HISTORY OF DELAWARE COUNTY, OHIO.

A wilderness reclaimed—a beautiful home made—it cannot be other than interesting to learn the past and present of Delaware County. The article will find food, but the citizen will see in these pages matters of interest and occasions of pride in the deeds of ancestors and the energy and patriotism of the present generation.

From across the ocean the colonists of a new and powerful people came, and effected a lodgment at isolated points upon the Atlantic coast. They achieved, in time, their independence, but could not pay their veteran soldiers in money, and a bankrupt but grateful Congress donated of its western domain a generous grant of territorial lands.

To the West came the discharged soldier, to engage in a twofold contest with the forest and the savage, and, reclaiming the fertile valleys, make a beautiful and valuable home for himself and children.

Time was when countless herds of wild animals made broad thoroughfares to slake their thirst in the cool waters of Delaware's mineral springs. Hither came the Delaware from the East, and found an Indian's paradise. Dense forests covered the surface, fine streams traversed the valleys, and noble game abounded everywhere.

Time is when a thriving and populous city, growing towns, and well-tilled farms announce the energy and perseverance of an enlightened and Christian population.

Slowly and laboriously the early settler traversed the wild woods, ascended the Olenango, and built his first cabin in the heart of a wilderness. Another and another came, some with families, some alone, to make a temporary home. Improvements came in shape of trees cut down and cabins built. Necessity compelled a change of customs, and inaugurated frontier and pioneer life.

To-day all this is changed, and the foreigner would look in vain in Delaware for evidences of the semi-savage life of seventy years ago. Some few old pioneers yet linger with us; around the old familiar hearth they love to tell of bygone days; but speedily they, too, will pass away, and with them early history.

This laborer undertakes to hear and write their recollections, mark the planting and growth of towns, note past and present industries, and present a statistical account of Delaware for 1874 in the all-important branches of agriculture, education, religion, and manufactures. While our work is mainly original, our aim has been the compilation of interesting and reliable information. We write of pleasant homes adorned with works of art, of noble institutions of learning gathering the youth of this and other States, of health-inspiring springs, and of an enterprising, intelligent people.

CLEARING A WILDERNESS.

The pioneer of to-day, speeding to the rich prairies of the Far West in the easy rail-car, turning the sod with the steel plow, and building his cabin from lumber brought near by payment, or located on land of the Government, which requires only that he shall live upon it to be his, knows nothing of the obstacles which were met and overcome by the early settler of a wooded country in the beginning of the present century.

On foot and on horseback, the searcher for a home traversed the Indian trail or trod a pathless stream or running brook. The axe was pitted, and trees came crashing down. A cabin of poles was built, and chinked and plastered; doorways were sawed, log steps made, the back of a chimney raised, and a funnel of sticks and clay built up, and this was the pioneer's home.

The settler sat alone in this rude home in the far forest, and, listening to savage sounds, reflecting on his home and family, it is no wonder if the heart would sink at the prospect. The morning saw work resumed; the trees fell one by one, while some were decaying; and then the journey back for the family. In the spring-time a wife and children made the journey, and, arriving at the little clearing, entered the cabin, only twenty-four by eighteen, and began the life of the pioneer.

Avery Powers came out to Delaware, then a part of Franklin County, during the year 1800, and made a choice of lands. He returned to his home in Chenango County, New York, and passed the winter. The first white settlement within the bounds of Delaware County was made by Captain Nathan Carpenter. He was accompanied by his family, and located in Liberty Township, five miles below the city of Delaware. He is credited with having arrived May 1, 1801, and as being the builder of the first cabin in the County. It stood near the present handsome residence of Hiram Carpenter. Avery Powers, Jr., and family came out in the fall of 1801, and located near Carpenter. The settlement was augmented in April, 1802, by the arrival of Josiah McKinnay and Thomas Celler, from Franklin County, Pennsylvania. These settled about two miles south of the improvements of Carpenter and Powers.

A clearing was made in Radnor Township, in the fall of 1803, by Henry Perry, a native of Wales. He had brought with him his two boys, nine and eleven years of age respectively, and, having put up a cabin a short distance south of Delhi, returned to Philadelphia, Pa., for the rest of the family, leaving the children at their lone cabin in the wilderness. Sickness of Mrs. Perry, and then of himself, prevented a return till June of 1804. The hardship of the boys, Levi and Reuben, in remaining in their lonely cabin, fifteen miles from a white settlement, and surrounded by Indians, merits a record in history. They were unused to the forest; they had no gun; and for eight months they worked on the clearing, and, when hungry, had no resource but the remains of a deer killed by wolves, rabbits caught in hollow logs, and corn-meal obtained of Thomas Celler by following down the Indian trail to the Carpenter settlement. Their cabin was open, and had no damming nor fire-place, yet they held their ground till the arrival of their parents; and the reader can imagine the joy of the children and the pride of the father and mother in this reunion in the woods of Delaware County.

LATER SETTLERS.

The migratory and imitative feeling in people leads them to follow the pioneer; and, a nucleus being formed, we find that, in the spring of 1804, the brothers Aaron, John, and Ebenezer Welch, with Captain Leonard Monroe, came out from Chenango, New York, as settled in Carpenter's neighborhood. In the fall of 1804, Colonel Moses Byxle, accompanied by a number of persons influenced by his advice and example, migrated from Berkshire, Mass., to Alum Creek, east of Delaware, and, settling there, the colony gave the township the name of Berkshire, in honor of their former home. Soon after, a settlement was made at Norton, Marlborough Township, by William Drake and Nathaniel Wyatt. The Lewis settlement was made in 1805, in Berlin, by the three brothers David, Isaac, and Chester Lewis. They were joined in 1807 by Philip Hoadley and Asa Scott, with their families. In 1809 this settlement was further increased by the arrival from Connecticut of Roswell Gaulkins, John Lewis, Samuel Adams, and Jonathan Thomson and their families.

During the year 1805, John Johnson and Joseph Eaton, Sr., father of the late James Eaton, with their families, made a settlement on the Byxle purchase. On the 29th of September, 1806, was born in Delaware County. His name is Joseph C. Lewis, a native of the "Tannee" colony of Berlin. He became a minister of the Baptist persuasion at his maturity, and removed to Washington, District of Columbia. The first birth, as given above, is contested by Jeremiah Gillies, of Liberty Township, whose birth occurred on August 7, 1803. The first death and burial in the County was that of one of the Welch brothers. The first mill in the County was erected in 1804, by Captain Carpenter. The wooden factory of James Hinkle now stands upon its site. Like the generality of early mills, it was a combination of saw- and grist-mill. The stones used were of the kind termed nigger-heads. Although a primitive affair, it was of great advantage to the settlers, who resorted thither from considerable distances.

THE FIRST WHITE CHILD

THE ANCIENTS.

Centuries have passed, and mounted generations of an unknown race have arisen, lived, and departed. They have perished and left no descendants. Their existence is proved by the

ORIGINAL LANDS.

The Indian title to the soil of the Northwest Territory having been extinguished, the United States became proprietor to a vast domain.

Ohio being admitted as an independent State, it was stipulated that all lands not then granted or sold should belong to the nation. Various grants were subsequently made to individuals, companies, and bodies politic. The lands of Delaware County lying west of the Scioto River were known as Virginia Military, and were surveyed by Nathaniel Masie, an expert workman, energetic and active, liberal and kind. These lands were guaranteed by Congress to Virginia, as an offset to the claims relinquished by that State to Northern lands. Virginia appropriated these lands to payment of her troops who served, during the Revolution, in the Continental army. Considering the fact that each person could locate as he desired, the Delaware portion is quite regular in survey, and free from irregularities and litigious of the great body.

The northeast quarter of Brown Township was known as part of the Salt Sections, of which there were forty-two and a quarter. These sections were authorized to be sold, and the proceeds applied to military purposes, by Act of Congress of December 22, 1791.

The main body of lands in Delaware were known as United States Military. The tract of which this is a part was set apart by Act of Congress, June 1, 1796, to satisfy claims of officers and men of the Continental army. The survey was made into townships five miles square. These townships were originally surveyed into quarter townships, or fourths-and-acre tracts. Several purchases were made of quarter townships, by individuals alone, and by several uniting to buy and then subdividing to suit themselves. A specified time having expired, unsold quarter townships were divided into sections, each one mile square, and sold to purchasers by officers of the Government. The early price of land was two dollars per acre, one-fourth down and the remainder in three annual payments.

In July, 1820, the lands unsold were divided into one-eighth sections or eighty-acre tracts, and the price reduced to one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, cash payment. The highest land-owner in the County, and for years its most prominent man, was Moses Byxle, Sr.; he purchased about eight thousand acres of good land in Berlin and Berkshire, and, in company with Judge Baldwin, had many thousands of acres of military lands. By one source, he is said to have sold these lands to settlers at prices varying from two dollars and fifty cents to ten dollars per acre; by another, as low as twenty-five to fifty cents per acre. All reports unite in describing Byxle as a liberal, progressive man,—invaluable to the opening up of new territory to civilization. Joseph Constant was an original purchaser of four thousand acres in Berlin Township, at two dollars per acre, and Thomas Celler was a third owner of a quarter township, in Liberty Township; there were probably others who became heavy owners of lands in early days.

THE ROLL OF EARLY PIONEERS.

Looking back upon the period when Delaware was a portion of a vast wilderness, possessed by a fierce and resentful race, ignorant of civilization, and accustomed only to war and hunting, we recall the acts of the pioneers, imagine their dangers and difficulties, and admire the courage and perseverance when fruits are displayed in growth of population and steadily enhancing wealth of the County. The first settlers of Delaware were men of intellect and general information, enterprise and business capacity.

Of these, we mention, for old Berkshire, David Gregory, Elijah Carney, Stephen Bennett, Joseph Patrick, Clark Daniel, Joseph Keene, Festus Sprague, Diadatus Keeler, and William Budd.

On Alum Creek, at an early date, there was a settlement of the Lewises, Hoadleys, Jaynes, Nettletons, and Eatons. These families have sent out children who have stood high in institutions of learning. In Liberty Township, the names of Celler, Gillis, McKinnie, Carpenter, Case, and Powers are associated with much of early interest.

North of Delaware, and settled in the vicinity of the Whetstone Forks, dwelt Jacob Faust, one of the genuine pioneers of the old time. In the same locality lived the families of the old time. In the same locality lived the families of the old time. In the same locality lived the families of the old time.

West of Delaware lay the pioneer settlement of Radnor, on the Scioto. The first settler was David Pugh, from Wales, in 1801. After him came the families of John Phillips, Robert Perry, Thomas Morton, and Mr. Watkins. A few years elapsed, and other families had settled in Radnor; of these, were those of Colonel Dunlap, the McKinnies, Wollegs, Coxes, and Adams. The great body of the people are Cambrians, as is shown by the names of Peabody, Edwards, Jones, Griffiths, Humphreys, James, Davis, Lloyd, Owen, Powell, Williams, Morgan, Thomas, Evans, Rice, Reese, Price, and Lawrence. Among the pioneers of the city of Delaware whose names deserve a record in the roll of early settlers may be named Moses Byxle, Sr., Solomon Smith, Azariah Root, Thomas Buites, Dr. R. Lamb, Dr. S. Spaulding, William and Nathaniel Settle, Ezra Carpenter, and George Storm.

Many deserving and honored names are not here given, from inability to obtain them, and their omission is no slight to their memory. On July 4, 1870, was held a gathering of pioneer settlers. Three hundred persons responded to an invitation, and met in Delaware. Judge Powell prepared a welcoming address. The oldest pioneer present was E. Adams, of Radnor, and the tallest, John Roberts, of Genoa.

INCIDENTS OF THE BORDER.

The Delawares and other tribes sent war-parties into Pennsylvania, to depredate, destroy, and to take prisoners. One party was followed by a band of rescuers. They separated, and the Delawares came to their river camps. This party had a young white girl in captivity, and was traced by the pursuing party, among whom were two brothers of the prisoners, through Bowtown, through the villages, all of which were deserted. The light of a fire glimmering to the north directed their steps to an assembly of the Indians engaged in a war-dance. The maiden was seen fastened to a stake near a fire. It was early evening, and instant assault was ordered. A volley from the whites killed one savage, wounded others, and put the rest to instant flight. The girl was released, and the party returned homeward in triumph. The spot, which is of interest for this rescue, is known as the Crystal Spring Farm, on Clear Run, Troy Township.

DELAWARE COUNTY COURT HOUSE.

ancient mounds, banks, and fortifications profusely scattered throughout the Ohio Valley. Varying in size, regular in shape, these works indicate geometric knowledge and religious practices on the part of their builders. The remains of several of these antique monuments of a lost people are found in the County. The most noticeable fortification is situated on the east bank of the Olenango, about eleven miles south of Delaware, in the lower part of Liberty Township.

INDIANS AND INDIAN TOWNS.

The early settlers found the Indians in full possession of the soil. Roaming about in pursuit of game or on the war-path, they found the best lands, and there established their villages. Of various tribes, the Delawares were the most numerous, and from them the County took its name. The site of the city of Delaware was occupied by two Indian villages, and about these villages a large field was tilled. The mode of cultivation, though primitive, was sufficient to insure a good yield of their only grain—Indian corn or maize.

One of the villages lay at the east end of William Street, and near the site of the old cemetery, the other on Delaware Run, at the west end of the same street. A camp was established at "Bowtown," east of Delaware, on the south Eden Road, and near the Collins farm.

The Wyandots, once a powerful tribe, and finally reduced to a small band, were occupants of the soil of this County prior to the war of 1812. This tribe were hostile to the United States, and bitterly fought the white people, after their union with others, during the frontier war. They preserved the character given of the savage,—"uncompromising friends, implacable foes," and, yielding to their destiny, have passed away.

Senecas were known to have lived in this County. A chief of this tribe, named Stiff Knee, joined Wayne's army to avenge the death of his friend General Richard Butler. Prevented by delays from discharging what to him was a solemn duty, he proved his fidelity by killing himself.

Shawnees encamped in Delaware County at times, and tradition says that on one occasion they surprised a camp of the Delawares in their security on the Olenango River, and after a sharp contest defeated them. The Mingoes had a village and corn-fields on Here-Shoe Bottom. The tribe is immortalized by the eloquence of Logan, one of their early chiefs. A portion of Delaware County is denominated "Taw-Way," from an Indian tribe of that name who were residents of that section. This portion is now known as Porter and Trenton Townships. The Indian has ceased to be known for years, and a band of plain Indians, en route to the Capitol, are objects of curiosity.

MRS. BYXBE AND HER EVENING VISITORS.

Indians were fond of whisky and tobacco. It was illegal to sell them the former; still, occasions demanded a disregard of this requirement. One evening, at a late hour, an Indian came with a keg to the house of Mr. Byxbe, and demanded of his wife, the only occupant, to have it filled. He laid down the elements of the license law by a promise "not to drink on the premises," and promised never to tell where he obtained it. Mrs. B. entered the room used as a bar, struck a light, and found herself surrounded by about twenty foresters. She led the way bravely into the cellar, followed by the whole band in silence. The party solemnly promised to leave when their object was gained; the intrepid woman filled the keg, and they departed in quiet, and held their revel beyond the ear of the white man. For tobacco the Indian would work hard; to cheese they had a great aversion; to their contracts they were faithful.

THE "TUTTLE AXE."

The use of edge-tools marked the white's supremacy in agriculture. Two Indians were one day found at work with their stone hatchets, attempting to fell a tree. A settler struck in with his keen "Tuttle axe," and speedily brought the tree crashing down. Two raccoons were killed by the white man's dog and killed. In admiration of the dog, the Indians offered for him a suit of buckskin. The bargain was made. A year elapsed, and the suit was brought, and gave its new owner continued and substantial service. About 1811 the Indians left, and never returned, save as stragglers, to sell their forest game, skins, cranberries, and to visit the homes of their fathers. They would gather near their early homes, and engage in old-time sports, on which the whites looked for amusement, then, their supplies sold out, retire peacefully; and now the nineteenth century is well advanced, and they are known no more save in historic sketches. We commemorate their fate, while we rejoice in their departure. The necklace in the University Museum in Delaware tells why.

PERILS OF THE WOODS.

Gliding along in the railroad, or driving over the smooth turnpikes, the traveler of the present can know nothing of the danger of being lost in the forests. The pioneers of the Lewis settlement, located eight miles from Delaware, and known as Berlin, came to their new abode through Licking County, from Connecticut, with ox-teams. For forty days they moved westward, and gathered nightly around the camp-fires. From Granville to their destination they saw no house,—no roads, save "blazes" upon the trees, marking roads to be where horse-paths led to settlements, or Indian trails, long used. Mrs. J. C. Ripley tells the following of

A GIRL LOST IN THE DELAWARE WOODS.

"Early one morning a young woman came on horseback to our door, with disheveled hair and torn dress, looking a picture of despair. 'Oh, my God!' said she, 'I have been lost all night in the woods!' Riding alone the previous day, she lost her path, and went on till the night approached. She found a tree which she could climb, and, tying her horse to another, ascended to near the top. Fearful of falling, she tied her bonnet and long hair to a limb, and holding with both hands to another branch, passed the long hours before the dawn. A storm came up, and the flashes of lightning, the roar of thunder, and the drenching rain heightened her terrors. She seemed to perceive the glare of wild eyes, while her horse, pawing and snorting, increased her fears. Morning came, but she was unable to mount her horse, and, finding the track, came out of the forest ten miles from home, whence she was escorted to her friends."

Mrs. Ripley, with another girl, went on horseback to visit at a neighboring settlement. Darkness enveloped them while on their return. The horses, unguided, stopped at a fence enclosing a small clearing. The girls alighted, and, finding a rise of ground, from its summit saw sparks rising at a distance. Proceeding thither, they found a man burning brush. He heard their story, made a torch of hickory bark, and found their horses. Lightning another handful of bark, the woodman piloted them home.

A man and his wife, returning from a neighborly visit soon after night had set in, lost their way, and, as is usual to those in their dilemma, traveled away from home. Fortunately, finding a known location, they were enabled to retrace their way.

Incidents to fill a volume are known to the old pioneers of the County, of young and old lost in the woods, of contests with bear and wolf, of adventures during the war of 1812, and expedients to obtain the necessities of life.

PIONEER HOMES.

The different settlements were mutually well acquainted. Every new-comer was welcomed, and friendly hands aided to raise the cabin home; and the surviving settler can tell of neighbors in a circuit of twenty miles. Their intercourse was marked by unrestrained freedom. They called one another by abbreviations of given names, and met on terms of perfect equality. While the general record of many a county history is silent upon the question of character, the early settlers of Delaware were marked in origin and life as moral, religious, and exemplary. Loss of reputation by violation of the frontier code of social relation was punished by neglect and avoidance. Living in seclusion, and called to daily labors, they did not feel the deprivation of intercourse or the want of present conveniences; and the announcement of a meeting for a riding, log rolling, husking, wedding, singing-school, and for religious worship was like a command to an army,—all felt bound, from sense of duty and from inclination, to attend.

