 miles of railroad.

Affording the people of this day a choice of markets, some of which give value to certain products of the farmer, that in the times of the pioneers were worthless, securing to them remuneration in every department of agricultural enterprise, and consequent increase in the value of real estate, far beyond the hopes of the first settlers of the country.

THE SETTLEMENT, OF NORTHERN OHIO, BY INDIANS.

It is often asked, whether the Wyandots were the earliest inhabitants of Ohio. And who were they, and where did they come from. I quote from the very best authority that can be obtained. They came immediately from their homes about Detroit. They were formerly a powerful Tribe, called Hurons by the French, and lived in the country between Lake Huron and Lake Ontario, until about the year 1650, when they were routed by the Five Nations of New York, (afterward Six Nations,) and then driven to the shores of Lake Superior.

About the year 1655, the Five Nations annihilated the Eries, called by the French, the Cat Nation, who inhabited the southern shore of Lake Erie. For many years Ohio was uninhabited, and visited only by the hunting parties of the Five Nations, and their war parties passing to the West, to attack the Miamies and Illinois. This Tribe once roamed over grand prairies that are now cultivated fields of the great state of Illinois. But the Wyandots, or Hurons, having settled meanwhile about Detroit, made a treaty with the Five Nations in 1694, and gradually extended into Northern Ohio; afterward the Delawares moved in from the East, the Miamies from the West, and the Shawnees from the South. The Mingoes of Ohio were a fragment of the Six Nations. It is said that they were called Mengwa by the Delawares, and Mingoes was habitually applied only to the colony that lived in Ohio at that time.

WAYNE COUNTY PREVIOUS TO ITS SETTLEMENT BY WHITE INHABITANTS.

With regard to the period that preceded the settlement by white people of Wayne County, very little, of course, is known. The space indicated comprehends an indefinite rule of darkness and barbarism, and the investigation of its traditions and imperfect annals, and their embodiment into historical form, are not consistent with this work. Many of the acres that are now embraced within the limits of Wayne County, have been, no doubt, the theater of events that would render them classic ground, but the history of those are not attainable.

In various histories of Ohio there is reference to the Indian trail leading from Fort Duquesne, by way of Sandusky to Detroit. This trail passed through Wayne County, and will be found laid down on the County map. This route was supposed to have been opened soon after the erection of the fort at Pittsburgh, in 1754. We also find Hutchin's history of Boquet's expedition in 1764, gives five different routes through the Ohio wilderness. Second route, (163.)

Referring to Pownall's map, published in 1776, which locates various Indian Tribes then in Ohio, Mr. Taylor infers that the west branch of the Muskingum, known on our maps as the White-woman, or Mohican, was assigned to the remnants of the Old Connecticut Tribe.

FINE SPRINGS.

In the County are many fine Springs, among these, perhaps, Brastettes, on the N. E. quarter of section 34, in Plain Township, stands first. This Spring supplies the following mills: Henry Michael's grist and saw mills, Benj. Eason's saw mill, B. Frank's factory, Daniel Methvern's woolen factory, at Millbrook, and Andrew Keister's grist and saw mills, a short distance below Millbrook; although from the Spring to the mouth of the stream formed by it and a few other smaller ones, is no more than 2½ miles, yet it affords water enough to run seven grist mills, saw mills, and factories the year round. It would be difficult to find any where a stream of no greater length furnishing such an amount of water power. There are several other fine Springs, but none so celebrated as this; there is a very large one on the land of Jacob Albright, about a mile south of Wooster, and part south of the County line; in the edge of Holmes County is the celebrated Butler Spring.

THE PIONEERS AND THEIR TIMES.

Sixty-eight years have elapsed since the first settlement was commenced within what is now the organized territory of Wayne County. What changes have been wrought within less than three-quarters of a century? The first pioneers found the country without churches, schools, markets, roads, merchants, mechanics, or cultivated acres, if we except a few spots that may have been marked by the rude efforts of tillage by the Indians. Savage beasts and uncivilized men were in deadly conflict throughout the domain of the wilderness, except when winter withdrew them to their caverns. The earth teemed with venomous and loathsome reptiles. The country was utterly destitute of any of the moral or material resources that bear relation to civilized life. Such, in brief, was its condition when that band of moral heroes, the pioneers, entered the County, and grappled with dangers and privations altogether unknown to the generation who now occupy the country, and even in the experience of those who have of later years undertaken the subjugation of the vast forests that once covered our land. There exists no analogy between the habits and modes of life of those who were backwoodsmen at the commencement of the present century, and those who have peopled the new States and Territories of the West. Here, until the opening of the Atlantic market, by the completion of the New York and Erie Canal, in 1825, there had been no sale of produce except for neighborhood consumption; while westward of this, during the last 15 or 20 years particularly, artificial communications by means of canals, turnpikes or railroads, have advanced almost paripassu with the van of the immigration column, and agriculture, commerce and manufactures, with all the happiness they bestow, have been enjoyed, with the exception of brief delays, by the first populations of the new States and Territories. Steam, as an agent of transit alone, has wrought a wonderful revolution in accelerating the distribution of population and wealth. Of the early pioneers of Wayne County, Joseph H. Larwill was one of the first. Being surveyor, he made the first survey for government, commencing his surveys in 1806, making a map of his surveys north of the Greenville treaty line, now embracing Stark and Wayne and part of Holmes, all of Ashland and part of Richland Counties. This was the extent of his surveys, which is shown by the map of 1807.