The amusements of the men combined utility of needed labor, where a frolic was made of a hard piece of work and a settler given a good start. Trained to labor, exempt from the studies now required of the young, the muscular frames of the early youth of Delaware delighted in practice with the rifle, in running leaps, in wrestling, and in racing; and their "parties" of both sexes were marked by rough but hearty and innocent amusements at husking-match or wedding festival. The habits of the settlers were changed by necessity from those of Eastern homes. The stock ran wild and went in herds. The clang of many cowbells told where they were feeding on the clearing or browsing in the woods. The children went, towards evening, and drove them home, and later, when salt grew plenty, its use incited the return of the cattle. The young people went "plumming" to the thickets near Delaware, and gathered wild fruits for sauces and nuts for the winter's cracking. The maple syrup sweetened the corn-pone, and the beech-nut fattened the pork. Terms, once of daily use, are now grown obsolete: "Going for the cows," "Attending masters," "Riding out corn," "Haking up winnows," "Trips to Chillicothe," have ended with the necessity for their use.

Home was enjoyed while making and when made. The misanthropic fevers induced by evaporation of moisture from woodland long hid from solar influence was combated by teas from local herbs and roots, and aid from doctors, from their stardity and inability to pay them, was rarely obtained. It was characteristic of the settler in general that his word was his bond. Promises to pay were promptly met, and he who averred from this course was held in contempt.

PIONEER HOSPITALITY.

The lack of markets made food abundant and cheap. Early settlers sold some quantities of produce to those who came later, but years went by before a market created a demand at home. The traveler found free and generous entertainment in the settlements, and carried with him the good wishes of the night's entertainers as he pursued his journey. The early farm-houses, with clapboard roof, log sides, and puncheon floor, was furnished with simple furniture. Refreshing sleep, induced by hours of toil upon the clearing, burning log-heaps, grubbing around stumps, or hoeing the corn, was taken on beds made by driving forked sticks into the ground, on which poles were laid to hold the cord or clapboards. Cooking utensils were simply a pot, a frying-pan, and a tea-kettle. In families, a single utensil, the skillet, was used for cooking, as one has said, "Finally, to try-lard; secondly, to fry cake, in the fat; thirdly, to bake short-cake in; fourthly, to draw water in; fifthly, to boil potatoes in; and, lastly, to make tea in." Upon a puncheon table were placed the few plates from the corner shelves. The family and their guests sat around, in instances, upon stools formed from blocks saved from the body of some tree. The bench was used at home, at the school-house, and in the meeting-house. Venison and game from the forest, maple-sugar and honey from the same source, bacon and corn-bread, and later, biscuits, as the mills were started and reched, formed portions of the daily food. Wood sorrel is said to have been used for rhubarb in pies. Milk was drunk at the table and carried by the children, in bottles, to school for use at dinner. Coffee and tea were too expensive for use, except on festive occasions.

MILLING AND TRADING.

Elam Brown, a Berkshire settler, says of mills, "In 1805 there were few inhabitants on the Whetstone. Carpenter built a small mill in 1804. We Berkshire boys used to follow a trail through the woods on horseback, with a bag of corn for a saddle. The little wheel would occasionally be stopped, or several bags of corn ahead in turn would bring the shades of night upon us, and we had to camp out. Nathaniel Hall built the first mill for grinding, on Alum Creek, and also a saw-mill. These proved great conveniences for the settlement. In times of drought, I have rode upon a bag of grain on horseback to Frederick Carr's mill, on Owl Creek. This horse-back milling was done by the boys as soon as they could balance the bag on a horse." "Grinding," says John Hutton, a native of Ohio, and a settler in Delaware of 1809, "was done at the Dutch Mill. The dam was made of logs and brush. In dry times the dams were so poor that the people could not get grinding done. William Reed started with a bag of wheat on horseback for the mill. He went from mill to mill without success, and after traveling one hundred and fifty miles reached home with his wheat." Flour could not be obtained nearer than Chillicothe and Zanesville for a long time. A relation of Jacob Frost informed the writer that this old settler one day procured a bushel of wheat to get floured for his wife, who was sick and had nothing she could relish. This wheat he carried upon his shoulders to Zanesville, distant by the winding path, followed more than seventy-five miles. When floured, he shouldered the bag and returned home, furling the streams and camping out nights.

Goods were high, and staple articles only were purchased. The cost of transportation was very heavy. Some merchandise was packed from Detroit, but most supplies came by wagon from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, thence down the Ohio in flat-boats to the Scioto, and thence hauled or packed up. S. S. Bennett, an early settler of Berkshire Township, says, "Major Brown was the first to sell goods at Berkshire. His stock in trade was lead, powder, brown earthenware, tea and coffee, with a few pieces of calico and muslin. A store was kept at the mouth of Mill Creek, by the Windlows. They set a large chost of dry goods under a canvas tent, and began trading by a sale of goods and a purchase of furs. Tea sold at two dollars a pound; coffee at half a dollar to three-quarters; salt ten cents a pound; prints a dollar a yard; and whisky at one to two dollars per gallon, and free sale.

JOURNEYS FOR SALT.

Old settlers are united in their assertions that the want of salt for seasoning was a general one. The use of the article is an index of civilization, and its absence induced perilous journeys, of which we give the following: "Resolved to find some salt, I took my horse and log, and, following the course of the stream, made my way through the woods, a distance of sixty miles, to Chillicothe, purchased my log full, and returning led my horse. Sometimes my log was torn by brush, and often, coming in contact with trees, I came near losing the whole."

David Lewis, Jr., dug out a canoe and prepared for a voyage in quest of salt. From time of leaving till his return his chances for a fire by which to cook food depended upon his flint in the musket-lock and the "punk" which he carried with him. The tiny cord completed, he loaded it with deer, mecon, and other skins, stored out into Alum Creek, and started down stream. The first night found him at Worthington. He went on to Chillicothe, and, selling his load, bought a bushel of salt, for which he paid five dollars in silver. Lewis could not ascend the current, and, abandoning the canoe, shouldered his purchases, and started by way of Indian trail and bridle-path for home. His shoulders were worn by the weight of his precious burden, but he was near home, when, in crossing a stream on a log, unfortunately, his feet slipped and he fell into the water. The salt was gone and he was home again, his shoulders smarting with the brine and his mind chafed at the loss.

CIRCULATING MEDIUM.

There was no gold nor bank-notes in circulation prior to the war of 1812, and the payment of lands called for what silver could be had. At the close of the war, the Delaware colonists had bank-paper from the following: Owl Creek, of Mount Vernon, Mansfield Bank, German Bank of Worcester, Miami Exporting Company, Cincinnati, Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank, Chillicothe, and the Granville Bank. The want of small change was partly remedied by cutting a half dollar into four "bits" and a quarter into four parts, each passing for a sixpence. These fractional pieces were known as "sharp shins," and as they were uncurrent beyond home, constituted the pioneer currency till the Worthington Manufacturing Company and individuals began to issue bills for fractional currency, and drove the "cut money" out of the country.

A PIONEER FUNERAL.

The first death in Berkshire was that of Mrs. Vining, wife of Elam Vining, Sr. Her death occurred in 1800, and her burial-place was in the then woods, some forty rods south from the Corners. There was no coffin, and the neighbors held general counsel how to get material to make one. Mr. Curtis proposed to cut a tree sufficiently high and saw down the stump with a cross-cut saw to make the boards. Boards were obtained, and the pioneer's dust rests as quietly as in the expensive caskets of the present day.

HOME INDUSTRY.

The frontiersmen were manufacturers of their own clothing; the patch of flax supplied the tough flax, and in many an old garret or musket apartment stand the implements of by-gone industry. The rich and the poor wore alike in dress. Coarse, comfortable, home-made fabrics were the common dress of both sexes. A bridal occasion brought out a calico dress, and the first suit of "store clothes" was like the Roman toga,—the symbol of conscious and acknowledged manhood. Leather was obtained either by getting a hide tanned by the early tanner—as Storms, of Delaware,—or on the halves, or by having trunks and tanning it themselves. The leather was used in making shoes. Dressed deer-skins were employed as materials for clothing. In the absence of sheep, the hair of the raccoon was mixed with that of the wolf and deer and carded on hand-cards, and the yarn so produced knit into stockings. The presence of wolves in the woods prevented the raising of sheep, and the settlers waged an unrelenting war upon these pests, and paid bounties for their scalp.

A MAN TRAPPED.

Wolf-pens six feet long, four wide, and three high were made like a heavy square box from small logs floored with puncheons. The puncheon lid moved by an axle at one end. The trap was set by a "figure four," baited with wolf-meat, of which the beasts were fond. The meat gnawed sprung the trap and caged the animal. An old settler of Delaware went into a wolf-trap to make the spring more easily give way, when the trap sprung over him, knocked him flat upon his face, and held him there securely. Powerless to raise the lid, and miles from any house, he lay all one day and night in the trap, and would have perished there but for a passing hunter, who heard his groans and came to his relief. Besides the wolf, there were bears, in contact with which many settlers barely escaped with life, the most noted being by Captain John Minter, a native of Kentucky, and an early settler in Radnor. Panthers were occasionally heard; and dens of the yellow rattlesnake in Concord Township swarmed in the spring-time with the deadly reptiles coming forth.

ORGANIZATION.

The paucity of settlement and immense areas of country rendered the original counties very extensive; but, as settlers swarmed in, the old counties were divided and subdivided, until the present number in Ohio is eighty-eight. The county of Ross was the sixth in formation in the Northwestern Territory. Governor St. Clair ordered its formation on August 20, 1788. Exaggerated reports of rich lands and fine scenery drew emigration this way; and bodies of colonists, led by Finley, Massie, and others, moved up the Scioto, and, in August of 1796, Chillicothe was laid out in the woods and made a nucleus of settlement. From this centre the white settlements radiated outward, principally, however, along the valleys, following the course of streams.

On the 30th of April, 1803, Franklin County was taken from Ross and organized as a distinct division. In August of 1797 the town of Franklinton had been laid out by Lucas Sullivan, and was the first settlement in the County. For a time the town was a place of some importance; but, on the laying out of Columbus by Moses Wright, in 1812, the former place dwindled to a village.

On February 10, 1808, the County of Delaware was formed from Franklin; and a County seat, laid out in the spring of the same year by Moses Byxbe, and given the name of Delaware, was located upon the west bank of a stream then called the Olentangy. The formation of Union and Morrow Counties abridged the limits of Delaware to an area equal to the average of other counties. When the County of Delaware was organized an election was held, giving the following

FIRST COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Commissioners, John Welch, Avery Powers, and Ezekiel Brown; Treasurer, Rev. Jacob Drake; Recorder, Dr. Reuben Lamb; and Surveyor, Azariah Root. The officers of court were Judge Belt, of Chillicothe, President, and Thomas Brown, Moses Byxbe, and Josiah McKinney, Associate Judges; Prosecuting Attorney, Ralph Osborn; Sheriff, Solomon Smith; and for Clerk, Moses Byxbe, Jr.

THE FIRST COURT.

The first session of court was held in the tavern-stand of Joseph Barber. The cabin was the first erected in Delaware, and stood near the Sulphur Spring, on the University campus. It was but fifteen feet square, and built of poles. The want of space required the novel proceeding of locating the grand jury outside, under the shade of a tree, while the petit jury occupied another portion of the grounds. The constables were at hand to prevent interference by interested spectators. The first meeting of the Commissioners was held on June 13, 1808. Their sole proceeding for the day was the appointment of Nathaniel Whipple as clerk, and preparation for business.

EARLY HISTORY OF THE COUNTY SEAT.

Originally the town was located east of the Olentangy, and the location was abandoned and the present site laid off into lots and streets about the 1st of March, 1808, by the proprietors, Henry Baldwin and M. Byxbe, Sr. Sandusky, William, and Abraham Streets were respectively six rods wide; the others were but four. The original plat contained one hundred and eighty-six lots, and contained seventy-seven and a half acres, more or less. Lots not numbered, and lying on either side of Delaware Run, were reserved for future disposal for the benefit of the town.

The square bounded by North, Franklin, Winter, and Sandusky Streets was set apart for a "burial-place and other religious purposes." The block bounded north by the "run," west by Franklin, south by Spring, and east by Sandusky, was a square reserved for public buildings. A third square was intended for parade-grounds and other public uses.

Around the town plat forty-seven out lots, containing from one to seventeen acres, were laid off. This done, the proprietors appeared before Justice Arthur O'Hara, of Franklin County, on March 8, 1808, and attested themselves the founders of the town of Delaware. Two days later the plat and description were recorded in "Book D, page 403," by the Franklin County Recorder, Adam Hozack.

Commissioners authorized by the General Assembly located the County seat in the new town during the month of March. As in many another locality, this decision was a disappointment to the people of Berkshire, who had hoped the advantage would have fallen to them.

The first frame house in Delaware was erected by M. Byxbe, in the spring, just after its survey, and was located between the residence of E. R. Thompson and the present Byxbe house. This frame house was used as a tavern, and occupied by Harrison as headquarters in 1813, while his army lay in camp near the town.

Elder Jacob Drake, a pioneer Baptist minister, erected the first brick house in Delaware, during the fall of 1808. Its location was on Winter Street. His wife has become historical from the fact that, owing to the scarcity of masons, she herself laid all the brick of the inside walls. A jail was built of logs in 1808, and stood on Tanamary, now Hill, at the end of Franklin. Its dimensions were twelve by twenty-four, and its use as a place of confinement was slight. Prisoners showed their contempt for the building by securing an exit to the roof, where, by busy crowing, they intimated their victory over bolts and bars alike. A bank was opened in 1812, but, failing to charter, released its paper and wound up its brief career. The "Scioto Exporting Company," began by swindlers, was broken up by the citizens before their efforts became extended. The court-house was erected in 1815, and during this same year the town was incorporated.

DELAWARE IN 1816.

From Judge Williams, a settler in 1816, we find Delaware as an eight-year-old place. An old wooden bridge crossed the Olentangy, over which the Judge rode, and, going down Williams Street, passed the brick houses of the Byxbes, Cowley, and Mr. Lamb. On the Sandusky corner stood the frame alluded to as a tavern, and kept by Messenger, a son-in-law to Byxbe. A large two-story frame tavern was conducted by Moore & Sprague. Property was very low. A stable house, large stable, and a half-acre of land bought by Williams, cost him but six hundred dollars; twenty-five dollars in cash, the balance in trade. Currency was depreciated, and one hundred acres of land, where the depot grounds are situated, was bought by him for two hundred dollars. Near the court-house, in a two-story brick, lived Dr. Spaulding. On Sandusky were two large brick houses, completed in 1817; one is now torn away, the other is partially so. These were for taverns. In one, Ezra Griswald lived for many years, and for a time conducted a paper in a portion used as the office. Mr. Welch, the builder of the second, died before its completion. On the corner of Sandusky and Winter was a small brick, used as a store by Ezekiel Kilborn, of Connecticut. The next corner held the store of Lamb & Little; both of these men became wealthy by a long course of fair dealing. Small mechanics occupied the remaining space, and there were no buildings beyond the "run." Not twenty rods from the court-house, squirrels were shot, and turkeys and deer pursued run through the town.

No churches existed till 1816, and all religious denominations held their meetings for years in the old court-house. President Monroe visited Delaware in 1816, and stopped at a hotel which stood on the site of Judge Williams's residence. The first newspaper published in the County was begun during this year by two ministers, Jacob Drake and John S. Hughes. Drs. Lamb and Spaulding were the pioneer physicians of that date.

The postmaster of the town was Moses Byxbe, Sr., the office being at his residence, on Williams Street. About 1822, a wooden mill was built on the Olentangy, on the site of the present mill, by Barrett, of Lancaster. The first church belonging to the Methodists and the pioneer establishment of the city is of brick, and stands on the corner of William and Franklin Streets. Another structure being provided by the congregation, the old building became of use as a school-house; it then dropped to a market-house, and finally does service as an engine-house. A seminary was erected in 1835 by a company; but the attendance proving too small for profits, it was sold, and does present service as a school-house. The first of the various turnpikes through Delaware was constructed in 1839, and is known as the Columbus and Sandusky Pike. The work is principally the result of individual subscriptions. A fire company was formed in 1836. The machine was portable by two men, and worked by hand. The water was poured into it from buckets; it was promptly used and very serviceable.

FIRST OFFICIAL RECORDS.

"June 15, 1808. A petition for County road on west side of Whetstone River, beginning at the Indian boundary line; thence to Delaware; thence to south line of the County, as near the river as ground and river angles will admit. Petition granted; and Moses Byxbe, Nathaniel Wyatt, and Josiah McKinney appointed viewers, and Azariah Root, surveyor.

"June 17. Resolved, That a jail twelve by forty be built of oak logs that will pass a foot, and hewed on both sides, the sides hewed to be laid together, the corners half dovetailed, the floors of logs fourteen inches through, and hewed on three sides. Eight feet between floors. A calico roof; a grated window of three sufficient bars of iron in each room. One outside and one inside door of white-oak plank two inches thick, and two thicknesses well riveted together. The outside to be hewed down after it is laid up. The building to be finished January 1, 1809." Addition Carter took the contract to erect this jail, at one hundred and twenty-eight dollars and seventy-five cents.

"Resolved, by the Board of Commissioners, That for every wolf scalped over six months old shall be allowed two dollars, and for all under, one dollar.

"Resolved, by the Board, That prices of tavern licenses shall be in town six dollars, and in the country four dollars." Raised in 1814 to thirteen and seven dollars.

"September 7, 1809. The settlement with Solomon Smith, Collector of Taxes for the year, shows a balance for the County of forty-two dollars and sixty and a half cents.

"June 5, 1810. The State and County taxes for 1809 in Delaware County were increased to six hundred and fifteen dollars and thirteen and seven-tenths cents."

The old jail was replaced by a second, to be built of stone and ready for use January 17, 1814. Solomon Agard was to be the jailer; the building to be adjoining his residence. The agreement gives Agard license for retail of liquors for a year; and as long as he shall be jailer his license shall be free, and specifies that the jail shall have a decent shingle roof.

A court-house was to be built of brick, forty by thirty-eight, on a stone foundation. On January 10, 1815, a private contract was made by the Commissioners with Jacob Drake to build the court-house for the sole offer of eight thousand dollars. This court-house was used for a number of years by various church societies for religious purposes.

In 1840 a third jail was built, upon the site of the present, which has been constructed in 1850, and occupied by Sheriff Vining.

The present fine court-house was commenced in 1808, and completed in 1870, at a cost of nearly eighty thousand dollars.

THE FIRST GRAND JURY.

The first grand jury were impaneled and sworn as good and lawful men of Delaware County, to try the first case, of the State of Ohio against Valentine Minter, for assault and battery upon Reuben Walt. The case came before Levi Bell, President Judge, on June 3, 1808; a case was found, Minter plead guilty, and was fined four dollars and costs of suit. The following are the names of the jury as found upon the docket: Thomas Brown, Daniel Strong, Valentine Foss, Ezekiel Van Horn, Aaron Welch, Nathaniel Carpenter, David Dix, George Coughlin, David Butler, John Patterson, Azariah Root, J. McKinney.

THE FIRST CIVIL CASE.

Jacob Drake brought action against Elias Palmer, for boarding, money loaned, and other claims. Jeremiah Osborn, attorney for plaintiff, and John S. Wells for defendant.

The first deed on record is transcribed from vol. 1, page 193, of the records of Itasca County, and bears date of May 14, 1800. The conveyance is by Solomon Broderick, of Sussex, New Jersey, to Jacob A. W. of Paxton, Pennsylvania, and for five hundred dollars, of two hundred and fifty acres of land, lying in the southeast part of the County, in Harlem Township. Broderick seems to have acquired a title to four thousand acres of these military lands; and the second record shows a sale by him of five hundred acres to the same party for one thousand dollars.

The first patent granted by Congress to soldiers of the Revolution as a land warrant upon the military land embraced by the County of Delaware was given by hand of John Adams, President, to Francis Carbery, and consisted of one hundred acres, described as "Lot six of first Quarter, fourth Township, and twentieth Range." The deed bears date May 2, 1800. Ezra Tryon, a soldier, took the second place in time of locating.

PROPRIETORS OF FOUR-THOUSAND-ACRE TRACTS.

In the article concerning lands, mention has been made of the division of townships into four-thousand-acre tracts, and, from an examination of the records, the purchasers of these tracts from Government were: John Pierce, for heirs of Ebenezer Pierce, July 18; Abraham Baldwin, two tracts of four thousand each, September 6; William Steele, May 28; Robert Campbell, March 28; Hugh Holmes and Robert Rainy, and John Bathbone, June 23 and May 3, two tracts. All these patents were issued to the parties named during 1800.

BRIEF BIOGRAPHY.

Moses Byxle, land-owner, agent, and founder of Delaware, one of the first Associate Judges; elected in 1808, and held the office till 1822. His death occurred in 1827, at the age of sixty-seven.

Joseph S. Hughes, from Washington, Pennsylvania, came to Delaware in 1810. Was a chaplain in the army. He was a fine speaker, an excellent social person, and fond of sport. He died in 1824, and his remains lie unmarked in the old burial-ground.

Solomon Smith, of New Salem, New Hampshire, came to the County in 1804. He was the first Sheriff, Justice, and Postmaster in the County and township. He served as Treasurer and Auditor. He died July 10, 1845, in his fifty-eighth year, and was buried in Delaware.

Ezekiel Brown settled in 1808 in Sunbury; served as Commissioner and Associate Judge, and died in 1842.

The formation of the confederacy by the Western Indians enabled them to put about nine thousand warriors upon the border, and called for prompt defensive measures by the pioneers to save their homes from ruin. Led by McArthur, almost the entire male population of the country rallied at the "general call," and the plains of Upper Sandusky were covered by the militia of the Scioto Valley. Stripped of defenders, the women and the few scattered settlers lived in apprehension of savage onslaught.

BLOCK-HOUSES.

As a safeguard for refuge, a temporary stockade was made of the dwelling of L. H. Cowles, corner of Main and William Streets, Delaware. A block-house was erected in Norton, and a second on Alum Creek, seven miles east from Delaware, on the State road from Eden to Columbus. The building has been removed, but the slight eminence is marked by an inclosure known as the "Old Block-House Burying-Ground." Go back sixty years and more and see the old stockade in its prime. As night approaches the settlers are safely housed; day comes, and the men go out to engage in labor.

A DESCRIPTION.

The block-house near Cheshire was forty feet square and two storied; the second projected somewhat over the first, leaving a space between the logs down, from which guns could be discharged in a close attack or boiling water dashed upon an attacking party; it also enabled the garrison to check any attempt to set the structure on fire. The upper story contained embrasures, so arranged that rifles could be aimed in any direction and near by. It was built of hewed logs a foot square, dovetailed at the corners, and closely jointed. The door—the only opening—was of three-inch plank, double, barred across and upright. To test its ability to stand fire, a fusillade of balls was fired into it at short range. In the story below slept the children; above, the grown people stood sentry.

One morning at dawn David Lewis, Sr., left the defense, and Philo Hoadley followed him, and went to Lewis's cabin; Lewis came in hurriedly, snatched his rifle, and left. Hoadley pursuing, heard a shot, and then another, and both men ran for the block-house. A party went out to reconnoitre, and marks of blood along the Indian trail, and moccasin tracks, showed that Lewis had hit the mark.

A PANIC.

A company of cavalry, under Elias Murray, and several companies of infantry were in the service. A company of scouts was formed by William Drake as a protection to the frontiers, and, when Lower Sandusky was in danger, obeyed orders to march to its defense. The first night's camp was just beyond the settlement, and the captain raised an alarm to try his men, and while the most courageous began to form in line, the lieutenant fled to the woods. In vain did the captain attempt his recall—the shout sounded like the appalling war-whoop, and the fugitive ran ten miles through the woods, and entered the Radnor settlement at day-break. His tale of a company massacred and he alone escaping spread like a fire, and, on foot, horseback, and in wagons, the crowd of frightened people poured into and through Delaware.

The Penny family lost a little boy from their wagon near Delaware, and when well on their way to Worthington missed him. Affection and fear struggled, and the latter won; they left him to his fate and hurried on. A woman frenzied by fear remembered her child, ran back for it; snatched a stick from the fire-place and sped away, leaving the unconscious infant in its cradle. The panic spread, and far and wide the settlers fled. Captain Drake, meanwhile, marched on to Sandusky, ignorant of the fright and terror-inspired flight far in his rear.

In Harlem, old Mrs. Fancher had the rheumatism and could not walk, and no bridge for her horse. She took two skeins of yarn, and used them for reins. Dædre Adams fled two miles from home to a sugar camp. All went to Bennett's log-house for shelter. The women and children were put up the ladder and guarded by four or five old men; the young men being away working on army roads. A band of Kentuckians camped on the hill by the lock fired the leads from their guns, and again the people ran to the woods. Such scenes portray the real and fancied danger endured by the old and fast-disappearing race of early settlers.

MINERAL SPRINGS, AND GEOLOGICAL.

We extract from the compilation of O. M. James, in Delaware Atlas, the following upon geological formation: "Delaware County embraces a portion of the cliff limestone formation in the western section; this limestone extends across black shale in the centre, and covers a section of red sandstone in the east. The 'superficial material' or 'drift' is generally regular and the outline of the substratum well defined. The depth of the various formations has not been fully ascertained. The black shale, on Alum Creek, is two hundred and fifty to three hundred feet in nearly uniform thickness. The limestone formation affords fine quarries of material for the manufacture of excellent lime. The sandstone or freestone of Big Walnut is much valued for building purposes. Several fine quarries have been recently opened up, and foundations are generally laid of this material. The Episcopal church in Delaware and the Old Mills of East Delaware are built wholly of this stone. The quarry of Little, west of the city and inside the corporation, employs about thirty hands, and the limestone there taken out is variously employed. The County infirmity is built of this stone, the jail at Maysville in Union County, and much material is shipped upon the railroads. The opening of railways through the County has made a portion of the freestone in Berksboro and Genoa available. This stone is used extensively for flagging in Columbus and other cities. Much wealth lies dormant in these unopened quarries. The surface material is of various strata of 'drift.' Alluvial deposits furnish gravel for roads, fine sand for building, potter's clay, brick clay, and bog ore or fire-clay. The cliff limestone furnishes numerous signs of saline springs. The necessities of the settlers and the presence of these indications caused a strong hope of finding a home supply of salt, and attempts were made to this end by boring, without success. Petroleum is indicated, and lenses of oil lands made. The presence of gypsum is suspected, and much of hidden wealth is garnered for the wants of coming generations."

Sulphur springs are found at various points, and have long been popular resorts for the benefit of health and purposes of recreation.

THE WHITE SULPHUR OF DELAWARE.

From time immemorial the Indian came to this spring, and the deer and buffalo made their heavy trails to this fountain. Prior to the inclosure of the grounds, the cattle gathered here for miles, in summer, to drink this water; it is the pride of the citizen, and a popular resort.

A stone bowl of liberal dimensions is filled with the water, which rises from a hole in the centre at the rate of twelve to fifteen gallons per minute, and trickles in a constant shower from the rim of the bowl. The water has a temperature of 50°; it is gaseous, and known as hydro-sulphurous. Light and pleasant to the taste, it is highly medicinal, and is a curative of numerous depressing diseases.

An analysis of the water gives as follows: One wine pint just from the spring contains twelve cubic inches of sulphuretted hydrogen gas and three of carbonic acid. Several gallons of water being evaporated, one hundred grains of the deposit yielded: of muriate of soda, 48 grains; muriate of lime, 20 grains; sulphate of magnesia, 16 grains; sulphate of lime, 8 grains; carbonate of soda, 5 grains; total, 97 grains.

THE SCIOTO WHITE SULPHUR.

Upon the rapids of Scioto, two miles southwest of Delaware, is a quartette of springs. In 1820, while boring a two-and-a-half-inch hole for salt water, through solid rock, the auger, at the depth of ninety feet, suddenly fell two feet, and up came a stream of white sulphur water with great force, which has continued unabated to the present. The temperature is about 56°. In 1847 buildings were erected, and the place used as a resort. The Girls' Industrial Home is at present located at this point. A magnesium, a chalybeate, and a saline chalybeate spring are found here. Other fine springs exist, of which there are two near the Female Seminary.

GEOGRAPHICAL.

Delaware County lies in the valley of the Scioto, north of Franklin, and very nearly in the centre of the State. The surface is mainly level. The soil is clay upon the uplands, and richly fertile upon the river valleys. The lands are divided according to their fitness into woodland, meadow and pasture, and arable fields in the following proportion. The entire acreage owned in 1873 was 234,948. Of this, 97,208 were cultivated, 97,889 were in pasture, 60,663 in wood, and 709 lay waste and uncultivated. The soil is well watered by fine streams. The Scioto enters the County in the northwest, and flows in a general southwardly course into Franklin. Several fine tributaries to this stream join their waters from Union County on the west. The branches of the Wheelstone River, at average intervals of six to eight miles, flow parallel to the Scioto through the County. The climate of this portion of Ohio is quite healthy, as is proven both by freedom from miasmatic and other diseases, and by the high percentage of mortality, as shown by statistics.

The Ohio White Sulphur Springs, of which proper mention has been made, are seventeen miles north of Columbus, and near the Scioto River. The healthfulness of the locality, the beauty of the grounds, and the curative properties of the waters have combined to make this section a popular and fashionable resort.

The productions are varied as the inclination of the cultivator. While all grains and fruits are grown, the attention of farmers to corn, flax, and wheat render these the staple products, while the large area adapted to meadow and pasture render the raising of stock a natural consequence. "Volney wrote of America in 1793, and said, 'Noble forests, consisting of trees that spontaneously produce sugar.' It referred to the sugar-maple, whose fine groves beautify the lands of the farmer, and whose yield for 1873 was 18,916 pounds of sugar and 13,229 gallons of syrup.

The growth of population is shown as follows: Census of 1820 gave 7629; of 1830, 11,523; of 1840, 22,669; and of 1870, 50,176. The growth has increased since the last census, which gave the city of Delaware but 6861.

The County is divided into eighteen townships, whose history follows the County work. Township changes have been various, and the formation of Morrow and Union detached from the number, which, in 1817, was twenty-one. A lady is a present resident of Morrow County who says she has been a resident of four counties and always occupied the same old home. Besides the County seat, there are in Delaware the villages of Ashley, Eden, Rome, and Williamsville. The tendency of growth is to build up in the County one large and beautiful city, while towns and villages afford convenient resorts for trade and mail facilities.

AGRICULTURAL.

Long before the foot of the white man pressed the soil, the Delawares had filled extensive fields and raised their crops of corn. The pioneer likewise put in a patch of corn, and busied it round for fencing. The rude plow, with wooden mould-board, the clumsy tools, the soil bound by roots, made the early attempts at agriculture of a character but little better than those of the Indian. Still, the soil and the climate were so favorable that this farming yielded an ample return. In addition to corn, wheat, oats, and other grains were soon raised, and live stock was to the settlers what game had been to the Delawares. The distance from market forable traffic, either in a sale of surplus products or the purchase of goods and groceries; there was also a scarcity of money, and he who was able to pay for his land as his installments became due, looked far forward, in the hope of a cleared farm, a comfortable home, and a sufficiency of food. Since then the active intellect of the American has improved the implements of husbandry, constructed direct and speedy means of transit for person, property, and intelligence, and the enhanced value of the farm has made the aged and homeloving settler wealthy.

For the purpose of exhibiting the products of a single year, as 1873, as a basis for comparison with other counties and with Delaware in time to come, the following statistics of agriculture are given here:

Acres in wheat, 14,906; bushels raised, 215,347, or about 13 to the acre. Corn acreage, 31,657; produced 1,300,620 bushels. While wheat has steadily diminished in average yield, corn has increased from 2½ bushels to the acre in 1869, to nearly 80 in 1873. The oat crop from 5181 acres was 120,609 bushels. Barley, rye, buckwheat, and potatoes were raised during the year,—about 60,000 bushels of the latter. In the item of meadow products,—29,336 acres in timothy produced 21,701 tons of hay; 5363 acres in clover yielded 6508 tons of hay and 3082 bushels of seed. As a fertilizer, 140 acres sowed in clover were plowed under. In the yield of flaxseed and flax, Delaware ranks fifth in the State. 2028 acres produced 375 bushels of seed and 382,115 pounds of flax.

Ohio is a noble State in the products of the dairy. In only one county did the product fall under 100,000 pounds of butter, and thirty-seven counties gave over half a million pounds. The showing of Delaware was 576,948 pounds, and this entitles her to stand thirty-third in grade.

Sorghum was raised in considerable quantities. The sugar-maple abounds in the County. Of eleven counties producing over 10,000 gallons of maple syrup, Delaware ranks seventh, with a yield of 13,226 gallons. While wheat has steadily diminished in average yield, corn has increased from 2½ bushels to the acre in 1869, to nearly 80 in 1873. The oat crop from 5181 acres was 120,609 bushels. Barley, rye, buckwheat, and potatoes were raised during the year,—about 60,000 bushels of the latter. MISCELLANEOUS STATISTICS.

A comparison by decades of property returned for taxation illustrates the rapid advance of the County in wealth, and strikingly exhibits the present prosperity of the people. Few sister counties, starting in 1850 with $1,144,081, attained to $9,867,447 in 1880; and in fourteen years, or 1874, had advanced to $10,522,539.

The State tax for 1874 was $52,871,116; other taxes, $176,618,18; total, $229,489,84.

A County indebtedness of $33,213,35 existed in 1874; a city and village debt of $21,422,35, or a total of $54,635,70. Citizens held of Government bonds exempt from taxation, $42,254. The financial standing of Delaware is further shown by a statement of the number of banks and their capital. There are two national banks in the County, both located in the city of Delaware. Each has a capital stock of $100,000, and have received respectively a circulation of $90,000. There are also two private banks, reporting $17,000 capital. Total capital in banks of Delaware, $217,000.

The public or County buildings are three in number, and have an estimated value of $160,000; nine have been variously destroyed, at a trifling loss to the County. The number of residences erected during a year shows the ability and desire of the citizen to enhance comfort and adorn the home, while mills, shops, and stores attest the enterprise of the community in upbuilding and supporting manufacturing interests. 201 dwellings, costing $123,105; 2 mills, at $2600; 2 machine-shops, $6000; and 27 various structures, costing $4025, or a total of 232 structures of all kinds, were built at a cost of $136,620.

During the year ending June 30, 1874, 852 deeds were recorded and 11 leases. There were 549 mortgages recorded, assuring $681,500. And as indicative of the promptitude of payment of these incumbrances, none assumed to override a temporary obstacle, we find that during the same time 300 mortgages were canceled and $391,800 released.

The pauperage, compared to the population, is very light. The number of dependent persons in the County infirmity, March 31, 1874, was 89; 10 were otherwise supported, making a total of 99 indigents in the County.

The social and vital statistics of Delaware indicate the health of the locality and the phys-cal well-being of her citizens. There were 204 marriages during the year; there were 493 births and 165 deaths.

The percentages of 53 of one per cent. of the population becoming deceased in a year speaks well for the salubrity of the climate and the care of the people for hygienic principles. Sixteen persons naturalized added to the population; of these, 10 were from Germany, 3 from Ireland, and 1 from Switzerland. The County, with a present fair showing, has capacity for far greater, and a few years hence will see Delaware well up to the front rank.

POLITICAL.

A first grant of lands west of the Alleghany Mountains was made by Charles II., in the year 1662, in vague, general terms. During 1748 the Ohio Company was formed. Virginia gave up her lands lying northwest of the Ohio River, to the United States in 1784. In 1788, Congress appointed Arthur St. Clair Territorial Governor. The Territorial Legislature held its first Assembly in 1799, and the first General Assembly under the State constitution convened on March 1, 1803, at Chillicothe. The seat of government was permanently located at Columbus in 1816.

Prior to 1808, the representation of Delaware was included in Franklin and Ross, and it was not till 1849 that the County was represented in Congress by one of her own citizens, in the person of Charles Sweetzer. Delaware enjoyed this honor in 1868, through James H. Habbell; and Early F. Poppleton, elected March 4, 1875, is the present Representative of the district from this County.

The Sixteenth District of the General Assembly of Ohio, composed of Licking and Delaware Counties, is represented in the State Senate by William P. Reid, a lawyer from the city of Delaware. S. K. Donavin, a former insurance agent, is Clerk in the same body. The State Representative for 1874-75 from Delaware is F. B. Williams, a physician from the County seat.

These offices show that the County, and especially its chief city, is not behind in personal ability in the different professions, to hold responsible positions with credit to themselves and their section.

Delaware is connected with Knox and Licking, to form the first subdivision of the Sixth Judicial District.

The ratio of representation in the State General Assembly for Representative, (in 1881, is one for every 20,851 of population. Delaware's population accords very nearly with this ratio. The ratio of State Senator is one for every 70,140 of population. The combined population of Delaware and Licking in 1870 was 61,297.

The County is classed Republican by a light majority. The vote for Secretary of State in 1874 was 4310; A. T. Wilcox received of these 2364, William Bell, Jr., 1950, and J. R. Burdick, 317. The parties are nearly equally divided in each of the various townships.