The early settlers made their way hither from their former eastern homes, by tedious process of horse and ox teams, and some even on foot, occupying weeks in their journeys. They were the manufacturers of almost everything they used, including their farming implements, and the fabrics with which they were clothed. Their food, also, as well as their raiment, was the exclusive production of their own farms. There was no importation of goods. Their mode of life, created by their necessities, and their isolations made them a race, (sui generis.) The world will 'ne'er look upon their like again."

How different has it been with those who first settled the States and Territories northwest and west of us; themselves and families, stock of clothing, farming implements, merchandise, and abundant supplies of provisions, embracing even the luxuries of life, conveyed from their eastern homes to within a stone's throw of their place of destination in the far west, by means of the modern facilities which steam employs on natural and artificial channels, performing in a single day a distance which, fifty years since, would have occupied nearly or quite a month to accomplish. These transportations, too, were conducted on a scale of cost corresponding in reduced amount with the difference in time employed. Thus, comparatively, has time and space and expense been equally annihilated by the magical improvements of the utilitarian era which has handed it down since the first white settler commenced his improvements of the soil within our limits. Had anything essential to comfort been forgotten by the pioneer families to the west of us, commerce meets them almost at the doorway of their cabin and supplies the needful commodity. The privations of the pioneer's life as it formerly existed, the accidental adventurer may have heard of or read of, but it is a matter altogether outside of his own experience.

PIONEER LIFE OF THIS COUNTY.

We must confess to a feeling of veneration for the characters of those noble men who penetrated the wilderness, and inaugurated civilization and its train of blessings in a region where savages and wild beasts had maintained undisputed empire.

The scenes through which they passed, are suggestive of rich fields for the genius of the poet and painter; fields that, it is hoped, may be hereafter occupied. Would not that, reader, furnish a night scene for an artist, where our friend, Joseph H. Larwill was reposing in his log cabin, his faithful dog who always stood ready and willing to do his part as a protector, and the fire which always blazed at night a few feet distant from his hammock, his trusty rifle supported by his left arm, the reptiles coiling upon the ground beneath him, the hordes of ravenous wolves, attracted by the venison, the savor of which, during the process of cooking, had impregnated the atmosphere around, stimulating their voracious appetites to a point of uncontrollable fury. Would not this and many kindred scenes described in the history of those times, constitute material worthy the genius of the best painter?

There is much embraced in the personal history of the pioneers that might interest the general reader, if space would permit me to give it more fully. All efforts at adornment of these narratives, however, would only impair their value. They are the most attractive in the simplest form. No County settled at and prior to the date of the portion which now forms the State of Ohio, ever had but one race of pioneers; men who penetrated the wilderness, endured all the hardships incidental to its subjugation, and transmitted to their successors the comforts and conveniences of a high civilization. When this class of men pass off a given spot, they disappear for all time: the County which was first redeemed by them, will know them nor their like no more forever. If the collection of materials for a history of this County had commenced earlier, it might have been made vastly more interesting and instructive, but the grave has closed over most of the men of that generation, and anything like a faithful and correct history, of those times cannot now be produced.

The present generation might derive an instructive moral lesson by contrasting the privations and discomforts which beset the first settlers, with the happy circumstances by which they are surrounded; such contrast should inspire the latter with feelings of gratitude for the blessings which they now enjoy, and should stifle the disposition to complain, which has become almost as chronic with us, as it was with the ancient people who were fed with bread from heaven. In the social customs of our day, it may be doubted whether we have made improvement upon those of our ancestors; in days of yore friends and neighbors could meet together to enjoy themselves, and with hearty good will enter into the spirit of social amusements. The old and young could then spend evening after evening around the fireside with pleasure and profit, there was a geniality of manners, and a corresponding depth of soul, to which modern society is unaccustomed. Our ancestors did not make a special invitation the only pass to their dwellings, and they entertained those who called upon them with a hospitality that has become almost obsolete. Guests did not assemble then to criticise the decorations, furniture, manners, and surroundings of those by whom they were invited; they were sensible people, and visited each other to enjoy themselves and promote the enjoyment of those around them; they had clear heads and warm hearts, they believed in the earnestness of life, and in the power of human sympathies. We may ignore obligations to the pioneer race, and congratulate ourselves that our lot has been cast in a more advanced era of mental and moral culture; we may pride ourselves upon the developments which have been made in science and art, but when we view our standard of elevation as immeasurably in advance of that of our forefathers, we should stop and consider if in all these assumptions we are not as we are in many other things that belong to our generation, "too fast."

The type of the Christianity of that period, will not suffer by a comparison with that of our own day. If the people of the olden times had less for costly apparel and ostentatious display, they had also more for offices of charity and benevolence; if they had not the trappings and splendors of wealth, they had at least no infirmaries, and no paupers—very few lawyers, and very little use for jails. The command to "love thy neighbor as thyself," was then more faithfully observed than now. Has it never occurred to you, reader, that we may be largely indebted to the characteristics of our pioneer fathers, for that vigor and valor which have stimulated their descendants to go forth and fight our Country's battles? The vain and thoughtless may jeer at their unpretending manners, customs and costumes; but in all the elements of true manhood, and true womanhood, it may be safely averred that they were more than the peers of the generation that now occupy their places. That race has left their impressions upon our times in more ways than one. Rude and illiterate, comparatively, they may have been; but they were undoubtedly men of strong minds, in strong bodies, made so by their compulsory self-denial, and their privations and toil.