An election was held on August 18, 1874, which conveys the mind of the people upon various leading questions so forcibly that there may be drawn the conclusion that they are opposed to change of constitution, to minority representation, to railroad aid, and to license. The vote was as follows: for Constitution, 370; against, 3714. For minority representation, 249; against, 3761. For railroad aid, 174; against, 3861; and for license, 1313; against, 2719. The patriotism of the citizens and their love of good government has been shown in every emergency of taxation or quota of troops, and, divided in opinion by party, they are united in purpose to preserve inviolate our present form of government.

MANUFACTURES.

Over fifty mills, run by steam and water power, have risen from the rude corn-cracker built by Carpenter. The city has kept pace with the country. Foundries, manufactories, and shops have sprung up, and entered upon careers of prosperity. The following is a brief history of a few of these institutions.

The Delaware Paper Mills Company.—In the spring of 1838, Judge Williams and Cadel Howard bought of Samuel Lantz the lands, power, and old flour-mill on which Stratford, three miles below Delaware, stands. The old mill was repaired, and the paper-mill went into operation October 1, 1839. John Hoyt was in charge. Eight hundred to one thousand pounds of paper were made daily by sixteen hands. It was burnt October 20, 1840. In three months it was rebuilt. In September, 1844, H. G. Andrews bought a fourth interest. In 1847 N. D. Perry became superintendent. In 1849 the flour-mill was changed to a wrapping-paper mill. Ten hands made half a ton a day. On February 27, 1857, the entire mills were burnt, and a loss suffered of $25,000—$10,000 insured. $50,000 rebuilt the mills in November, 1857, and they have been improved at times since. On January 1, 1871, J. H. Mcendenhall bought a half interest for $24,000, and the mills are owned as named.

Tannery.—John Wolfley settled in Radnor in 1821. In 1824, himself, Charles Miller, and David McVulne started a tannery where is the Olentangy engine-house. Wolfley and Hugh Lee, father of the Lieutenant-Governor, bought out the others. In 1843 Wolfley located and started a tannery alone. In 1865 his son S. D. became a partner, and in 1867 J. S. Wolfley joined the firm.

Cabinet Ware.—A. A. Welch started a cabinet-ware store on Main Street, in South Delaware, in 1833. In 1836 he removed to Lattimer's music store, on Main, north of Winter, and in 1840 located as at present. Orville, his son, became partner in 1865. Yearly sales amount to $12,000 to $15,000. William Welch is a pioneer from New York, coming here in 1817, when but four years of age.

Furniture Store.—William Mansur began to make and vend furniture in 1823, and continued the business forty years. He died in 1863, and his son continued in the store a year. F. G. Albright began the trade in 1868, removed to present rooms in 1869, and continues business as a salesman. A. J. Reicherts conducts a furniture store started by J. J. Reicherts, in 1837, on the site of Little's grocery, and continued by him twenty-three years—by him and son nine years. The elder withdrew, and is a manufacturer of a patent spring fence, of which he is the inventor. J. C. Miller took his place for a year, and then took the factory to Sunbury, leaving the son of J. J. to continue the business up to the present.

Music Store.—Began by J. F. Lattimer and John Whittlesley in 1834. Were manufacturers of pianos for six years in company. Lattimer was sole owner in 1840. Ceased to manufacture, and gave attention to his store.

Wholesale Grocery.—The first and only house selling groceries by wholesale in Delaware is that of V. E. Hills, founded by R. E. and V. E. Hills, in May, 1855, at No. 4 Williams Block. In 1859 they bought the grain warehouse near the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati track, and bought grain. In 1868 O. R. Hills took charge of the warehouse, and changed it to a flouring-mill, which was burnt in 1870. Captain N. E. Hills continues the grocery trade since 1860, and carries a stock of over $30,000.

Book Store of J. W. Lindsey. begun by Lindsey and W. M. French, in 1857; continued by Lindsey; supplies a needed want.

Boots and Shoes.—That of Fred. Graf, started by J. & J. Day in 1850; of Paul Randall, in 1840; of H. F. Brown, started by him in 1863; J. A. Brown, in 1864; S. Bauerle, in 1858; and George Krues, of Germany, in 1849.

Hardware.—Originated years prior to 1840, by Alexander Kilbourne.

Carriage Factory of Evans & Camahan is the pioneer of its kind in this part of Ohio. Established in 1837. Employs twelve workmen, at an expense of thirty dollars per day. Capital employed, about $30,000.

Cigar Factories.—Four in number: one at Lewis Centre, one at Powell, two in Delaware, Riddle and Graf. Seven hands; thirty thousand cigars a month. Dillinger & Hill started in 1870; about equal to former.

Wagon Factory.—John McElroy & Son begun in 1845. Employs twenty hands. Capacity, ten wagons per week. Capital, $20,000.

Chair Factory.—B. T. Powell, C. W. Clippinger, and R. G. Lybrand, proprietors. Employs twenty-three hands, and has a growing reputation.

Scale Factory of Page, Fairbanks & Co. Has eight hands. Makers of stock and wagon scales of from three to ten tons capacity.

Flaxing Mill, owned by first two of scale factory. Built in 1868. Weekly pay roll, $200. Capital employed, $20,000.

Woolen Factory, by Stevenson & Allgire. It has five looms, each capable of weaving twenty yards in ten hours, and is fully supplied with all requisite machinery needed to manufacture the wool raised at home.

The Delaware Manufacturing Company.—Flax manufacture was inaugurated in Delaware, in 1854, by F. W. Powell. The first factory stood on the west bank of the Olentangy, and run by its waters. In 1856 a stone mill was built in East Delaware, and steam power used. Next year J. M. Hawes, of Massachusetts, and Blagham, of Rhode Island, bought the mill. In 1863 the company was organized, and built additions. The works include two tow-mills, one for making bagging to bala cotton, a warehouse, an office, and two large stone barns, and are located on ground seven acres in extent. There are about two hundred hands employed, one-half of whom are women and children. Weekly expenditure, $100. The main mill has twenty-five looms, capable of turning out twelve hundred yards of cotton bagging daily. Five tons of tow, equal to twenty tons of flax straw, daily manufactured into material. Eighteen hundred tons used annually of straw, one thousand furnished by the County. Capital,

THE FORTY-EIGHTH,

Company D, from Delaware; Captain W. L. Warner. The regiment fought desperately at Pittsburg Landing, and drove back the enemy at every charge. Here one-third of the men were killed or disabled. Captain Warner was killed. Corporal Selleck seized the colors of a Louisiana Regiment and handed them to his colonel.

THE SIXTY-SIXTH

contained Companies E and K from Delaware. The history of the regiment, in whole or part, is the same; we but give its strong points. At Port Republic the regiment supported a seven-gun battery. Three times the enemy captured the guns; as often the 66th drove them back. They fought a Virginia brigade and Wheat's battalion of Louisianians. One hundred and nine men were lost, of four hundred engaged. At Cedar Mountain, being ambuscaded, the men fought boldly, losing eighty-seven killed and two hundred wounded. The 5th, 7th, and 6th, numbering all told but seven hundred muskets, defeated Stuart's Cavalry, two thousand strong. They aided to check Jackson's Corps at Chancellorsville. The regiment was one of the first called "veterans." It went to Atlanta, to the sea, and to Washington, making a complete circuit. It fought in eighteen battles, and marched eleven thousand miles.

THE EIGHTY-SECOND,

Company I, Captain George H. Purdy. In the battle of Gettysville, and later, the men of this regiment battled most intrepidly. At Chancellorsville the regiment fixed bayonets and held their front. The enemy poured around their flank, and compelled them to fall back; only one hundred and thirty-four men then stood with the colors. At Gettysburg it advanced upon a short-swept plain within seventy-five yards of the rebel line. It went into action with two hundred and fifty-eight men, and ninety-two came out bearing their colors. Steady and brave at Resaca, gallant at Dallas, at Peach-Tree Creek, the regiment were bravest of the survivors; seventy-five killed and wounded tell the story of this decisive battle. At Bentonville the regiment handsomely repulsed every effort to drive them from their position.

THE EIGHTY-EIGHTH

contained Company H from Delaware County; was retained as a "guard" regiment at Camp Chase, and saw no field service.

THE NINETY-SIXTH,

two companies from the County. The regiment was organized at Camp Delaware, near Delaware, August 29, 1862. Shared in the attack upon Arkansas Post, losing ten killed and twenty-six wounded. In a desperate fight at Grand Coteau, with overwhelming numbers, on November 3, 1863, nine men were killed, thirty-three wounded, and sixty-eight taken prisoners. At Sabine Cross-Roads, April 8, 1864, six were killed, twenty-four wounded, and twenty-six captured. The regiment traveled a total of nine thousand eight hundred and eighty-six miles.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIRST

was largely composed of Delaware men. It was organized at Camp Delaware. At Perryville Captain Odor, of Company E, was killed. Forrest was repelled at Tréanna. With the battle-cry, "Wipe out Perryville!" this noble regiment charged and captured the 22d Alabama and its colors, drove back the rebels, and held the only road open to Chattanooga. Captains D. Lloyd and A. Robinson, Lieutenants Stewart, Fleming, and Porter, and fourteen privates were killed, seventy wounded, and eight missing. General Granger highly eulogized the regiment for its valor in many times repulsing attacks from five times their number of determined and desperate foes. Governor Tod, in receiving the captured flag, said: "The battle-flag I am proud to receive and deposit in an appropriate room, as a trophy of the heroic valor and patriotism of your gallant command." In the capture of Rome, Georgia, the men won a compliment for being the first inside the city. In the charge on Kansas, June 27, it lost one hundred and sixty-four killed and wounded; the regiment paid the price of bravery. Among the fallen were Major John Yeager, Captains M. B. Cleason and L. A. Patrick. There too were enrolled on the lists of honor the names of Thomas Melndre and Chester Bartholomew. The record of the regiment is gallant and meritorious.

NATIONAL GUARDS.

The County of Delaware furnished one company for the 145th Regiment of State Militia, which did valuable service as guards at the fortification of Washington, relieving old troops.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOURTH

Organized for one year at Camp Chase, September 21, 1864. Company H was composed of Delaware citizens. In the battle of Overhill's Creek it advanced with firing under fire of artillery against Bates's rebel division, five times its number, and secured the compliments of General Roscan. On December 7, at the battle of the Colors, it charged the rebel works and captured two cannon, the colors of the 1st and 4th Florida, and two hundred men. In the battle of Five Forks it repulsed the desperate assault of Hoke's veterans and took one hundred and forty-two prisoners. The 186th, Company C, of Delaware; the organization saw no engagement.

THE FIFTH COLORED UNITED STATES INFANTRY

began its organization at Camp Delaware, September 29, 1864. The 5th, with other colored regiments, charged in the face of a deadly musketry fire over a stream, through a thorny slatila, and carried Fort Harrison like a storm. Forty-five dead and as many wounded were left on the field. The afternoon saw the brave 5th assault Fort Gilmer; called back, the regiment went into camp with the loss of half its number. Streaming flags saw the "boys in blue" go out to battle, and waving banners and bright smiles greeted their return to their homes and the duties of civilian life.

CONCLUSION.

From the track of the first adventurous pioneer up the valleys of the Scioto and Mentangy to the present prosperous and peaceful period, the character of the Delawarean has been notable for industry and courage. Whether in the advance of Drake, unconscious of the path in his rear, or the grand charges of her troops in the last war, intrepidity and firmness are prominent traits; whether in the field where farmers labor, in the shops where mechanics toil, in the school-room, the office, or the railroad, the stirring men of the County of Delaware are well up to the front rank of her sister counties in the great and growing State of Ohio. Waste lands are being reclaimed, quarries are being opened, free roads will be made, new railroads built, population will increase, and with wealth of lands and goods, educated intellects, and trust in Providence, Delaware will have a grand future.

HISTORY OF THE VILLAGES AND TOWNSHIPS OF DELAWARE COUNTY.

BERKSHIRE TOWNSHIP.

Berkshire is five miles square, and constitutes Township 4, Range 17. It is watered by Little and Big Walnut Creeks, which converge and unite on the southeast boundary of the township limits. The leading settler of the township was Colonel Moses Byrke, Senior, of Lenox, county of Berkshire, Massachusetts. He owned eight thousand acres in Berkshire and Berlin, and obtained them by purchase of land-warrants from the Revolutionary soldiers in his native town. His business had been that of tavern-keeping, and the men had paid their board with warrants. A man of influence, he induced a number of his neighbors to come out into the new State, and arrived with his colony at Berkshire in the fall of 1804, and, laying out a village plat, gave it the name of his native county. We compile our history from manuscript placed at our disposal by Elam Vining, of Delaware, written by S. B. Bennett and Elam Brown. The former came to the township from Burlington, Vermont, in May, 1816. The principal inhabitants at this time were: John Patterson, Solomon Jones, James Gregory, Nicholas Handley, Nijah Royce, Major Thomas Brown, David Pierce, Joseph Pierce, Major Plumb, and William Gaudin, all residing on what is known as Berkshire Street. Improvements were small and isolated, except at the cross roads. All of those persons are dead, and all passed away at Berkshire except N. Handley and William Gaudin.

Major Brown built the first brick house; it is the one on the northeast of what is called Berkshire Corners, where he died in the fall of 1816. The first frame was built by the brothers David and Joseph Pierce, in 1816. The carpenter and joiner work was done by Lovell Calkins; the house is now owned by Hon. O. D. Hough. The first mill was done at Chillicothe. A mill was soon started at Worthington, and proved very convenient. Old ladies tell of using berries of the spice-bush for seasoning to their crab-apple and pumpkin pies. The arrival of a new settler was noted, and as soon as he had selected a site for his cabin and cleared a small space, the settlers all turned out and assisted him at raising. When he had felled three or four acres and burned the brush, the same kind people gathered and jollily rolled them in heaps for him. Major Brown was the first tradesman in the township. His business closing, in 1817, Flavel Fuller, from Worthington, bought up a stock of goods and opened a short-lived store. In the winter of 1818 and 1819, Bulkley Constock, of Worthington, and S. S. Bennett collected a drove of hogs from the eastern part of the County, and drove them to Cleveland for William Hill & Brother, of Pittsburg, government contractors for supplying provisions to the northwestern army. While at Cleveland, a contract was made with Hill & Brother for more hogs, and an advance was made of goods which were brought to Berkshire and sold on credit to be paid in hogs during the fall and winter. Bennett, and Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. Gregory, members of the Presbyterian Church, were accustomed to attend meeting in Delaware, in the old court-house, Rev. Hughes officiating. In the eastern part of the County there were only occasional religious services as early as 1810, except by those pioneers of the Methodists—the circuit preachers. Meetings were held in log school-houses, or the largest cabin. Quarterly meetings were held in Deacon Carpenter's barn, a little north of the town of Sunbury. Bishop Chase occasionally visited Berkshire, and preached in David and Joseph Pierce's barn. In 1818, the Rev. Ebenezer Washburn, Presbyterian, came to Berkshire and settled. He was the first of that denomination to locate in that part of the County. He remained but two or three years, and then went to Genoa Township. The schools were of the subscription class. The teacher boarded around among the scholars, and each paid for the proportionate amount of schooling received. Elam Brown, son of Thomas Brown, says further that his father went, in 1803, west to Detroit from Massachusetts, in search of a home, and found the country too wild; he went to Cincinnati and liked the country, and went home by the settlement of Bixby and A. Root. Bixby induced Brown to locate on his lands. The family of Brown started for their "Far West home" on September 1, 1804. They crossed the Alleghenies and looked down upon the repose of the great river at the village of Wheeling, Virginia. A few log cabins stood at Zanesville, and a small mill; a little improvement at Bowling Green; at Newark a few cabins; and at Granville there was one cabin, and it was roofless. Beyond there was no road nor trail to Berkshire. The wagon of Thomas Brown was the first that marked the route. As was usual, the family stayed with a neighbor, in this case Colonel Root, till their cabin was prepared for them, on the site of the old brick of 1811. James Harper was the pioneer blacksmith of the settlement; he came from Kentucky. The young people when not busied in picking brush and hoeing weeds rambled in the woods, and in the fall found plums, grapes, and the hawthorn.

The first school was taught by Clara Thompson, from Worthington, and continued three months. Cynthia Sloper was her successor, and Solomon Smith taught a winter school. Adonijah Rice, Mr. Jones, and Sphronia Brown were early teachers. The first school-house was a low, rough log cabin, situated on the east side of Berkshire Street, thirty yards south of the Granville Road. In 1818, there was not a church in Delaware County, but there were many consistent and pious people among its settlers. The first death was that of Mrs. Vining, and occurred in 1806.

Bixby's removal to Delaware Plains and there establishing the county seat was a severe blow to the hopes of the Berkshire settlers. Mr. Sturtevant made the first improvement on the Jones farm, in 1805 or 1806. The first marriage was of Dr. Spaulding to Cynthia Root. The ceremony was performed by Thomas Brown, the first Justice of the Peace in Berkshire. Albert Root was the first white child born in the township. There are four villages in the township: Sunbury, laid out by William Lawrence and Andrew Meyer, October 25, 1818; Galea in the south, and Rome and Berkshire Post-office in the west. These places show a commendable interest in religion, education, society, and manufactures.

BERLIN TOWNSHIP.

The first purchase of land from Government was made by Joseph Constant, and consisted of four thousand acres; it was known as Section 4, Township 4, Range 18. The signer of the deed was John Adams; the price two dollars per acre. Constant was a colonel in the war with the Seminoles of Florida. Taken sick at the South, he left his regiment, returned to his home at Peekskill, New York, and there died. Prior to death, he gave to David Lewis, Sr., fifty acres of his western lands. Section 3 was purchased by Colonel Byrke. These sections embrace the east part of the township, and lie along both banks of Alum Creek.

In 1805, John Johnson and Joseph Eaton, Sr., made a settlement on the Byrke lands. They came from Huntington, Pennsylvania, to Berlin, and located on Olive Creek. Eaton had a large family, consisting of nine children. One of the sons, James Eaton, was well known to the citizens of the County. During the same year, Phillander Headley, David Isaac, and Chester Lewis came from Waterbury, Connecticut, and settled on the Constant purchase. These pioneers, wearied with their long journey, took a brief rest, and began their great work of making a home. The cabins were raised; a few acres of land were brushed and prepared for crops, and corn, pumpkins, and potatoes were planted. On the 22nd of September, 1806, Joseph G. Lewis was born—the first birth in Berlin Township.