It was the mission of many of them to aid in the formation of our noble commonwealth, such men as Joseph H. Larwill and John Larwill, his brother, and many others that I could mention, but for the want of space, and wisely and well was that mission performed. Had their descendants been faithful to their teachings, there would have been harmony now, where violence and discord reign throughout our land.

The "pioneer times," have the greenest spot in the memories of those who lived in them—their very privations and sufferings are consecrated things in the memory of the survivors, among whom is Hon. John Larwill, who still lives in the City of Wooster. He has witnessed all the stages of our material development—the gradual redemption of our wilderness condition to our present full estate of national prosperity, and having by years of industry and economy gathered about him all the comforts and luxuries of modern life, is passing serenely the evening of his days, in the place that witnessed the active life of his earliest and matured manhood. With him busy memory must often recur to the scenes of by-gone days, and to the men of pioneer times.

The last two years have been peculiarly destructive of life among the aged. Twenty or more of the pioneers of our County have, within that time, been gathered to their fathers; the last will soon disappear from among us. May the present generation, who should be in the enjoyment of the fruits of the valor and toil of their predecessors, ever nourish a grateful sense of their obligations, and never omit opportunity to offer kindly ministrations to those who survive, and smooth their pathway to the tomb. May no neglect furnish occasion for a future poet to write the last of the pioneers in the spirit of Scott.

FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP

Is in range 13, and part of townships 14 and 15. It was surveyed by Jos. H. Larwill, in 1808, and was organized for civil purposes as it now stands in 1820. This Township is located south of Wooster, and bounded on the north by Wooster Township; east, by East Union and Salt Creek; south, by Holmes Co., and west by Clinton and Wooster. It contains 35 sections and 22,400 acres. It was first settled principally by Pennsylvanians; its population in 1870 was 1,302. Mooreland is the only village in the Township, it was surveyed and laid out in 1828, by Butler and Moore. Its situation is very fine, surrounded by a rich agricultural country. Killbuck runs through the western part of the Township, the valley of which is mostly very fine rich land. The surface of the Township is mostly rolling, a large part of it is underlaid with coal and limestone, and has the great advantage of being the only Township in the County which can and does supply a large extent of country with lime for building purposes. Its chief productions are wheat, corn, oats, clover and timothy. It is also excellent for fruit.

PLAIN TOWNSHIP

This Township was surveyed by Joseph H. Larwill, D. S. U. S. in 1807; the same year the survey was duly platted and certified to Jared Mansfield, surveyor-general of the United States. As with other Townships in the County, so with Plain at the time of the survey, there was not a white family within its border.

Plain was detached from Wooster Township, and organized in 1815. This Township was settled principally by Pennsylvanians. It is noted for its extensive prairie lands. Its soil is good, and yields the chief productions, wheat, oats, corn, rye and barley in abundance. It is well watered by fine springs in various parts of the Township, the improvements are good throughout. It has the finest school houses of any Township in the County.

PAINT TOWNSHIP

Is located in the south-east corner of the County. This Township is in range 11, Township 15, being a fractional Township, and contains 24 sections. It was organized as a Township for civil purposes in 1816. It was settled by Pennsylvanians, Germans and French; they are very industrious people, their improvements are good. The surface of the Township is rolling and hilly; coal underlies most of the Township. The soil is good; wheat, oats, corn and potatoes are raised in abundance, wheat being the chief production.

MOUNT EATON

Is located in section 15, on the dividing ridge that passes through the Township. This ridge runs south-east and north west. It will be observed on the map, by the different courses of the streams. The Wooster and Mount Eaton road runs on the ridge through the Township.

Mount Eaton was laid out in May, 1814, by Galbraith and Vaughan. It is on a very high elevation. It is a very neat village, its population in 1870, was 296, and that of the Township, 1,418.

WEST LEBANON

Was laid out in 1832.

SUGAR CREEK TOWNSHIP

This Township was surveyed by Joseph H. Larwill in 1807. It is in range 11, Township 16. It was organized April 11, 1812, as it now is. It contains 36 Sections.

This Township is located in the eastern part of the County, is well watered by fine Springs. The land is generally rolling and very fertile. Its first settlers were principally Germans and Pennsylvanians and a few French. Their farms are well cultivated and improvements very good, affording evidence of their rapid advancement in wealth and prosperity. The farmers of this Township deserve praise for their substantial improvements. The central and eastern parts are more broken than the west. The soil is a sandy loam; it is a rich agricultural Township, and produces as much wheat as the most of Townships in the County. The principal agricultural productions are wheat, corn, oats, potatoes, barley, grass and some flax and clover seed.

DALTON

Is located in the northern part of the Township. It is a very neat village, its population in 1870, was 412. There are three dry goods stores, two drug stores, one merchant tailor, three grocers, one harness shop, one tin store, one cabinet shop, Dalton Pottery Works, three churches, one school, one carriage manufactory, which is carried on extensively, and a fine steam, grist and saw mill owned by R. Sellers. There are great coal fields in all parts of the Township, adding greatly to its wealth.

BAUGHMAN TOWNSHIP

This Township is situated in the eastern part of the County, in range 11, Township 16. It was surveyed by J. H. Larwill in 1808, and organized as it now is in March 1816; it was first settled by Pennsylvanians and Germans. The southern part of this Township is low and swampy, as may be observed on the map. The northern part is somewhat rolling, the soil is generally fertile. Newnan's Creek passes through the south part of the Township, the valley of which was originally marshy, but the owners of these marshy lands are rapidly cutting ditches through them, and in a very few years, they will no doubt be valued as among the best lands of the Township. There are but few Springs in the Township.