Ass Scott, Philo Headley, and Lovell Calkins visited the colony. The latter passed the years 1807-8 upon a tract of land, where he cleared three acres, planted seeds for fruit-trees, and raised a crop of corn. In 1809 he returned, accompanied by Lawson Lewis, to his home in Connecticut, for his family. Their first day's journey took the travelers to Fredericktown, the second to Jeromesburg Indian camp, the third to a camp in the woods, then on to Cleveland towards home. Calkins reported the new land an earthly paradise, and invited others to enjoy its comforts. The train of the settlers set out in September, 1809. There were the families of Samuel Adams, Jonathan Thompson, Lovell Calkins, and John Lewis. Roswell Calkins, father of Lovell, was of the company, which numbered about thirty persons. They were six weeks on their great journey, and wearily they talked over the Alleghenies, on through the wilderness deeper and farther, till near the centre of the State they found a rude cabin or so, and here was to be their home. Glad to find a resting-place, women and children entered the unheated cabins, and took possession. The seeds planted by Calkins had germinated, and the young trees constituted the first nursery in that section. The orchards from these trees bore freely, and were of great use to the colony. Roswell Calkins was a carpenter and architect by trade, but gave his attention to clearing a farm. The first frame was erected in about 1820: one by James Eaton; another by Daniel Nettlesby, east of the creek at Cheshire. The first church was erected by the Baptists, on the State road, in about 1825. It was a frame building, in which Rev. Jacob Drake was accustomed to hold meetings. A tannery was built on the Berkshire State road by the Dunhams, who did the first work of their line in the township. William Caswell began a tannery in 1825. The first tavern was opened at Cheshire. About 1825, Hall erected a mill on Alum Creek. Here the settler found the mill, though simple, yet convenient. The first school was taught in a little old cabin in the settlement, by Julia Ripley, then known as Julia Calkins. She afterwards taught at Worthington, and gained quite a reputation. The block-house alluded to in County history served as a school-house, in which Nash Burr taught in 1811. There were no early deaths—the climate was healthy, and not till 1810 were the community called upon to consign one of their number to a final resting-place. In the spring of the year, Emma Lewis died, and was buried on the east side of the creek. James Kilbourn, Episcopalian, read service to the people in an early day. Joseph Eaton was the first Justice of the Peace in the township. The first doctor resided in Berkshire, in 1816, and attended to Berlin's sick; his name was Hanley. Nathan Sherwood is credited as the first shopkeeper; his stand was located just below Cheshire. The earliest marriage was celebrated by Rev. Joseph Hughes, who united in matrimony Elias Adams and Harriet Lewis. The longevity of the early settlers illustrates the health of the County. Mrs. Chloe Scott died 1860, aged eighty-nine, and octogenarians are not unfrequent. The railroad crosses the township's western border. The station of Berlin is located at the northern portion of the road in Berlin. Alum Creek P. O. is in the northeast, and Cheshire, near Alum Creek, on the southeast. Ditching has been heavily carried forward by the Township Trustees. Large tracts of land have been uncultivated from want of drainage, but the stagnant water has been drawn off, and the land does excellent service for pasturage and hay. Some attention is paid to stock-raising, and horses, cattle, and sheep show choice breeds and good care.

BROWN TOWNSHIP.

The earliest settlement of the township was made along the west bank of Alum Creek. The northeast quarter was known as the "Salt Reservation," and strong hopes were raised of finding salt water by boring wells sufficiently salt to pay for the establishment of works thereon. Daniel G. Thurston, F. Cowgill, and Stephen Goran had a well sunk and some salt made, but the brine was not strong, and the work was abandoned. The Smiths, O'nningshams, and Longwells were lessors and settlers of the early times. Hugh Lee, father of John, Lieutenant-Governor, was an inhabitant of the southern part of Brown. Daniel Thurston was of the first Justice of the Peace. In 1841, William Williams was elected to the position, and has held it to the present. Squire Williams has been Treasurer, and held other offices in the County.

The attempt to establish a distillery, in 1843, by Silas Harney, proved a failure, and no second effort was made. The primitive saw-mill owed its erection to Ezekiel Longwell and Benjamin McMaster, prior to 1830. A second mill for sawing, and a mill for grinding in connection, was built by William K. Thrall; it is still in use at the village of Eden, a place laid out on the west bank of Alum Creek, six miles northeast of Delaware, on October 24, 1836, by Daniel G. Thurston and Isaac Leonard. Another and early mill stood in the northeast corner of the township. It has crumbled away, and bulider and structure are alike forgotten.

The pioneer church, erected by the Baptists, stand north of Eden—a crumbling ruin, a souvenir of the by-gone days. The Presbyterians built the next church on the same lot. The frame stood its time, and was torn down. The Methodists built in Eden; the Seceders west of the village. This structure is now in use as a dwelling. Those early shrines for worship were marked by simpler sites from the school-houses, and knew no ornament of spire or bell. The Presbyterians built in Eden about 1856.

The first school-house in the township stood on the north side of the graveyard, north of Eden. This humble edifice was originally occupied by David Eaton as the principal teacher. He was succeeded by Anthony Griffith, and by Mrs. Griffith. The custom prevails of giving the title "lot" to various tracts of land through the County. The lot on which Squire Williams resides is notable as the site of the first cabin erected in the township, by Isaac Eaton, the first land leased, the site of the first churches, school-houses, and burial, and of one of those singular and enduring works of the "lost race" of men. This work is a cone-shaped mound of earth, some eight feet above the outside level at the summit. It is about forty feet in diameter. A ditch surrounds the mound, and seems to have been created by removal of earth from the cone. A bridge-like spouting over the ditch lies on the east side. Excavation into the mound developed portions of a skeleton, and charred remains of wood, apparently used in funeral ceremony. The first cabin built in Eden was the work of John Finley; the first frame by William Williams. No licensed tavern has been kept in this township. The pioneer store was conducted by Joseph Leonard; the second by Williams & Loufarrow, in 1838. First school-house in Eden in 1848. The first resident physician was Dr. Lyman Potter, who made his home in the village. Elijah Carney and Dr. Bonfarrow were early practitioners. Leonardsburg is the name given to a small village on the railroad in the northern part of the township. It was laid out in 1852 by Abijah Thomas, who erected there a store, a warehouse, and a dwelling. The town of Eden is known as Killbourn P. O. The first postmaster was C. M. Thrall, who held the office from January to April of 1838. R. C. McMaster has the name of being the best farmer known to Brown Township. H. P. McMaster is known as the best horticulturist in the County. The County Infirmary is located in Brown Township, near the centre. Its buildings were erected in 1855, at a cost of about $25,000.

CONCORD TOWNSHIP.

This township lies in the southwest portion of the County, on the banks of the Scioto River. The first white settler of this organization was George Hill, who came here in 1811 from Pennsylvania. He was accompanied by others of the family, and by Christopher Freshwater. He is said by John Hamilton to have felled the first tree and built the first habitation in the township. He erected this building on the lot owned recently by Joel Marsh, and situated north of the old Mission House at the Sulphur Springs. The date is given as March, 1812; and the ground being then frozen, this little sixteen by eighteen hut was clinched with gathered moss.

The father of George Hill built the second cabin shortly after, and gave it a similar finish. The third cabin was erected by Freshwater, who was brother-in-law to George Hill, on the farm on which James Freshwater is a present resident. The first child born in the township was George Freshwater, whose home is located on Mill Creek. At this time there were no settlers save the Hills nearer than Big Darby, Whetstone, Radnor, and Daulhin. There were no roads through the forest. A pack-horse trail followed the west bank of the Scioto River from Columbus to Sandusky. Wild beasts were numerous. Dens of yellow rattlesnakes were known at this time, whence hundreds of these reptiles crawled at the approach of warm weather, and sunned themselves on the drift-wood along the river bank.

The first stone house, constructed by Joshua Hill in 1822, stands on the west bank of the Scioto, two miles south of Bellepoint. Archibald Hamilton and family moved to Delaware in October, 1820, and settled one mile east of the mouth of Mill Creek. The first grist- and saw-mill in Concord was erected by Henry Cryder, who, from his share of the lumber saved, constructed the first frame house in that locality. The building stands on land now owned by Joshua Corbin, one mile below Bellepoint, and on the east side of the river. Messrs. Winslow sold the first goods at the mouth of Mill Creek from a tent. Later, Michael Cryder set up a store on the Freshwater farm, and in time removed to Bellepoint. Bellepoint, at the mouth of Mill Creek, and in the north part of the township, was laid out by James Kooker, on August 26, 1835. Salt was bought at Vane's Mill. Money was a scarce article. Shoes were home-made. The want of sufficient clothing was often experienced. Years went by before the first school-house was built. Henry Cryder, removing to a better house, gave the old one for school purposes. It stood on the site of the present United Brethren Church. Its first teacher was John Wilson, a person of singular habits for an instructor of youth. The first religious meeting was held at the house of Henry Cryder. The preacher was the Rev. Vandemon, Presbyterian, from Delaware. Ears which had not heard a sermon for many years listened to his enunciation of the appropriate text, "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." Rev. Ufford held meetings. A United Brethren Church was started by Rev. Peter Tabler, from Virginia. The denomination finally erected a church, and were the first to have a house for worship. The Methodists, with that energy which has resulted in their present great prosperity, soon built a church north of Bellepoint.

The first marriage in the township was that of Joel Marsh to Miss Hill. The service was performed by Daniel Roberts, of Mill Creek. Incidental to this, a bee-tree was found and a fine deer shot on the same day. The material for a feast being opportunely provided, a number of Indians, encamped near, partook of the white man's hospitality.

The first death which occurred in Concord was that of the aged Mrs. Hill. She lived nearly one hundred years. Her remains were buried on the Hill farm, still used by the family as a burial-place.

The White Sulphur Springs, on the Scioto, owe their origin to an attempt by a person named Bachus to find a salt well. The failure discouraged him, and he returned East. Messrs. Hart and Shuyt, from Dayton, Ohio, came thither, and built the Mansion House for a summer resort. Later, the property was purchased by the State, and the Industrial School for Girls there located.

DELAWARE TOWNSHIP.

Delaware Township was organized as one of the divisions of the newly-formed County of Delaware, on June 16, 1808, by a concurrent resolution of the Board of Commissioners. Its area included, besides its present extent, Sections 1 and 2 of Troy, 2 and 3 of Brown, and 2 of

On the 11th of September, 1810, the township of Harlem was formed from what was then known as Sunbury, its northern line passing between the third and fourth range. Desir Adams came to this township, with her father, Benajah Cook, from Connecticut, in the year 1807, when four years of age. Mr Cook was Harlem's first settler. He built the first cabin in the township. One Thomson erected the next cabin, and in 1811 sold his improvement to Mr Adams. Prior to Adams Daniel Bennett had settled here, and Elijah Adams had gone to Batineer. Bennett was a preacher, and lived till his death upon his farm. John Budd's family bought land where the village now is. William Learned kept the first store at this place. William Kucher and family, and then Waters and family, moved in from Pennsylvania. Fancher built the first brick house in Harlem, and lived therein until his death. The ancient log cabin, which was the early seat of learning for Harlem Township, stood upon the present site of Harlem Chapel. A log cut out, greased paper pasted in, made light for the interior. The name of the teacher was David Gregory, of Berkshire. He was paid by subscription. Calvin J. Cook, now dead, was the first white child born in the township. Milling was done at Chillicothe. Baked wheat was tried with milk, but the early wheat was "sick," terms applied to grain first raised and imperfect. A hand-mill was started at some time, then a horse-mill. Cook built a saw-mill, and Budd a grist-mill, in the same year, on Duncan's Run. Wolves were thick, and nearly every night their howling was heard by the cabin-folk. Indians came in parties and gave great fear to the women. "While Mr Cook was absent at Chillicothe for four days, just at night Mother Cook raised the quilt lump up for a doze, and there stood three Indians, who cried out, 'Ooh! and, in her fear, she replied in kind. They spread bear-skins on the floor and slept. At daylight they rose and left. Soon, on came in with a saddle of venison, and, throwing it down, said, 'That is you.' They came near, and killed forty-five deer in five days." The war of 1812 caused unknown anxiety and terror to the settlers. The report of a gun, a distant shout, filled the people with forebodings of massacre and the proximity of Indians; their unyielding cruelty and the unprotected state of the settlers made life in the woods a constant suspense, and finally, when the panic, begun by Drake, reached the settlement, the terror-stricken people left their homes and fled while they knew not whither. Many seemed to hear the whoop of the savage and the screams of the overtaken as they kept on in their headlong flight. The quarter townships of Harlem are divided by roads right angled, and at their intersection at the centre is located a village termed Centreville. To the south-west, near the middle of the southwest quarter on Duncan's Run is the spot known as Harlem Post-office. As was the early custom, the dead were buried in the old farm-grounds, and the traveler will find several of these sacred inclosures in the southern part of the township.

Peter van Sickie is reputed to have been born in 1825. Van Sickie burned the brick, and aided in the building of the house. Orchards were started by the first settler from the seed. Salt was got at Zanesville. There have never been but two water saw-mills in the township; both on the Little Walnut. One built by Leonard Lett, the other by Peter Van Sickie, erected in 1831. Prior to this what lumber was used was brought from Culver's or Carpenter's Mills. There were no grist-mills in the township. The hominy block was in general use for pounding corn. Grinding was done at Mount Union. A tannery was begun by Edward Edwards, in 1833, and kept up by various persons until 1863. Nibby Stockwell was the owner in 1845, and combined with it the manufacture of shoes. Prior to this, home-made moccasins were in use. The first and only tavern kept in the township was at Stark's Corners, by James Stark. Walter Bump essayed the manufacture of liquor since the war, and only succeeded in drawing upon himself the clutch of the government. Isaac Rosecrans had a blacksmith-shop near Kingston Center, which was convenience to farmers. Patrick had the first patent and the first steam plow. Seth Stark purchased the first mowder. He is owner of twelve hundred acres of land, and deals heavily in stock. Mr. Stark inaugurated the shipment of stock from Kingston Township. James Moore at one time sold some goods at Stark's Corners, but there is at present no store in the township. The land is well adapted to pasturage, and much interest is shown in stock-raising.

Liberty Township claims priority of settlement over all others in the County. Its first settler was Captain Nathan Carpenter and family from New York. He arrived May 1, 1801, and built the first cabin in the County. He was accompanied by Thomas Power and Avery Power, Jr., Josiah McKinney and Thomas Celler arrived in April, 1802, from Franklin County, Pennsylvania, and settled in the neighborhood. The Wolches--Aaron, John, and Ebenezer and Captain Leonard Monroe, from Chenango, New York, augmented the settlement in the spring of 1804. George and Seth Case settled below Carpenter on the west side of the river. David Thomas and family settled north of the Cases. Rowell Fuller, James Gillies, and David Thomas and family were further accessions to the settlement. On Tyler's Run, E. Bartholomew, Timothy Andrews, and A. P. Pinney located their farms. Carpenter built a saw mill with a grinding attachment, which was a matter of accommodation to the settlement. S. C. Powell was an early tanner at Powell Post-office. The preachers were those out from Delaware--Rev. Hughes and Rev. Drake. The first school was taught by the Presbyterian at the river crossing, on White Sulphur Springs. The first Methodist was a frame school of Powell's. A small store was kept below Tyler's Run, by a man named Dean, for a number of years. The first teacher at the mouth of Wild Cat Run. A number of shops were established along the river, and blacksmithing carried on. The first marriage of which record was given was of Nathan Carpenter to Electa Case, some time prior to 1812. Sulphur springs exist in the township, which is well watered. Lands are rolling near the river. No toll-pike in the township. Much of the country is used for and adapted to pasturing stock. The fertile fields near the river are mostly cleared, but farther back the timber is abundant. Wheat, corn, and potatoes were formerly staple crops, but with the opening of a market a variety of vegetables and grains is raised.

Marlborough Township, on petition of Nathaniel Wyatt and others, was, on June 15, 1801, erected into a separate and distinct township. Large was its area at the time, it lacked on voter of the number required to legalize its petition. A man named Morgan had been voter in the township, and finally enrolled himself as one of her inhabitants, and the requisite were found. Originally Marlborough included Oxford and Troy Townships and a portion of Marion and Morgan Counties. It is now reduced to a half township, on the northern line of which is the old town of Norton. Jacob Foust, father of David and Henry, left Pennsylvania in 1769, with his wife to settle in the Soloto Valley. Foust had with him a good team, horses, a wagon, a cow, and his wife and seven children. He crossed the Ohio at Wheelersburg, and leaving the high habitations at the river, entered the forest, which lay unbroken for miles before him. Twenty miles through the woods brought the family to a large building erected as a "traveler's rest," capable of holding fifty persons. Here they resolved to pass a night. Morning came, and discovered the fact that some rascal had stolen away the best horse. Foust rode to Willis's Creek and hired help to bring the family to that point. Thence they were advanced to Zanesville, where, arriving at night and finding a blacksmith's shop near the centre of the town, they took possession. The smith was much surprised in the morning finding his shop converted into a dwelling; but kindly provided some provisions for their breakfast. Foust leased land of a man named Brown, and raised a good crop of corn. A woman came along one day with an empty wagon and four horses,—her share in property derived here. Foust engaged the wagon and team, and hired a man named Bowman to convey the family on to Coleraine Township, of Ross County, where the family remained till 1807. April of this year, Foust moved up to the forks of the Wheelstone, and squatted on lands belonging to the Campbell heirs,—the first settler in that section, and only the cabin of bark near the spring at Delaware between his cabin and the Carpenter settlement. Foust set to work, and, having housed his family in the usual cabin, employed his boys, Jacob, John, David and Abraham, in clearing land. They put in five acres of corn. It grew finely and promised well till it was attacked by numbers of raccoons and almost entirely destroyed. Henry Foust, the sole survivor of the family, a present resident of Oxford Township, and eighty-four years of age, had remained at Zanesville, and joined the family in the fall of 1807. Alford Strong was the next settler on the river. The third was a young newly-married pair, the man named John Swingington. These three families were all the settlers on this tract prior to 1808. At other points there were Nathaniel Wyatt, from New York, William Brundage and his son Nathan; William Hannaman, Levi Hinters, William and Allen Reed and families. Prior to 1812, John Currin, Isaac Bush, and Silas Davis had moved in. The cabin built by Foust was used by Spaulding, in 1813, as a tavern. One of the earliest marriages was of Sarah Boyd, an orphan in the family of John Duncan, in 1813, to a party whose name is unknown. The first brick house was built in Norton, around which a fort was built in war time. It was erected in 1811 as a tavern, with Nathaniel Wyatt for its owner and landlord. Samuel Wyatt was Baptist preacher at the settlement. The marriage of John Brundage to Phoebe Davidson, daughter of this captain, is thought to have occurred before 1812. The first goods sold in Norton were by Calvin Case, from Worthington. Thomas Brown was a blacksmith on the Norton, prior to its survey, which was done by the proprietors of the town,—Jat Kilbourn, Samuel H. Smith, William C. Schenck, John N. Gunning, and John Barnett. De Philippe was the first carpenter, and worked on Wyatt's house. Robert Loutler taught first school, in a house east of the river from Norton. Mr. Foust says of his father that it while he resided at Zanesville he took his gun and a sack and walked to Waterford, four forty pounds of flour, and retraced his step homeward through the woods.