ORRVILLE

Was laid out in 1852, by Judge Orr. It is located at the crossing of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago, and the Columbus, Mount Vernon and Cleveland Railroads. This town is improving rapidly. It is now the second in population in the County. The general improvements are very fine. Manufactories of various kinds have been established, and still more are in course of construction. Coal is in abundance close to the town, which bids fair to be the largest manufacturing town in Wayne County. Its population is said to be about 1,900. The improvements of this year will perhaps be equal to those of the two previous years. Its location and railroad facilities seem to justify its citizens in their sanguine expectations of great increase of wealth and population, in the near future.

GREENE TOWNSHIP

This is Township 17, of range 12. It was surveyed by Jos. H. Larwill in 1808, and organized for civil purposes in 1817.

It is among the most highly cultivated and best improved Townships, in the County. The surface of the land is rolling, and really beautiful. It returns for taxation, more property than any other Township in the County.

The first settlement was commenced as early as 1804 or 5, and was made by Pennsylvanians.

There are in the Township, two towns, Smithville and part of Orrville. Smithville in the western, and Orrville in the south-eastern. Smithville is surrounded by a rich and fine country, and carries on a large trade. More butter and eggs are bought here, than in any other village in the County—the Township is noted for its good butter. There is here also an extensive manufactory of buggies and wagons. Smithville High School has quite a fine reputation, is under the management of competent teachers, and has many students from other parts of the County. The Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad passes through the Township.

SALT CREEK TOWNSHIP

This is a fractional Township, in range 12, Township 15. It contains 24 Sections. This Township was surveyed by Joseph H. Larwill in 1810, and was organized as a Township, as it now is, in 1816. Jacob Frederick and P. Appleman were among the first settlers of this Township.

FREDERICKSBURG

Was laid out by Jacob Frederick; it was surveyed in 1824; it is located in the fork forest by the north and east branches of Salt Creek. It is a very handsome village, with a population of 658, and a place of a large amount of business. It is located on the Cleveland, Mt. Vernon and Columbus Railroad. It is noted for its fine mill privileges; here is one of the finest mills in the County, now owned by Vananda & Hixon. One-half mile south of the town is another large grist and saw mill on the same stream. This town is principally rolling and well watered by the finest Springs; many of these Springs are shown on the map. The soil is rich and produces fine crops of grain and all kinds of fruit. Coal is found in various parts. Its first settlers were Pennsylvanians, French and Germans.

EAST UNION TOWNSHIP

This Township is in range 12, and Township 16. It was surveyed by J. H. Larwill in 1806. At this early period, emigrants began to settle in various parts of the Township. The first settlers were almost exclusively from Pennsylvania. Most of the soil of this Township is of the very best quality, producing wheat, corn, oats and other crops in great abundance.

CHESTER TOWNSHIP

This is Township 20 of range 14; it was surveyed by J. Cox in 1807, and organized for legal purposes in 1816; at that time there were but 20 voters in the Township, being barely the number required by law for the purpose of organization. The soil of this Township is generally quite productive of the great staples, wheat, corn, oats, &c. Killbuck passes along its eastern border, causing some rugged breaks; the same is true of the south-eastern part caused by the valley of Little Killbuck. Cedar Valley, in the north-east, causes also some broken land, the remainder is slightly undulating and fine farm land. A chestnut ridge, running north and south, on the heights west of Big Killbuck, is good for producing apples, peaches, &c., when these crops fail in other parts of the County. This Township has also 42 Sections, 9 being added to it from Perry, at the formation of Ashland County. Lattasburg or West Union, a little village with a Post Office and considerable trade, is in this Township; there is also a small village and Post Office in Cedar Valley called Cedarville.

CANAAN TOWNSHIP.

This is Township 17, of range 18; it was detached from Wooster and organized as it now is, May 8, 1819.

There is perhaps more level surface in this Township than any other in the County. The north part, however, is rolling, with a warm sandy soil, producing fine crops of wheat, corn, &c., much of the east and southern part is better suited for grazing.

There are four villages in the Township, viz: Canaan Center or Windsor, Jackson, Pike Station and Bridgeport; the two latter are on the Atlantic and Great Western R. R. which passes along the north side of this Township, affording a good grain market for miles around. A large proportion of the citizens of this Township are emigrants from New England and New York, or their immediate descendants; of the rest, most are Pennsylvanians and a few Germans.

MILTON TOWNSHIP.

This Township is in range 12, Township 18. It was surveyed by J. H. Larwill in 1807, and organized as a Township October 6, 1818. The first settlement commenced about 1808 or 9.

Chippewa Creek passes through the Township from north-west to south-east; some parts of the valley of which are liable to overflow, but the soil is of the richest, and produces corn and hay in great abundance. The remainder of the Township is rolling, soil good, producing fine crops of wheat, corn, oats, &c. The north-western part of the Township was originally settled largely by emigrants from New York and New England; the other parts by Pennsylvanians, French and Germans. The Atlantic and Great Western Railroad passes through this Township, affording it every advantage of market.

APPLE CREEK STATION.

On the Cleveland, Mount Vernon and Columbus Railroad, is a thriving village, a large amount of the Farmers products finds a market here. The Township is well watered with fine Springs and many streams. The taxes in 1818 were $61 90;

it was obtained by Andrew Milbourn from the tax duplicate of that year. Josiah Milbourn being one of the early settlers of this Township, he moved in the spring of 1816; the first Justice of the Peace that was elected in the fall of 1816, and lived on section 12, on the farm now owned by David Carr; at this period there was no school house. The first school house was built on the state road, running from Wooster to Massillon, in Section 11, on the farm now owned by S. Swinehart.