Harry McInnes' fine blacksmith shop is in the northeast of Oxford, connected with Delaware by rail, and is a distant nine and one-half miles, numbers about five hundred inhabitants, and is a business place. Dry goods, grocery, hardware, drug, and millinery stores are kept. Stage machines are located here, and do a heavy business. Wool merchants make this a good shipping point. Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians are organized here. A large lodge of Good Templars exists. The Masons have a lodge and good hall. The place has a growing population. There is in Oxford a rich herd and some fine stock. The town is reputed to be the richest always in the Ashanti and Dohi Pika. Much of the township is really in a pioneer condition, and large lands and houses at the present time.

The first settler in Orange was Josiah Norton. In the family are old time letters from Worthington, asking him to migrate to that village and bring with him all his tools for shoemaking, and a quantity of dressed calf-skins. The letters bear date of the spring of 1807. They indicate an anxiety for his arrival. Responding to the call, Norton started with his family from Connecticut in 1807, reached Worthington, where he remained one year, and then moved up into Orange, and settled one mile west of Orange Station, on land purchased of James Kilbourne. Norton started a tannery in 1808, the first in Delaware County. Combining manufacture of shoes with his tannery, he employed for his workman Charles Hempstead. O. P. Elsbree, of New York, came to the township in 1811, accompanied by J. McCauley and settled north of Orange. John Higgins came in 1808, from Vermont; others of the family followed, and settled in the south west quarter. N. King and family came in 1810, from New York, and settled on the Coneking farm. Next, south of King, was Lewis Eaton and family, from New Hampshire. E. Lulington settled south of Norton, in 1808. The death of his wife occurring in 1810, was the first in the township. The early settlers on the east side of Alum Creek were William Stenard, John Gordon, and Ira Arnold, in the order given. Hander Arnold, Isaac Black, Chester Campbell, Leo Hurlbut, and Cyrus Chambers were others in early date and before the war. James Gooding built the first tavern, a brick structure, in 1824. The primal school building stood one mile north of Orange Centre, and the original teacher was a young widow named Jane Mather. The first Justice was Charles Thompson. Money being scarce, notes were given, payable in stock or produce. Anson Williams was the first grocer, storekeeper, and liquor-seller in the township, and opened this three-fold business at Williamsville. Another Williams named Horace started blacksmithing in a shop on the State road in 1825. The first mill was owned by John Nettleton, and stood on Alum Creek; it is still in operation. David Jancher and others ran a saw-mill in the southeast of the township. The first resident doctor was Russell Bowditch, a resident at Williamsville. Dr. Hill, of Worthington, was first to practice in Orange. C. P. Elsbree attempted the business of "stillling" in 1826, on a small scale. James Fessan organized the first Sunday-school in the township. The leading farmer and the best stock-raiser is George Gooding, a native of the township, his father, James, being a settler in 1820, from New Hampshire. There are three villages in the township,—Williamsville, now Orange Station, laid out December 1836, by Anson Williams; Lewis Centre, by William L. Lewis, in 1850; and East Orange, the east side of Alum Creek. Methodists and Catholics have churches. Secret orders have lodges; school-houses are now and built of brick. The people are of New England origin. The rearing of stock of the best grades is the principal occupation.

The first settler in the northern part of Porter was John Rosengren. He came from Keystone State in 1808, moved alone into the woods, erected a little cabin, and, save the soul of wife and two children, lived alone. Peter and Isaac Place settled, in 1811, in the southern portion; Abraham Anway settled near Liberty. George Broad was a settler in 1821, a first grinding was done at the corn-craeker of String, east of Sunbury. About 1814, a mill built by William Page, at East Liberty. A second was built in 1869; by a Vermont man Goodnow. A. Anway built the first saw-mill on Long Run, in 1820; a second was built the same site in 1862, but has crumbled away. Silas Sturdevant started a tannery in Olivo Green about 1845; continued ten years, and was burnt down. Marshall Sturdevant erected "still" east of the village in 1822. A few days after its completion it was set on fire and consumed. It was rebuilt and again burnt by some person bent on revenge. No grog-house has since been known in the township. George Siffier was the original blacksmith. The smithy stood by the roadside, near Sugar Creek, in the northeast of the township. There are two villages in Porter Township—East Liberty, laid out in March, 1836, by William P. and E. Lindenberg, and Olivo Green, in May, 1836, by Zeane Sprague and C. Lindenberg. Charles Baird built the first frame house and kept the first store in the latter place. Presbyterians built a church in Liberty, in 1840, and the Methodists one in Olivo Green in 1857. The first school-house stood on the Big Walnut, at the mouth of Sugar, in 1828. J. Sturdevant, son of Marshall, opened the first tavern in Olivo Green, and kept a grocery.

connection. John Pint was the first shoemaker. The best farmer in the township, both for well-tilled lands and good stock, is Hiram Blackledge; John Rowe is the next best. Wool-raising is the principal occupation. Much corn is planted. Quarries of excellent freestone are to be found in many localities. There are many fine springs, and abundance of good water is reached at a depth of from eight to thirty feet.

RADNOR TOWNSHIP.

Radnor Township is situated along the east bank of the Scioto River, and is comprised in Townships 5 and 6 of the twentieth range. The early settlement of this locality is credited to the energy and courage of immigrants from Wales. As early as 1805, David Pugh had come forward as a scout to determine the character of the new military lands and the feasibility of making houses upon them. He was satisfied, and, purchasing two sections of land from Dr. Jones, of Philadelphia, laid out the town of New Baltimore and became the first settler of the township. The plat contained one hundred and fifty acres, and Mr. Pugh thought, as did hundreds all through the State, that here would grow up a flourishing town, and he would live as its founder; but it was not to be, and Thomas Warren, from Pennsylvania, coming to Radnor in the fall of 1810, bought the entire plat at $2.50 per acre, and turned it to its legitimate use of raising farm products. Just north of the plat was laid out the village of Delhi, the only one in the township.

A Mr. Ludwig was the first neighbor to Pugh; besides him there were John Jones, Jenkins, and Watkins, all settlers prior to 1805. In 1808, Elijah Adams arrived and located himself north of Delhi. He was the first Justice of the Peace in Radnor, and held the office for many years. John Phillips and David Perry were settlers of 1805, and related to Pugh. In 1810, David Marks and Hugh Kyle had settled about two miles north of Delhi. The first cabin in the township was the handiwork of David Pugh. He built a cabin of poles on the site of his anticipated town, and in it passed the winter. He made a clearing around the cabin for a truck patch, and near by cleared about three acres of ground and put in "Welsh clover." He had brought the seed from Wales. It grew, and was excellent for pasturage. Perry Jones and David Marks planted apple-seeds on their arrival, and, in time, the trees grew and furnished a supply of fruit. David Marks was a prominent man, and served as one of the first Judges of Court. Thomas Warren opened the first tavern in the township in 1811, in a twenty by thirty-two feet two-story log building. Old settlers unite in saying that the tanning was long done at Delaware by Storms. Cists were taken to Meeker's mill, on the Olen-tangy. The first birth in the township was that of David Perry, Junior. The second, by report, that of Mary Jones, now Mrs. Mary Warren, born in the spring of 1807. Among early marriages in Radnor, we find the sisters Margaret and Sarah Warren united in matrimony to David Cryder and Montgomery Evans, respectively, during 1811. The deaths of Margaret Warren and Benjamin Warren occurred in 1812. The Episcopal church, erected about 1815, was the first frame structure in the township. Log houses were in general use, very few being hewed.

There were no saw- or grist-mills erected for many years. Mills for making hominy were in common use. The first school-house was erected on the plat of New Baltimore. It was constructed of logs during the war. The first teacher therein was Dr. Dickey. The school was taught, as were all others then and long after, by subscription. A black-house, built on the farm now owned by John Jones, and then by Judge Marks, was turned to use as a school building at the close of the war. The Methodist circuit-riders were the first preachers to come among the settlers and hold meetings. The Rev. Swazey arrived at the settlement after 1815, and held religious exercises in different houses, principally at Perry's and John Jones's cabin. The first storekeepers in Delhi were Williams and Cone, who offered for sale a limited stock of dry goods. David Cadwalader was the pioneer blacksmith.

Delhi was surveyed and platted on August 7, 8, and 9, in 1835, by James Eaton, Surveyor, by desire of Edward Evans, its proprietor. The lands of Radnor are rolling. The staple crops are hay, corn, and wheat. The majority of the population are Welsh, born or by descent. There are four churches in the township. Three of these are in Delhi,—a Methodist, a Presbyterian, and a Baptist. There is a neat and substantial stone church, built by the Presbyterians in 1835, in the southwest of the township, near the Scioto. Eight school-houses are located at convenient points in the township.

SCIOTO TOWNSHIP.

Scioto lies mainly on the west side of the Scioto River. Boke's Creek is quite a tributary, flowing across the northern part of the township. The Springfield, Mount Vernon and Pittsburg Railroad crosses the southern portion. Ostrander is a station on the road seven and a half miles west of Delaware and Millville, a hamlet on the Scioto. The first settlement was made in this township by Zachariah Stephen. Originally from Pennsylvania, he moved first to Kentucky, then to Chillicothe, Ohio, and finally up the Scioto River to a location north of Boke's Creek. He arrived in the spring of 1806, and put up the first cabin and made the first improvement in the township. Hired parties from Franklin assisted him to erect the first saw-mill during the same year on the Scioto, at the mouth of Boke's Creek. Richard Hoskins and family, consisting of four boys and three girls, originally from Wales, and later from Franklin County, came in shortly and joined farms with Stephens. The entire family of nine persons are now dead. James McCune and family, himself a native of Ireland, came up with Hoskins in 1807, and located south of his farm. Stewart Smith, also an Irishman, settled in 1808, on Boke's Creek. Joseph Shoub, of Pennsylvania, a millwright by trade, moved in near Smith, and followed his calling at various points in Delaware and adjacent counties. A man named Hall settled near Shoub during the same season. In 1809, Jacob North and John Williams came in. Michael Dillaver and family settled at the "Broad Ford" of the Scioto, in 1810. This year was marked in the history of the township by the erection of a grist- and saw-mill by —Nixy and Philip Hershaw, and a saw-mill by an unknown person. The mill was principally used for milling corn, but some wheat was ground, and bolted and sifted by hand. This primitive mill has been owned and repaired by various parties till the present time. David McVaine inaugurated the business of tanning at Millville in 1830, and others carried it on till 1865. Stephen Hudson sold the first goods in 1838. Hershaw began the manufacture and sale of liquor in 1815. Thomas Jones is found in the business in 1823, and Danlep and Van Nimmer pursued the work in 1836. The first physician was Dr. Lamb, of Delaware. Ministers from the same town occasionally preached at settlers' houses. Rev. Hughes held the first meeting, at the house of Z. Stephens. Rev. Cloud preached the first sermon for the Methodists in the house of Richard Hoskins, who was the first class-leader of the denomination in Scioto. The first church was built by the Presbyterians in Fairview, of hewed logs. The earliest school-house was erected on Boke's Creek, in the woods. It was constructed of slabs from the neighboring saw-mill. This unique structure was the settlers' academy, where thirty pupils gleaned a few fragments of education, and learned to read and write.

The first school in Scioto was taught by a Mrs. Nixy, in a rude hut, abandoned for a catio-shed by James McCune. The first marriage was contracted between Robert Perry and Sarah Hoskins, in the year 1809; the ceremony performed by Rev. Cloud. The next was of Isaac Smart to Margaret Smith, during the same year. Hugh M. Stevens was the first white child born in the township, in the fall of 1807. James McCune was the second, and but one month younger. The first adult death was of Z. Williams, in 1809. His grave was the first to occupy the Boke's Creek grave-yard. Good pikes traverse the township. The land is fertile and well tilled, and, in general with the famed valley of the Scioto, the crop of corn is certain and heavy. Orchards are frequently met, and the farmers have surrounded their homes with comforts. The old log buildings inhabited by pioneers, now all passed away, still stand, and, like the dissipated earthworks around the base of Kenesaw, in the woods of Georgia, indicate the rude and obstinate nature of the struggle for home and peaceful enjoyment by the pioneer. The Indian has passed away, and but one man of the old settlers, Z. Stephens, remains. Of him we have gained the above history.

THOMPSON TOWNSHIP.

Thompson Township is bounded on the west by Union and on the north by Marion County. To the east lies Radnor Township, from which it is separated by the Scioto River. On the south lies Scioto Township. It is exclusively an agricultural section. Habitations line the river road, and are sparsely found in the immediate interior. The settlement began with the arrival from Virginia of Samuel Weaver and family, before 1812, and his location on land owned by C. Hill, below Clark's survey. James Cochran was the next immigrant, in the winter of 1817, from Pennsylvania. He settled at the mouth of Fulton's Creek. John Swartz and four sons, all dead but Jacob, now in his seventy-sixth year, and residing at Cole's Mills, came from Pennsylvania in 1818. Simon Lindley and John Hurd came the same year from Vermont, and located on the first lot below Swartz. Roswell Field, a New England settler of 1819, on land a mile and a quarter below the "Mills," was the first Justice in Thompson. Joseph Russell and Samuel Broderick settled, in 1820, on Clark's survey, three miles north of the "Mills." These were all the settlers in the township to the last date.

Fulton's Creek took its name from a man who, in hunting along the creek, disappeared, and whether lost, captured, or killed, was never afterwards heard from. Jacob Swartz, authority for these facts, is the oldest settler in the township.

Cochran built the first cabin, made a clearing, and raised a crop of corn. Wheat could not be raised, and after several trials the attempt was abandoned. John Swartz planted the first apple-trees, brought from Mill Creek. Cochran erected the original township mill, on Fulton's Creek. The first saw-mill was erected by Jacob Swartz, on the Scioto, in 1830. It is still in use as in days of yore. In 1836, Nathaniel Fields built another on Fulton's Creek. Later, Fields erected a grist-mill at the same site. Cyrus Landon erected a mill in 1840, close to the northern County line. John W. Cone bought a few acres of ground and the saw-mill of Swartz, and put up a carding-machine in the saw-mill, in 1835. Cone constructed a woolen-mill in 1840, and continued to use it till its destruction by fire, in 1874. A tannery was started in 1845, by Israel Waters, a good workman. The builder and the building have long ago perished. Two weak efforts at making liquor failed, and the experiment has not been repeated. The first year after his arrival, R. Fields erected the first frame building in the township. In 1832, John Hoskins built the first brick house. Fields was the pioneer carpenter. Joseph Cuthbert, in 1825, began blacksmithing. There was a pioneer store on Swartz's place, conducted by Fletcher Welch, as agent for Anthony Walker, of Delaware. Several others succeeded, till, in 1863, the attempt was abandoned. There were no bridges and no ferries over the river, but Swartz had a large canoe and a flat-boat, and without charge ferried persons and wagons across. Not till 1869 was there a bridge over the Scioto connecting with Radnor.

The primal school-building was situated on Fulton's Creek. In this small hewed-log cabin James Crawford was the first teacher. The early ministers are not remembered. Joseph Russel was the first class-leader in the Methodist Episcopal Church. This denomination erected their first house of worship in 1845; it was of logs, and stood on the creek. The Christians built a place of meeting on Tanway Creek about the same time. It was a frame, and its first preacher was Elder Long. The Methodists erected a frame church near the old one, in 1868. In the winter of 1817, Susanna Cochran was born,—the first child of white parentage native to the township. The first marriage in Thompson was of William Travis to Catharine Swartz, in 1822, by Squire Fields, at the cabin of the bride's father. The first funeral was of Mrs. Margaret Swartz, who died October, 1822, and was buried at Boke's Creek, Scioto Township. Matthias Gerhardt was the first resident doctor, and John De Willer kept a tavern at his house from 1833 till 1868, since which time there has been none in the township.

TRENTON TOWNSHIP.

Middleton Perfect, authority. Trenton lies between Porter and Harlem, with her eastern line touching the alluvial soil of Old Hickory. The township is justly proud of her pioneers. One, who came in 1817, but sixteen years of age and with only the clothes he wore, has accumulated over thirty thousand dollars,

New Jersey furnished skilled tavern-keepers. The northern part of the township was settled by industrious people from the Little Blue State. A colony from Ithaca, New York, settled in the south, and one from Pennsylvania in the west part of the township,—all strong men, well fitted for toil in the forest. Of the early settlers was Gratrix, who wore "leather breeches full of stitches," a fawn-skin vest, and a coon-skin cap. One farmer ran two large asheries, and supplied Delaware with salt and window-glass for more than twelve years. These articles he wagoned from Zanesville. Jonathan Gondit, whose descendants are scattered over the east part of the township, came from New Jersey in 1833, and settled on the Little Walnut. Oliver Gratrix came in 1823, a single man, and married a Miss Rosenkrans. William Perfect, and Mordecai Thomas and families, came from Kentucky in 1807. Person Spinning had one thousand acres of military land. Thomas and Perfect each bought one hundred acres of this land at the mouth of Perfect's Creek, named after the family. Bartholomew Anderson came on from Kentucky in 1810, and settled just east of Perfect. John Culver, Michael Ely, and families, were the first settlers north of Culver's Creek. These families were immigrants of 1809. Not long afterwards John Williamson came into the settlement, and bought land of Ely, and, during the year 1816, married his daughter Rosanna. Their son, Madison Williamson, was of the first born in the township. A settler, name unknown, had made an improvement on the Sixth farm. A man named Roberts was the first permanent working settler on Battle-snake Run. He remained there full twenty years. John Glin was a settler on the creek as early as 1807. William Bittagway, joining farms with Glin, was a later arrival. The early orchards were planted by Perfect and Thomas, whose cabins and clearings were of the first. At the close of the war settlers dropped in every day or two, and called on the hands to log-rolling and cabin-raising. The death of William Perfect was not the first, but took place in 1812.

Battle-snakes were very numerous along the banks of the creek in the piles of rocks, and scores of huge, yellow reptiles were slain in the spring-time as they crawled out of their dens half torpid. Quarries exist all along the stream, but one Allison took out the first stones. Williams and Knox own a fine quarry, and are gradually increasing their work as they find demand and means of shipment. A large quarry has been opened on the Big Walnut, on the farm of Joseph and John Landon. The first saw-mill in Trenton was started by Middleton Perfect and Hazard Adams, in 1835. No grist-mills in the township. Silas Ogden was the first tanner. A small still was run and owned by John Culver in 1812. The first and only store kept in Trenton was by George Akerson, north of Condit Post-office, in 1855. Gilbert Van Dorn, a Jerseyman, came in during 1813, and opened a grocery on the Battle-snake. His name is perpetuated in the title Van's Valley, given to the region about his home. Near this valley was erected the first church; there are now several in the place.