A brief description is given of Jonathan Chapman, but more usually known as Johnny Appleseed, by Mr. Milbourn and his son, Andrew. Few were more widely known, or more extensively useful to the pioneers, than this blameless and benevolent man. The evil that he did, if any, appeared not to have been known; the good that he accomplished was not interred with his bones, "but lived after him," and bears its annual fruits over a surface of over one hundred thousand square miles; it extends from the Ohio River to the northern chain of Lakes. But few men have been more useful to their race in their day and generation. Many of our best orchards now in Wayne County, are trees which had their first growth in his forest-environed nurseries; he had one on the farm where David Carr now lives; he cleared off one-half acre of land and planted it in apple seeds, in 1802. He planted various nurseries throughout the western country.

In 1800, he came into the Territory with a horse load of apple seeds, gathered from presses in western Pennsylvania. The seed were contained in leather bags, which were better suited to his journey than linen sacks, and besides linen could not be spared for such a purpose.

CONGRESS TOWNSHIP.

This is Township 21, of range 14. It was organized for civil purposes, October 5, 1818. When Ashland County was made in 1848, one row of Townships on the east side of Jackson Township—called the Miles Trip—was retained in Wayne County, and attached to Congress, since then it has contained 42 sections. In 1864 the Township was divided into two election precincts; the voting place of the western one at West Salem, the eastern at Congress.

The surface of the Township is generally rolling, the soil in some parts clay, but generally rich and productive. There are two thriving villages in the Township, West Salem and Congress. West Salem was laid out by Peter and John Rickel, June 14, 1834; since then the Atlantic and Great Western Railroad has been built, passing the town. This has given a great impetus to the place, which promises within a few years to be a town of very considerable business, it has already an extensive trade, Myers & Hewett, being at present the most extensive dealers in grain, wool, &c. It has three churches, three dry goods stores, two hardware stores, two drug stores, four groceries, four millinery and fancy stores, two jewelry stores, one bank, two hotels, one cabinet company, one foundry, one planing mill, one warehouse, one flax mill, one grist mill, one saw mill and one tannery. It has a population of about 1000.

Congress, first called Waynesburg, was laid out at an earlier day, and is a fine thriving village, with dry goods store, groceries, tannery, &c. Not having the advantages of a railroad, its improvement is not so rapid as that of its rival, West Salem.

WAYNE TOWNSHIP.

This is Township 16, of range 18, and was surveyed by Joseph H. Larwill in 1807. It was organized as it now stands, October 3d, 1816. It contains 36 sections of land.

It is one of the best improved, and second in wealth in the County, the soil is a rich loam, the surface slightly undulating. It produces immense crops of wheat, corn and oats, the great staples of this region. It was first settled principally by Pennsylvanians; it lies adjoining Wooster on the north, consequently near a good market. Farms in this Township being good land, and highly improved, sell at high prices. There are two villages in Wayne Township, Madisonburg, a fine thriving little village, on what was once the turnpike road from Wooster to Cleveland; it has a post office, two grocery stores, wagon shop, blacksmith shop, &c.; the other is Mechanicsburg, in the west part of the Township, on the road from Wooster to Congress, it has a post office, grocery and wagon maker's shop.

WOOSTER TOWNSHIP.

This Township was surveyed by Jos. H. Larwill in 1806. It was organized for civil purposes by the County Commissioners, April 11, 1812. Among the first settlers in this Township and the County, were Jos. H. Larwill, Benjamin Miller, William and John Larwill, and a few others, but space will not permit their mention. The surface of the Township is rolling, the land is fertile, and in a good state of cultivation, with many very finely improved farms.

Wooster, the County seat is in this Township, and was laid out in the fall of 1808, by John Beaver, William Henry and Jos. H. Larwill. The court house stands on a site 337 feet above the level of Lake Erie.

A more detailed account of this town and Township, is given in my historical sketch of the County.

CHIPPEWA TOWNSHIP.

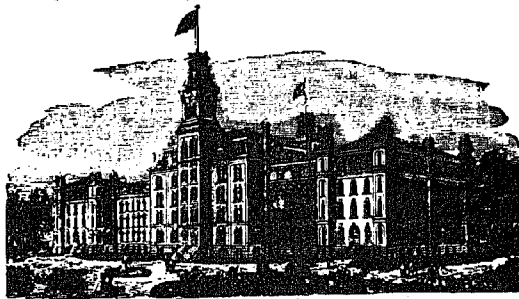

Is located in range 11, Township 18. This Township was organized as it now stands, September 4th, 1815. Its surface is rolling, and in some parts broken. This Township produces annually over 4,000,000 bushels of coal. The coal beds are fine. The above quantity is taken from four banks which are located 14 mile south of Doylestown. Its soil is good, and abundance of all kinds of grain is raised. The farms of the Township are in a very good state of cultivation.

DOYLESTOWN.

Is located on a very beautiful site, its elevation above Lake Erie is 450 feet. It was laid out by Wm. Doyle in 1827; it is a manufacturing town, and embraces within the neighborhood the requisite facilities for making it the seat of various manufactures. Minerals and coal are found in abundance. There is here a large manufacturing establishment of reapers and mowers, one of the largest in the County; it turns out between 800 and 1200 reapers and mowers annually, which have a reputation for the beauty and durability of their workmanship, and the satisfactory manner in which they perform their work in the harvest field, excelled by none. An engraving of this extensive establishment, will be found in another part of this work.

Religion and Education.

These two great civilizers have made rapid strides, co-extensive with the surface and growth of the country.

UNIVERSITY OF WOOSTER.

ORGANIZED DEC. 18, 1864. DEDICATED SEPT. 7, 1870. They have planted at the city of Wooster one of the finest college buildings in the United States—Harvard and Yale have nothing that can be compared with it. The architectural design, the furniture, and the completeness of all its arrangements, even to the minutest details, excite the admiration of all, and we are also free to say that no other college in this country has such a splendid outlook. It stands in the midst of twenty acres of elevated ground, and is surrounded, in the distance, by a magnificent panorama of hills. Every thing has been provided to make the student comfortable, and elevate his taste. But commensurate with the needs of its inhabitants, churches and school houses, those lights of life so common throughout the realms of freedom, deck hill, valley, grove, and town. Common schools have not reached that state of perfection which the liberal and beneficent system by which the exist inculcates.

The religious societies most noted in point of numbers and influence, are the Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Congregational, German Reformed and Christian Disciples. All are lending a power to influence the morals and piety of our community.

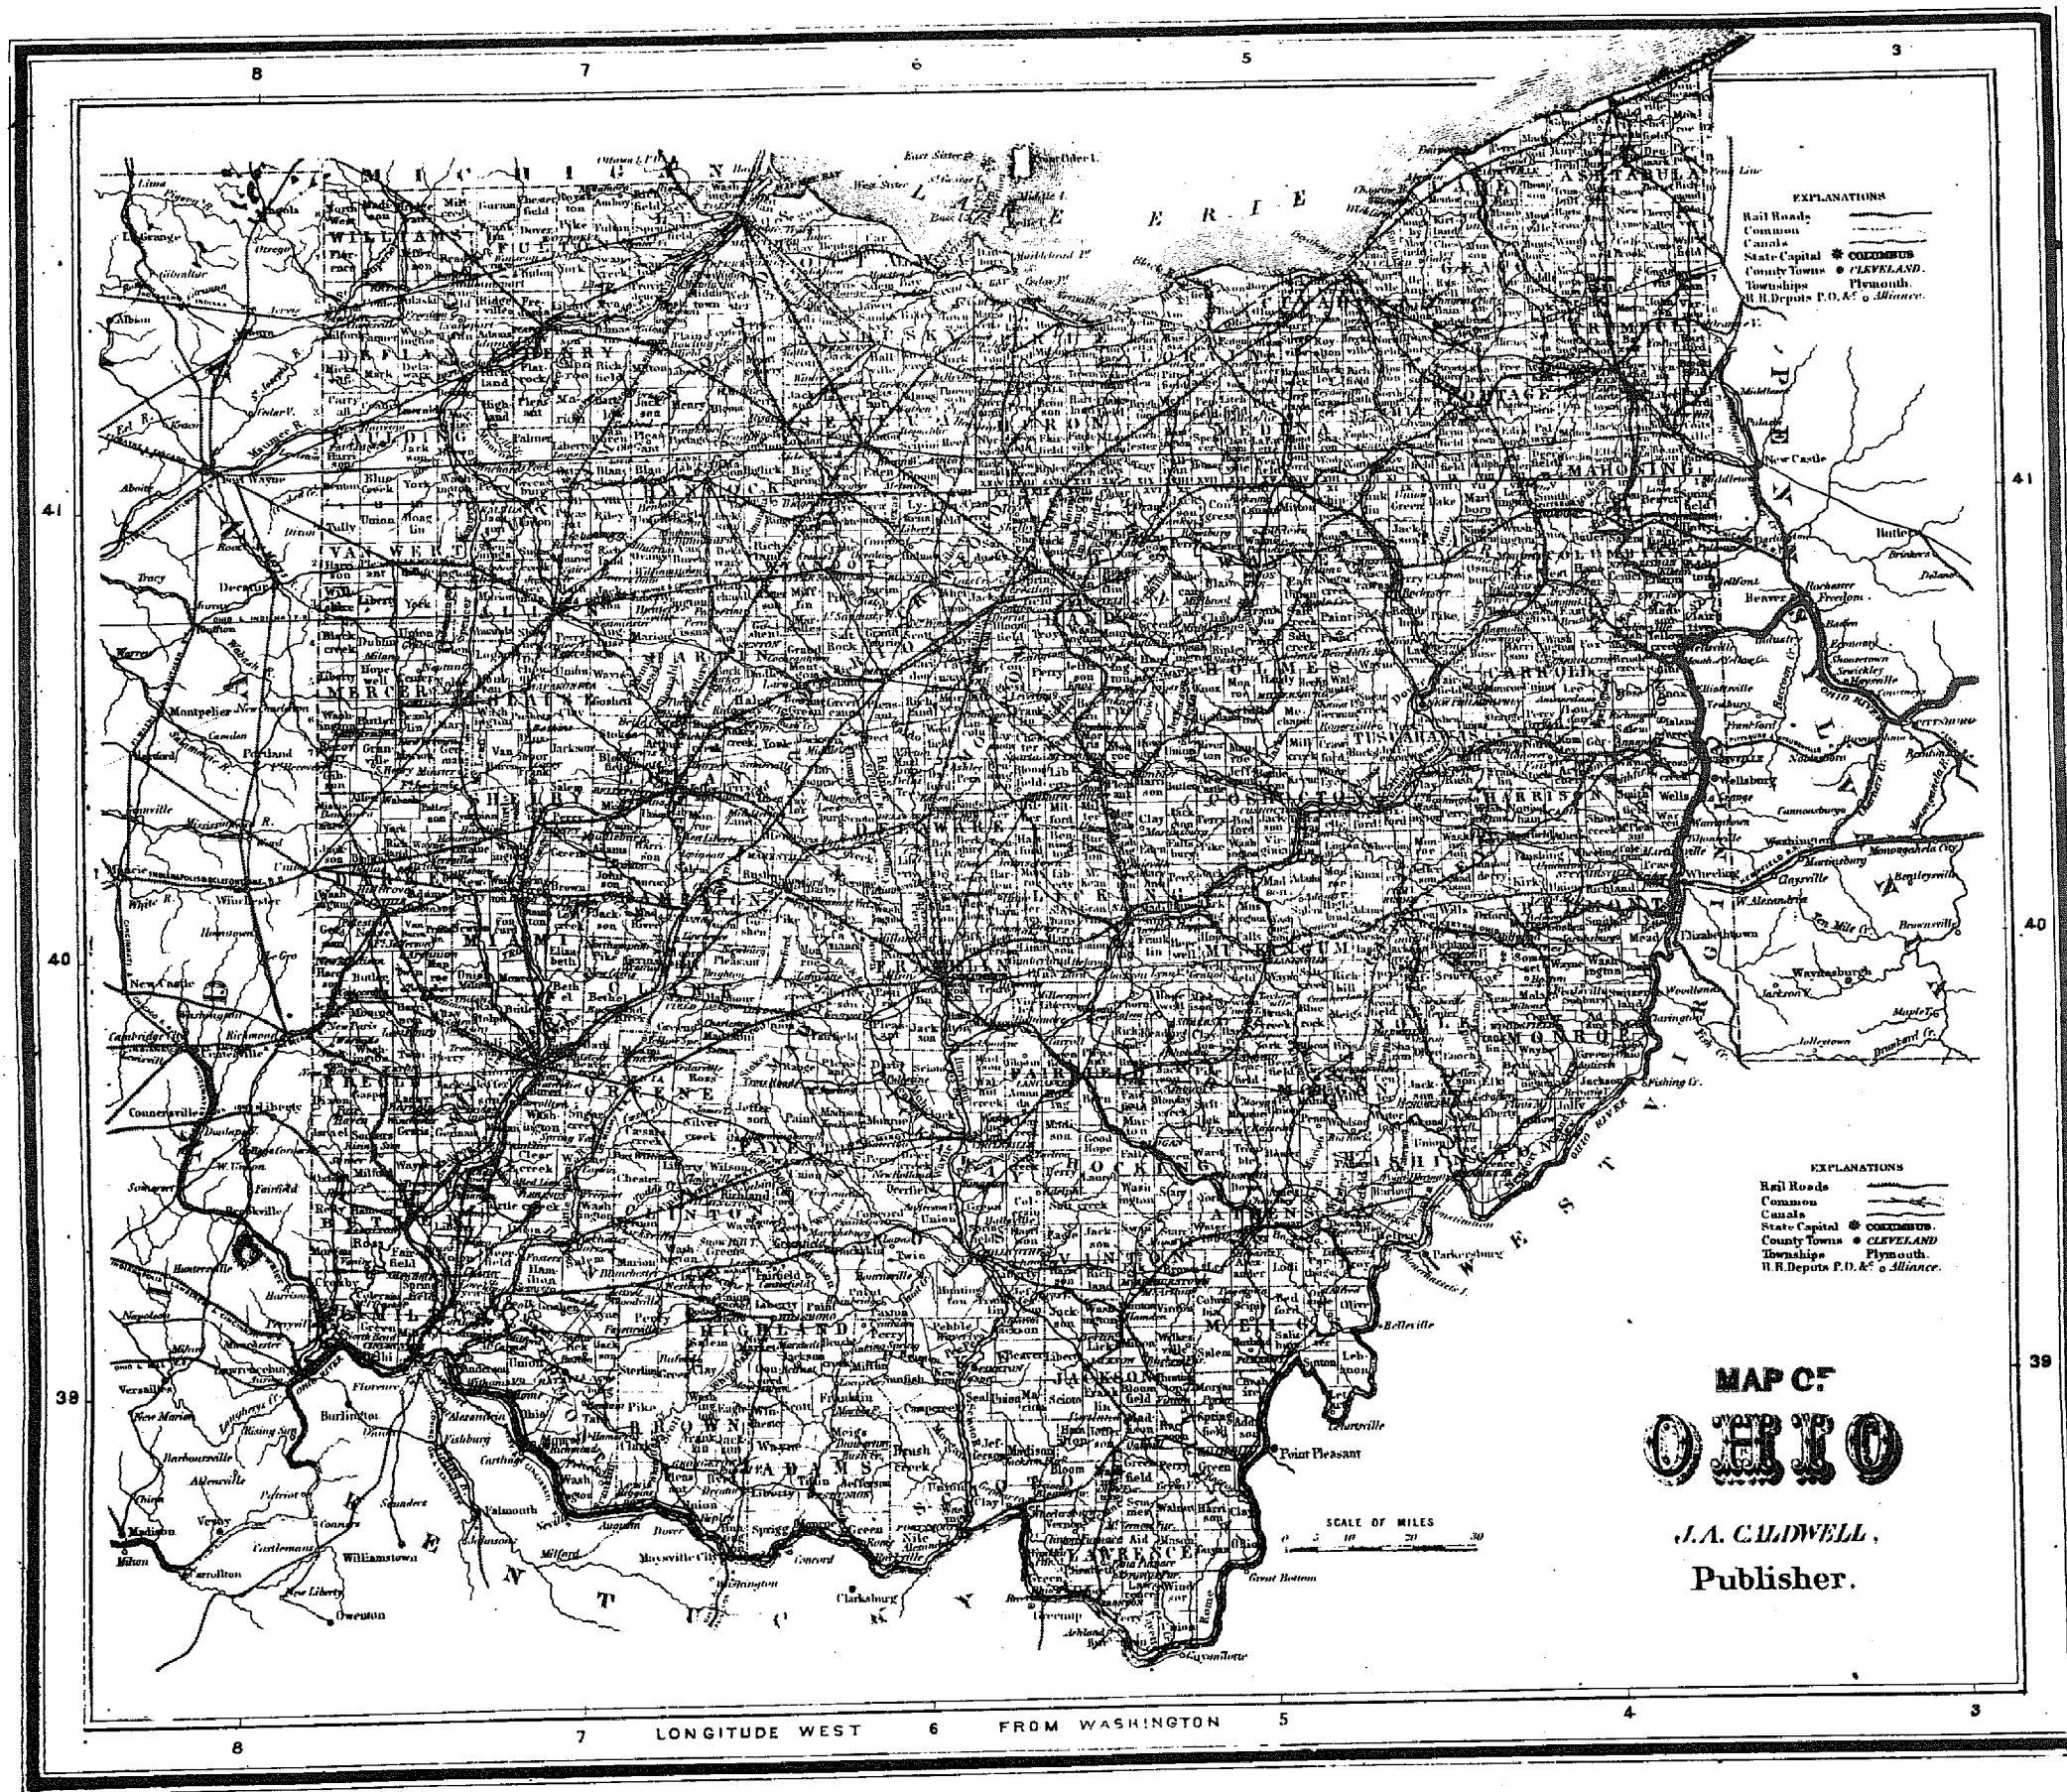

The Infirmary of Wayne County.

We cannot help noticing this well-conducted institution, which speaks well for the County to which it belongs. Due credit is given the superintendent and matron, Mr. A. R. and S. A. Sweeney, for their care, kindness, intelligence, and experience in the management of this institution. It was through the building, and