The first school-house was on the Big Walnut, on the Mount Vernon Road, about eighteen rods north of the bridge. The first winter teacher was a person named Good, and Clarissa Studysant, a lady teacher, conducted the first summer school. The eastern portion of the township is still undeveloped. Stock-raising, as elsewhere in Delaware, is a specialty. Norman Perfect has some fifteen or twenty thorough-bred short-horns. Fine-wooled sheep have been the pride of the agriculturist. The construction, in 1873, of the Columbus and Mount Vernon Railroad through the township has opened a way through its woodlands, and an avenue of produce which will speedily tell in enhanced values and new growth. The hidden resources of stone and undeveloped lands will in time come into play, and the Trenton of to-day will be to the future as the days when Perfect and Thomas moved in are to the present.

TROY TOWNSHIP.

Troy Township was organized from Marlborough and Delaware on the 24th of December, 1816. Eleazer Main was one of the earliest settlers in Troy. Shortly after his settlement, in 1812, he responded to the call for troops, and leaving his family in the woods, perhaps forever, went to the relief of Fort Meigs, on Lake Erie, where the gallant Croghan had repelled the British and Indians. Arrived near the fort, the men unslinging knapsacks and lay down gun in hand. A dark and rainy night passed away, and before daylight word was given and the line of battle formed. Outlying parties of savages reported to the British that a powerful army was near by, and the hastily-spiked guns were buried in the earth, and the army hurried away.

Lyman Main was a hunter, and had encountered the bear, as well as the more timid game. Deer were abundant; turkeys so numerous as scarcely to pay for the shooting. Joseph Cole and David Hicks, from Virginia; John Duncan and William Norris, on Norris Branch, were old-time settlers of Troy. The primitive school was conducted by Mrs. Bush, a person at the time about fifty years of age. Cole erected a grist- and saw-mill, in 1816, in the northeast portion of the township. David Bush ran a small distillery. Thomas Gill was the first blacksmith, and shifted as occasion called to various localities. David Carter, an early settler, was killed at the raising of James Martin's barn. Henry Cline was a settler of 1814. Henry Worline was an old-time neighbor to Cline. William Hinton had a hand-mill, with which rude machine grain was pulverized. Corn was grated by families at home, and occasional trips taken to mill. Dixey owned a large portion of the river-lands, which he leased to the various settlers, some of whom raised cabins, tried a crop, and abandoned the field. Not all who went West remained, and of those who stayed enterprise and intellect were as essential to success then as now. The surface of Troy is hilly near the Whetstone, but level farther back; the soil is sandy on the bottom and clay on the upland. The timber is unselected and valuable, consisting of oak, sugar-maple, elm, ash, and walnut. We close our township record by saying that our information has been gathered from the lips and writings of the surviving settlers, and while their memory may have proved at times in fault, their record is in the main reliable. The people of to-day are deeply indebted to the border race for what they now enjoy, and should encourage any effort to be made to enlarge the history of the early day. To-day the log houses falling into decay are yet numerous, and here and there a builder; to-morrow they will all have passed away, and the rush of progress will obliterate all but the relics of the museum and the reminiscences herein recorded.

PERSONAL SKETCHES OF PROMINENT MEN AND PIONEERS.

THE MONEY FAMILY, THOMPSON TOWNSHIP.

HISTORY is like wine, which grows in value with the lapse of time. There are representatives of some few families in all civilized lands who cherish a pride of birth, and look with satisfaction over the by-gone years, adown a long line of ancestry, tracing their origin to some who, in their day and generation, distinguished their career by valorous deed and benevolent act. In coming years the records of this Atlas will be perused with curiosity and eagerness to ascertain the names and deeds of this County's pioneers. In their research they will find with pleasure the records of the Money family, and eagerly read and talk of them. The Moneys are of English and Welsh descent. Their forefathers emigrated from England in 1776, and settled in Fairfield County, Virginia. War's alarms still resounded through the land when Money took up the occupation of farming, and, combining the spiritual with the physical, labored as an agriculturist and also as a Methodist preacher. Five children were born to the family,—four sons and one daughter,—all of whom lived to be very old, with one exception. These children were respectively named Ephraim, James, William, Nicholas, and Nancy. Following the tillage of the soil as their chief pursuit, they were ever regarded as holding rank among the worthy and respected. They have numbered their years and passed away, leaving an influence upon those who follow, unfelt yet powerful.

James Money was born in Fairfax County, Virginia, about 1785. His educational advantages were very limited. He was naturally thoughtful, and during his toil upon the farm learned the great value of time and money. In his early manhood, at the age of twenty-three, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Hutchens, daughter of Francis Hutchens. This lady was a native of Virginia, having been born in the county of Frederick in the year 1791.

There were born to James and Mary Money eight children,—two sons and six daughters, namely: Nicholas, Elizabeth, Mary Ann, Rachel, Lucinda, James W., Ruth, and Frances Jane. Rachel and Lucinda have died, the rest are still in the enjoyment of life's favors. Happy in the marriage relation, all the members of this family have been prospered in their business, and resolutely overcame difficulties. One by one the family circle was broken, another and yet another vacancy occurred at the festive board, and loved forms were absent forever. James died in Virginia: he had lived respected and died regretted. His wife was good and true, faithful and loving. Her constant care was to inure her children to frugal and industrious habits, and prepare them to act well their part in life. She died in 1884, in Muskingum County, Ohio.

Nicholas, son of James and Mary Money, was born January 31, 1809, in Frederick County, Virginia. He early learned the salutary lessons of want and necessity; gave his leisure to reading and reflection, and acquired an education and culture worthy of his manhood. His father's decease, while he was yet a youth of sixteen years, devolved upon him the important and noble work of aiding his kind mother to support and take care of the entire family.

Mrs. Money had removed, in the fall of 1824, with her children—seven in number—to Guernsey County, Ohio. They had little of money but the name: ten dollars being all their resources. Nicholas sought employment wherever and whenever it could be found. At one time he was seen working on a farm, at another among the builders of the National Road; and so ten years passed on and brought their changes. Nicholas had made the acquaintance, meanwhile, of Miss Marab White, a native of Guernsey County, and born there in 1815. The young people loved, and joined destiny by marriage during the fall of 1831. Children were born, but their lives were made brief by the insatiable archer, and their mother, too, was called away when the blossoms heralded the spring-time of 1834.

On July 20, 1835, Mr. Money again married. His second wife was Susan Cunningham, who was born November 19, 1801. This marriage resulted in the addition to the family name of four children, but one of whom survives, namely, Catharine E. A. Money. This child began her existence within the humble walls of a log cabin in Thompson Township, Delaware County, on October 31, 1843, and on February 12, 1866, was married to George C. Welch, of Muskingum County, now of Union County. To George and Catharine two children were given: Howard Nicholas Money Welch, born July 9, 1867, and Patten M. Welch, in 1869.

In the month of November, 1836, Mr. N. Money settled on the land where he still resides. He purchased one hundred acres of woodlands and entered upon the work of preparing it for tillage. Years passed, and habitual industry and love of real estate enabled him to purchase adjacent lands, till he at present is the owner of about six hundred acres of farming ground and a fine showing of other property. His possessions are not mentioned as the holder of wealth, but the laudable pride of successful effort.

Incidental to his present position of affluence, the steps by which he attained it are full of interest to others; it is a confirmation of the old truth, that "he who walks had first to creep." He was very poor when he began, and he looked upon the broad fields and rich abodes of the rich, and resolved that if honest labor and rigid economy would do anything, it would secure for him like possessions.

Soon after marriage, he bought for one dollar a flax-patch. Assisted by his faithful wife he pulled the straw. His wife thrashed it out herself, and the crop was sold for about four dollars. This sum was their total outfit for housekeeping. Not needful then the luxuries which swell expense and prevent alliances of the youth of present times. Successful in the beginning, the brothers Nicholas and James W. Money are to-day the largest sheep-raisers in the County. Their wool clip this season has been taken from four thousand head of sheep. In politics, Mr. Money believed in and supported the principles of the old Whig party. When the land was full of discord and the demands of slavery grew extortionate, we find Mr. Money in the Republican ranks, supporting, by influence of example, the endangered union of the States, and an advocate of war as the direct road to lasting peace.

It is with satisfaction such as can be enjoyed by comparatively few that Mr. Money can take a retrospective view of his career. While he has labored to be among the first and foremost agriculturists and wool-growers of this section of country, he has not been unmindful of the duties and obligations which rest upon him as a dependent being, and yields his allegiance and gives his support to the Disciple Church organization.

Observing the tendency of good schools to restrain the vicious, inculcate morality, and advance the best interests of the community, we find the subject of our sketch a constant and ardent advocate of the noble and worthy common school system. Known as a man of integrity and solid worth, he is called to serve as one of the Directors of the Richwood Bank, in Union County.

We take our leave of him in the trust that the same sterling qualities which have enabled him to reach his present vantage-ground may long be continued to the use and profits of his neighbors and associates, and in his life he illustrated the truth of the old laconic, "He is noblest who is most useful."

JAMES W. MONEY.

This gentleman, brother to Nicholas, has much of identical history. His birthplace was Frederick County, Virginia, the date March 2, 1821. At the age of six he removed West. He married Caroline Russell, of Thompson Township, this County, in February, 1843. To the family three children were born: a girl—Elizabeth, born January 3, 1849, and died November 16, 1858—and two boys, Henry, born June 3, 1851, and William, born September 14, 1856. Mrs. Money died May 27, 1858, and for years Mr. Money lived a solitary life. He finally married again on October 26, 1865. The lady of his choice was Miss Elizabeth Pile, of Union County, with whom he is now living.

DR. RALPH HILLS.

This gentleman, son of Dr. James H. Hills, was born in Worthington, Franklin County, Ohio, in the year 1810. His early childhood was spent in his native county, with the exception of a short period passed in Madison and Logan Counties.

When only eleven years of age, he came with his parents to Delaware County, in April, 1822, since which time, with the exception of a few years, it has been his home. Up to the age of fifteen, his time was mostly spent in school. He then launched out upon the sea of life for himself and engaged in teaching, first in the country where now stands the town of Ostrander, boarding, as was the custom then, around among his patrons. He subsequently taught in Marion, Ohio, then in Urbana. While teaching at the latter place, he began the study of medicine with Dr. Joseph Carter, a leading physician of that town.

Returning to Delaware, he continued the study of medicine with his father, and taught a few winters, first in the Avery District, west of Delaware, and subsequently in Liberty Township, receiving the highest price then paid to teachers, ten dollars per month, with the additional favor of being permitted to board at one place, that he might the better pursue his studies.

In 1830-31 he attended one course of lectures in the Ohio Medical College, in Cincinnati. He was licensed to practice medicine in the spring of 1831, when he was only twenty years of age. For twenty-four years he followed his profession in Delaware, and then removed to Columbus, Ohio, when he published the "Medical Counselor," through two volumes. He was then appointed Superintendent of the Central Ohio Lunatic Asylum, which position he occupied upwards of eight years. Dr. Hills was then called to West Virginia, to open and develop the State Hospital for the Insane, which, before the Rebellion, had been inaugurated by the mother-State, and was intended to be the model hospital of the country. He remained there nearly seven years, engaged as architect, builder, and medical superintendent at the same time.

Having spent over forty years in active professional duty, just fifteen of them with the insane, and being over sixty years of age, he retired from these duties in 1871, and returned to his early home to rest. Since then he has declined all solicitations to practice, and has spent a portion of his time in Europe. He has also engaged in some building operations, particularly in the construction of fire-proof buildings, the development of the principles of which he has made a special study for some years, and in which he has made some very valuable improvements.

Dr. Hills has been twice married; first to Miss Jane Evans, of Delaware, originally of Wales, by whom he had one son, James Harvey, who died in 1862, leaving him childless, but with one grand-daughter, who is his only lineal descendant. His wife dying in 1848, he married a second companion in 1849, in the person of Mrs. Emily G. Hunt, of Central New York, previously of Connecticut, who yet lives to share his honors and his rest.

Dr. Hills' professional honors have not been limited. He was once President of the State Medical Convention; was several years Secretary of the State Medical Society; was often a representative to the American Medical Association, and in 1875 was President of the Delaware County Medical Association.

JUDGE JOSEPH WILLIAMS.

This gentleman is the oldest resident of Delaware, having been here for nearly sixty years. He was born in Berkshire County, Massachusetts, August 3, 1792. He served for three years in the war of 1812 as sutler. In May, 1817, he became the husband of Miss Charlotte Avery, a native of Connecticut, born April 1, 1799, by whom he had one son and five daughters. The son and one daughter are deceased.

In the fall of 1817 he emigrated west, and settled on a farm in Delaware County, Ohio, where he remained for several years. In the spring of 1825 he went into the mercantile business in the village of Delaware, in which he continued for some twenty years.

Early in 1829, Mr. Williams was called to mourn the loss of his wife, who died on the 23d of February.

His present companion was Mrs. Charinda Starling, whose maiden name was Dilano. She is a niece of Dr. Goodale, of Columbus, Ohio.

In 1845, Mr. Williams was made President of the Delaware County State Bank, of Ohio, and still retains the same position, the name of the institution having been changed to that of the Delaware County National Bank. Judge Williams is entitled to great credit as one who has aided very largely in building up the town of Delaware, and far more so than the public generally have understood. He has aided in most of the business operations of a public character, though always conservative and cautious in all movements of a speculative nature, by example if not by advice holding in check the most rash and daring. He has aided, to a degree beyond general knowledge, by loaning his means to those who, in legitimate business, needed his assistance. This has frequently been done in a most quiet way, sometimes without bond, mortgage, or other security than his faith in the honor of his fellow-men. It is a remarkable fact, that tells much for a man who has been a money-lender all the years of his manhood, lending to his friends, not for the interest, but to aid them in their business, that in all those years he has never sued a man for his money. A prudent man in his own business, he has given much valuable, safe advice to others, the influence of which will be felt in the future history of Delaware.

Mr. Williams has never been marked for his open benevolence, but an old and intimate acquaintance, who possesses fuller knowledge of his history than any other citizen of Delaware, and to whom the biographer is indebted for many facts contained in this sketch, states that he has chanced to observe the quiet, sly transmission of money, by means of the parting grip of the hand, to such as he knew stood in need of it; these acts of unpretentious beneficence bringing tears to the eyes of the recipient; and there is good reason to believe that such acts have not been rare. The Judge is an honored and honorable pioneer of Delaware. May his days and years be yet many!

The father of the subject of this narrative was Abraham Williams, and was born in Connecticut, September 11, 1765, died January 6, 1847.

The mother was Anna Williams, born in Connecticut, July 12, 1767, died January 20, 1842.

DEACON JAMES GILLIES was born in the State of Maryland, June 1, 1772. In 1797 he married Jane Celler, who was born June 6, 1792. He had a family of two sons and five daughters, one son and two daughters still living, viz.: T. C. Gillies, Sarah P. Gillies, and Mrs. Jane Findley. In 1802, Mr. Gillies emigrated to Ohio, and after a residence of seven years in Jefferson County, moved to Delaware County in 1809. Here he held the offices of Township Trustee and County Commissioner.

When quite a young man he became connected with the Presbyterian denomination, and for some forty years occupied the position of Deacon in the same. He died January 10, 1844; his wife, October 8, 1844. His eldest son, Thomas C. Gillies, was born February 1, 1798, in Maryland; married Maria Wilson April 7, 1836; had a family of five children, one surviving. For some fifteen years he was Justice of the Peace. He was also a captain of a rifle company at an early day. He and his wife are connected with the Presbyterian Church. He has upon his place a sugar-camp, from which sugar or molasses has been made every year excepting one since 1813.

was born in Delaware County, Ohio, February 17, 1835. He was raised on a farm, but being of a mechanical turn of mind, turned his attention to working with tools, and, although he never formally learned any trade, he became quite a proficient workman.

December 28, 1858, he married Nancy Jane Findley, born in Delaware County, ——. His family has comprised seven children,—five living.

In 1865 he settled upon the place of his present residence. It was at that time a dense wilderness, but the forest has been cleared away and the spot is now a garden of productiveness and beauty. The old log cabin, built by Mr. Chambers at that time, still serves him as an abode. A view of this (now old) structure may be seen on another page of this work.

His father was Cyrus Chambers, Sr., a native of Rutland County, Vermont, and emigrated to Delaware County about the year 1826, where he still resides. His mother was Susannah Janes, of New York. The family consisted of six sons and three daughters,—three sons and three daughters still living. Mrs. Chambers died October, 1845. In December, 1845, Mr. Chambers married Mrs. Margaret Hedrick (whose maiden name was Coppage), by whom he had three sons and two daughters, all now living.

was born in Frederick County, Maryland, March 11, 1809. He was the youngest son in a family of six sons and six daughters. He lost his father by death when he was a mere lad. For several years he clerked for his brother in a country store, which he subsequently carried on for himself.

January 10, 1832, he married Savilla Smith, born in Frederick County, Maryland, in March, 1810, by whom he has had four sons and seven daughters, of whom two sons and one daughter died young. In the fall of 1835 he came to Ohio, and settled in Delaware County. He has acted as School Director for many years, was Justice of the Peace for three years, also Supervisor for a time. He cast his first vote for General Jackson, in 1832, and has always been a Democrat. He is conservative in his views, and professes no sympathy with ultraism in any party. With a residence of forty years in the County, he belongs to the old and substantial class of the community.

H. B. WILLIS

was born in Delaware County, Ohio, January 7, 1841. His boyhood was spent upon a farm, with but limited school advantages. At the age of twenty he obtained his time from his father and worked a year and a half for himself, and then enlisted in the 20th Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and served three years in the late war. In 1871 he bought the farm upon which he now resides. March 3, 1871, he married Mary E. Merryman, born in Union County, Ohio, October 15, 1849. She was the daughter of Hanson Merryman, who emigrated from Maryland to Ohio at an early day.

The father of the subject of this sketch was B. H. Willis, a native of Vermont, and came to Ohio about the year 1837, and after a two years' residence in Knox County, moved into Delaware County. The old gentleman is now in his seventy-first year, and is in excellent health for his age. He has been a leading man in his community, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church since his boyhood.

MRS HORACE P. MC MASTER

BENJAMIN M'MASTER.

This early pioneer of Delaware County was born in Owego, New York, September 24, 1795. He was the third child in a family of four, whose names were David, Catherine, Benjamin, and Hugh. After the birth of Benjamin, his father, Robert McMaster, moved to Ontario County, New York, where he soon died. The subject of this sketch was at that time about five years old. After her husband's death Mrs. McMaster was twice married, to Messrs. Currie and Noble respectively, by whom she had three children, whose names were Lewis and Louisa Currie and Moses Noble. Before she left the State she buried both of these husbands.