find that cleanliness, order, system and classification prevails throughout. Six Classes at separate tables. The inmates are classified also, and have separate dining rooms. The strong rooms provided for the restraint of the violent, are admirable—this department is tidy throughout. The greatest care is taken with the children to keep them clean and neat, and thus render them tidy in appearance, and great pains are taken to secure suitable places for them. Great praise should be given to the Matron and Directors, for it is decidedly one of the finest conducted infirmaries in the state. Wayne County is under obligations to Charles Goroche, Esq., Joseph Hoehler, and Adam Eymann, who have devoted themselves so earnestly to the infirmary as directors.

In the year 1861, PETER CLINE, JOHN F. SEIBERLING and JOHN H. HOWER commenced business under the firm name of CLINE, SEIBERLING & HOWER, to build the EXCELSIOR REAPER AND MOWER, then an entirely unknown machine, and invented by John F. Seiberling, a young farmer of Norton Township, Summit County, Ohio, who is the inventor of the celebrated "DROPPER," which is original with the Excelsior, and has become so renowned that no one familiar with Reaping and Mowing Machines but what has heard of Seiberling's Self-Raking or Dropping Reaper and Mower.

The first year (1861) there were built but twenty-five machines; the second year, (1862,) one hundred and twenty-five machines; the third year, (1863,) three hundred and thirty; since then the demand has increased yearly, so that manufacturers have been unable to fill the orders; there being built each year by the different manufacturers of the Excelsior, from eight to ten thousand machines; the firm at Doylestown each year building from five to eight hundred machines.

In the year 1865, J. F. SEIBERLING and J. H. HOWER removed to Akron, Ohio, for the purpose of organizing another firm for the manufacture of Excelsior Reapers and Mowers, when J. H. SEIBERLING, J. J. HOWER and S. H. MILLER purchased half interest of each of the former partners, making one-sixth interest to each, and, since September 1st, 1865, have been doing an increased business, under the firm name of CLINE, SEIBERLING & CO. The past year they built six hundred machines, and, in the limited territory in which they were sold, at least half as many more could have been sold, had the machines been built and furnished in time for harvesting. This is one of the most extensive machine shops in the County of Wayne for the manufacture of Reapers and Mowers.

CLINE, SEIBERLING & CO., DOYLESTOWN, OHIO.

Senior Reaper as a Dropper, Cutting Lodged Grain. Width of cut 8 feet. Cutting Sections 3 1/2 inches. Diameter of Drive Wheels 36 inches.

We build three sizes of Machine, viz.

Senior, Medium,
Junior.

Each size of Machine is sold as a Mower only, or as a Mower and Dropper. To the Junior and Medium Machines is also attached the Self-Rake, so that they can be used as a Mower, as a Dropper, or as a Self-Rake, or all combined.

Seiberling's Improved Self-Rake cutting Down and Tangled Grain. Width of cut 5 feet 6 inches. Cutting Sections 3 1/2 inches. Diameter of Drive Wheels 31 inches on Junior, 34 on Medium.

FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP

(Franklin Township includes parts of two townships, 14 and 15, and has some duplicated Section numbers. Township 14 has sections #1-24, and Township 15 has Sections 22-28 and 32-34. In the atlas Sections 22-24 are incorrectly numbered as 32-34. Sections in Township 15 are marked with an asterisk(*).)