In August, 1811, the family, with the exception of David, came West, and located at Marietta, where they remained two years. Mr. B. McMaster then removed to the Scioto River, five miles north of the little town of Franklin, in Franklin County, and worked for a time in a saw-mill, the first one built on the river. Here was saved the lumber that went into the old State-house at Columbus. In the spring of 1814 he moved to the village of Worthington, and lived in part of the house in which Colonel Reboon kept hotel. At this place Mr. McMaster assisted in putting in the dam for the Worthington Manufacturing Company. In the fall of the same year he moved to Delaware County, and cleared twenty acres of land in Orange Township for a Dr. Warren. This was an old deadening, parts of which are to-day a heavy forest, some of the trees being three feet in diameter. In 1817 he moved to Goshen Township, Champaign County. On February 12, 1818, Mr. McMaster married Arminda, daughter of Lemuel G. Humphrey, of Liberty Township, Delaware County, who emigrated from the State of Connecticut in September, 1823. Mrs. McMaster died, leaving three children, the oldest not quite five years old; their names were Robert G., Horace P., and William A. After his wife's death, Mr. McMaster returned to Delaware County, taking the children to their mother's relatives. The mother of Mr. McMaster lived with him nearly a year after his marriage; she then married, and moved to Clark County, where she died about a year later.

In October, 1824, Mr. McMaster married Mrs. Electa Perry, the mother of three young children: William A., Elmina, and Philemon P. In this union Mr. McMaster was blessed with a family of five children, one dying in infancy; the others were George, Esther, Hiram, and Elatia.

In the fall of 1828 he purchased one hundred acres of government land in Brown Township, known as the "Salt Section." Here he erected a log cabin, and moved into it late in December following, between nine and ten o'clock at night, the snow being some fifteen inches deep. At this time he had a family of seven little children, the oldest being less than ten years old. The locality was then a perfect wilderness, seven miles distant from Delaware. Mr. McMaster's worldly wealth consisted at this time of a yoke of steers, one heifer, ten head of young hogs, a dog, a small supply of household goods and provisions, and fifty dollars in money. With the money he made his first payment upon his newly-purchased farm, there yet remaining three yearly payments of fifty dollars each. During that season he was compelled to borrow corn to make bread for his family. The following spring he cleared and fenced ten acres and planted them in corn. The following summer he cleared two more acres for an orchard, which he set out the subsequent spring. The method of clearing this land was a little novel: a cross-cut saw was brought into requisition, the father at one end and his two young sons at the other, the older at the handle and the younger at a rope attached to the handle. The timber was very large, some trees being five feet and over in diameter.

As the boys grew up they were put out to work at the age of eighteen, the father and his younger boys tending the farm. When the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad was in process of construction, Mr. McMaster took some shares of the stock assigned to Delaware County. The first train passed over this road on February 22, 1851. The following spring Mr. McMaster, in company with Israel Potter and Joseph Riley, built the first warehouse at Ashley, to which place he removed in January, 1852, having built a dwelling there the previous autumn.

In April, 1852, he sold his farm to his son, H. P. McMaster, who is the present owner. A view of his residence will be found among the illustrations of this work. A year or two later, Mr. B. McMaster became sole owner of the warehouse. The first year he and a man by the name of Taylor slaughtered seven thousand hogs, Mr. McMaster acting as book-keeper and treasurer, which duties he performed with remarkable accuracy, notwithstanding the fact that his educational advantages were exceedingly limited. He was also honored with various township offices, such as Treasurer, Justice of the Peace, etc. His high social standing and his accurate business habits would secure him an election where the political vote was three to one against his ticket. He was much sought after as a counselor, and was a special favorite among the Irish class of the population.

After several years of business life, Mr. McMaster retired from active labor in the full vigor of life, believing that man was created for something higher than to remain a servant to physical labor all his days. On the 1st of June, 1869, he was called to mourn the loss of his companion by death, who passed away after a painful illness of about six months.

Mr. McMaster is possessed of unusual vigor of body and mind, both of which have been strikingly exhibited through a long and useful life. The intellectual largely predominates over the physical, the benevolent over the selfish. His mother was a power, and goodness, and that man is happy just in proportion as he is obedient to the eternal law of his being. He is a firm believer in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of the human race. These noble principles have ever been his guide, and lie at the foundation of that large benevolence and kindness of heart that have ever characterized him.

HORACE P. M'MASTER,

second son of the subject of this sketch, was born in Goshen Township, Champaign County, Ohio, December 20, 1821. Married Rebecca Main January 19, 1843. Miss Main was the daughter of Saberas Main, who emigrated to Ohio from Virginia about the year 1815, and located in Troy Township, Delaware County. She was born in Troy Township September 30, 1822. Mr. McMaster has one adopted child, Mary E., daughter of his brother, Robert G. McMaster. She was born December 8, 1847; her mother died when Mary was an infant.

Cleveland, Ohio, of April 14, 1875.]

DELAWARE FENCE CO.—The wrought iron fences made by this company are the result of much care and experience in this line of manufacture. The patterns are neatly gotten up, and the workmanship of the best character. A great many of these fences have been put up by the company at home and abroad, and in every case they elicit admiration. Their strength and firm setting is an especial feature of importance. The very obliging disposition of the company has rendered the management very popular.

NEWARK, O., May 21, 1874.

O. F. MCHURIN & SON, Dealers in and Agents of the Delaware Fence Company:

Dear Sirs,—With pleasure I comply with your request, and give you my opinion of the wrought iron fence erected for me by the Delaware Fence Company. I regard it as the best fence I have ever seen. The arrangement and combination in structure certainly gives it great strength, and in the very important qualities of strength, beauty, and durability, which are so admirably connected in this fence, I do not think it can be excelled. The way it is anchored in the ground makes it absolutely impossible for the frost to throw it out of line or affect it in any way. I think it is really an everlasting fence, and the cheapest and best now offered. Wanting a large amount and desiring a fence wherein beauty, strength, and durability were best combined, I spent much time in examining the matter, counseled with those whose opinions are of practical value, and I came to the conclusions above expressed, and now that the fence is erected on my ground, I am fully satisfied that they are correct. In conclusion, I desire to say that Mr. Abbott, who was sent to superintend the setting, is a gentleman, and is the right man in the right place. Believing that the erection of these fences will add immensely to the attraction of our beautiful city, I sincerely hope that you may meet with success in their sale.

Yours truly, ANDREW WEIANT.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 29, 1874.

The Delaware Fence Company will find inclosed my check on the Bank of North America, New York, for the amount of the bill for Dr. Skillman's fence. The fence arrived in good order and gives good satisfaction. It is very neat and answers the purpose for which it was intended very well.

Very respectfully, JOHN W. SCOTT.

Office and Works of Fenton Manuf'g Co.,
CLEVELAND, O., May 28, 1874.

Delaware Fence Company:

Gentlemen,—Your agent, Mr. Abbott, has just completed — feet of your No. 4 fence for me, and I like it very much. I find every one that passes it examines it closely, and pronounces it nice, strong, and durable. I have to answer many inquiries as to where made, price, etc. If you will send me some circulars I will give them to parties who are building, and looking for a good, cheap fence. Think I can do good for you. I paid your agent in full and took his receipt.

Yours respectfully, C. F. FENTON.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., April 12, 1875.

Delaware Fence Company:

Gentlemen,—Please find inclosed a draft for $346, the amount of your bill. We think we shall be able to make some sales for you, as your fence is greatly admired by all.

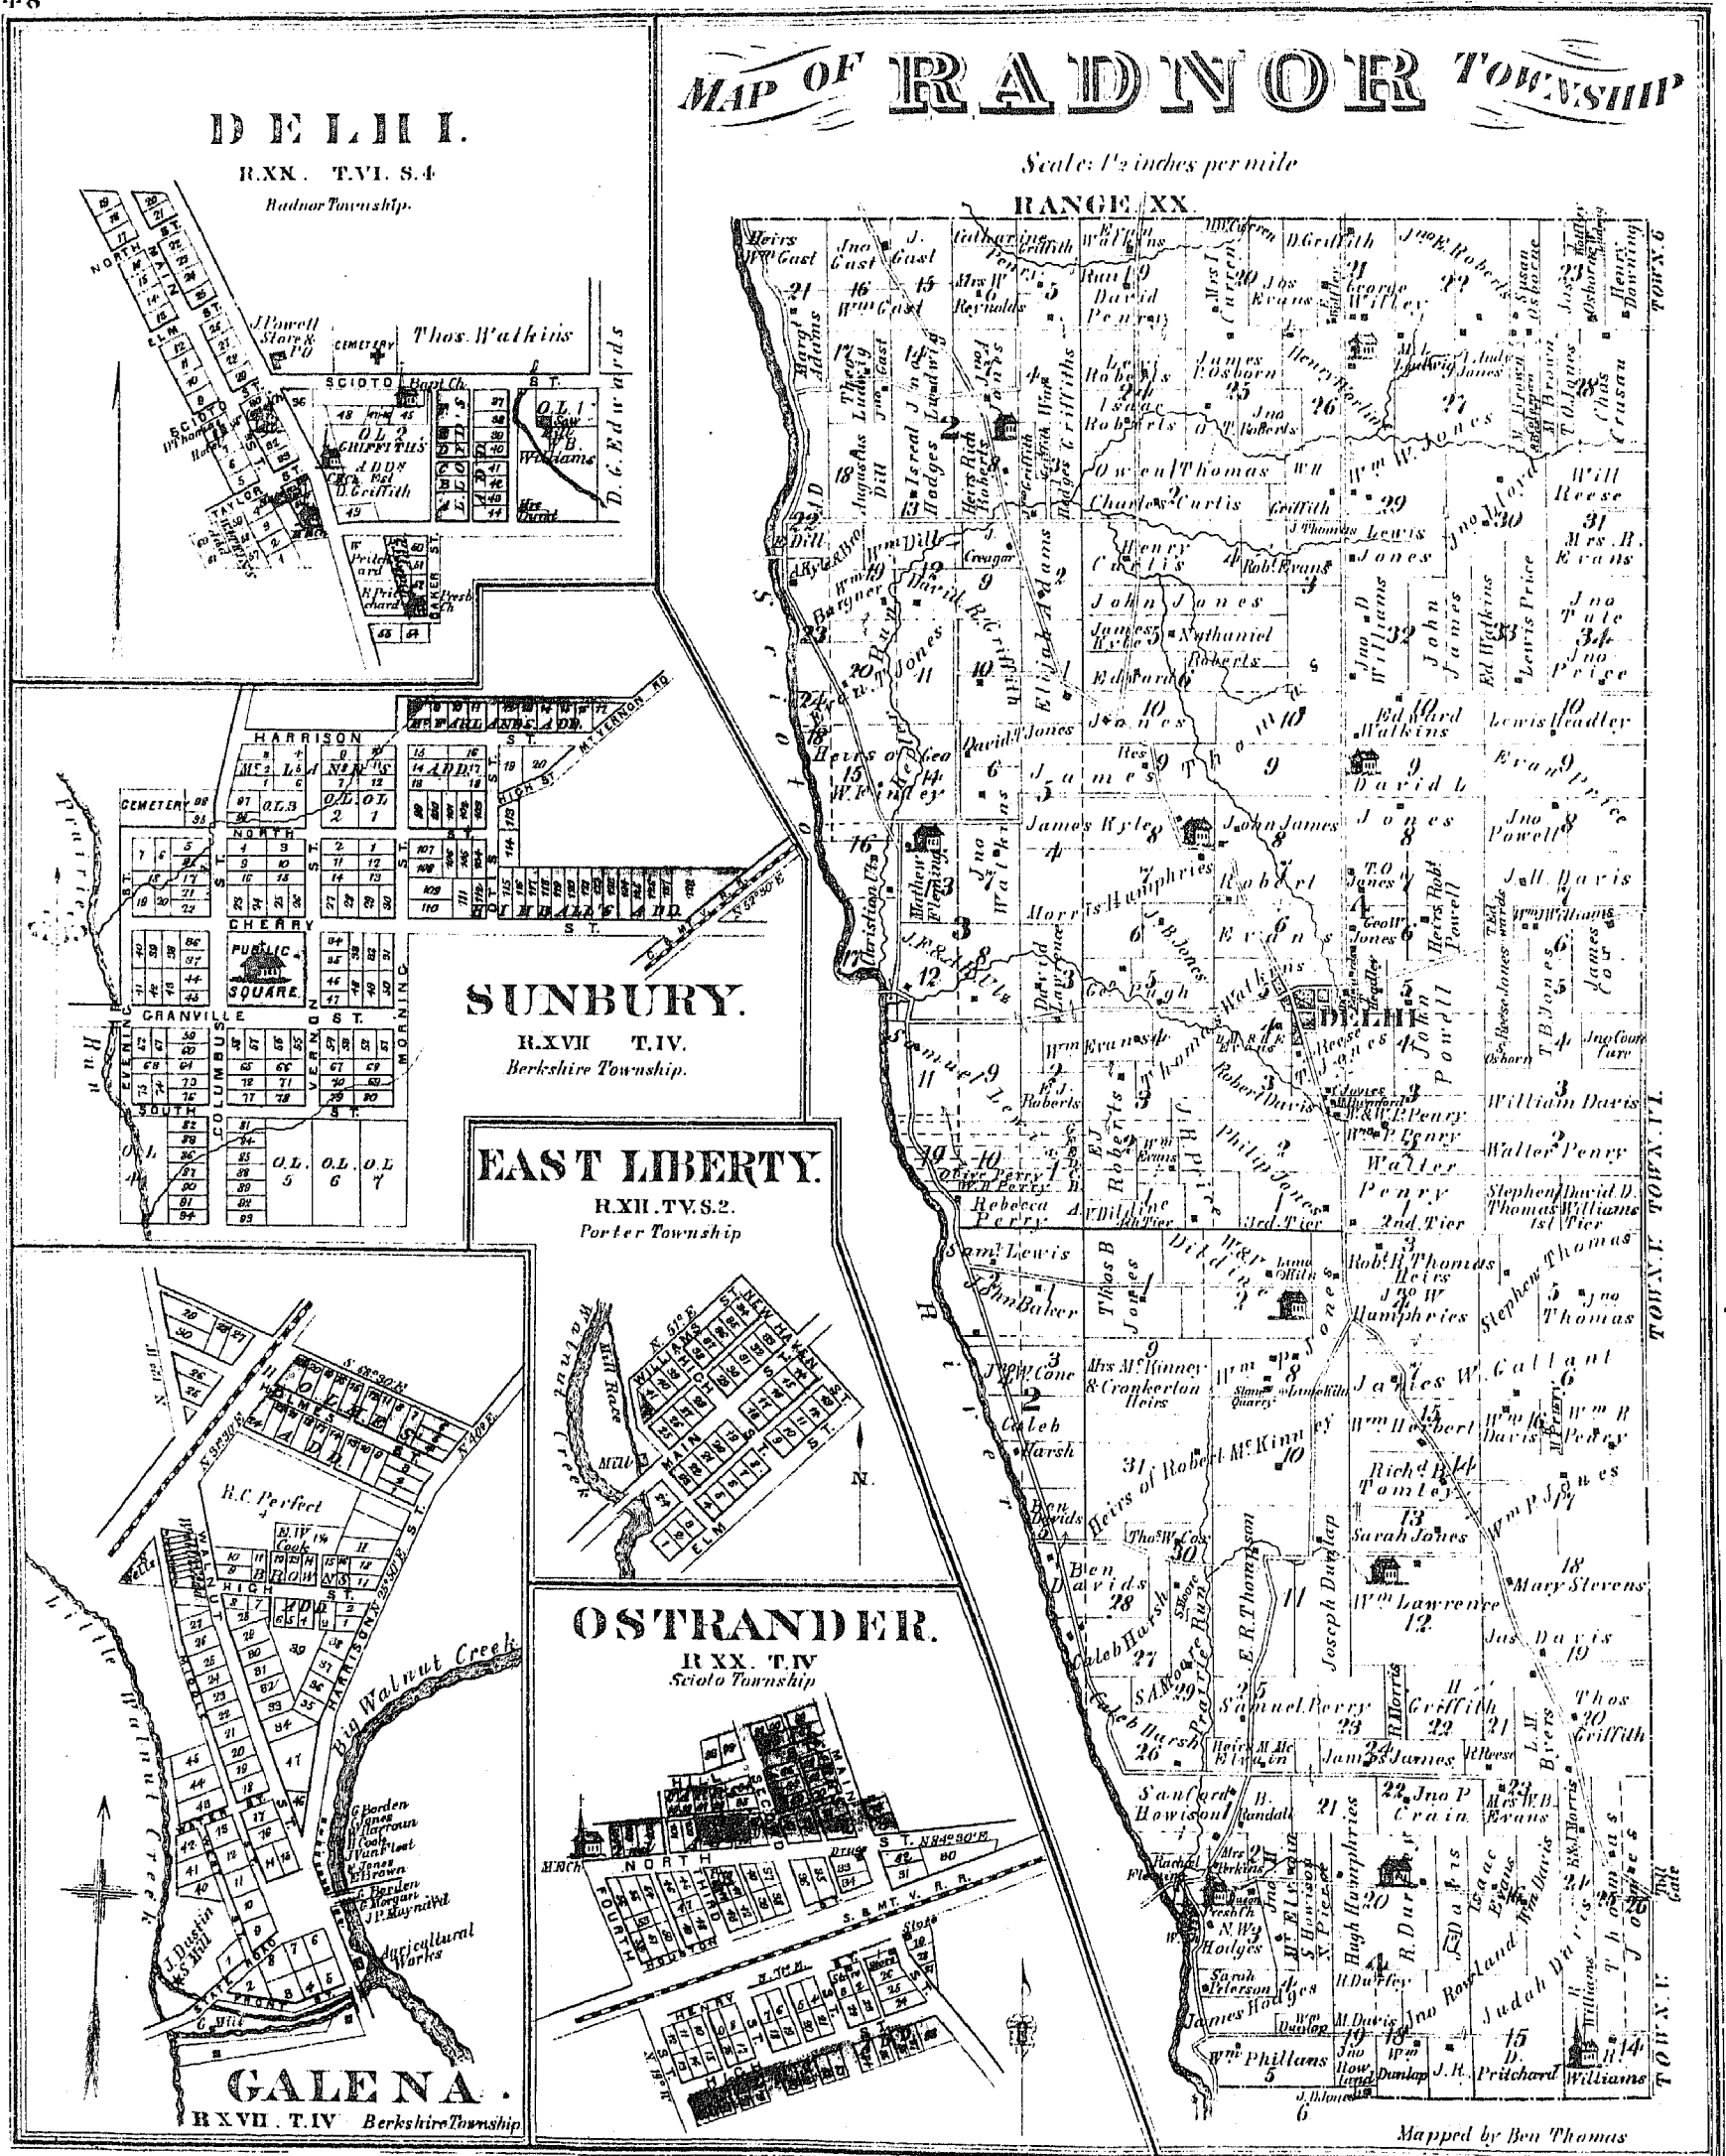

Yours truly, T. B. MILLS & CO.

THIS FENCE IS USED EXTENSIVELY FOR FARM RESIDENCES.
