OTTAWA,

COUNTY, OHIO.

HISTORY OF OTTAWA COUNTY, OHIO.

OTTAWA COUNTY was formed March 6th, 1840. It derives its name from a tribe of Indians, whose last home, in Ohio, was on the banks of the Maumee river. Ottawa is an Indian word, signifying "trader," and was applied to this tribe on account of their commercial transactions with the early white settlers, thier principal stock in trade being the fur and skins of wild animals.

This county was formed from Sandusky, Erie and Lucas counties, and embraces an area of 255.25 square miles; being 163,340 acres. The surface for the most part is level, a portion of it being within the limits of what was formerly known as the Black Swamp, because of the rich, black loam of which the soil is composed, and the low, marshy land in the vicinity of the lake shore. A portion of the eastern part of the county is within the boundary of what is known as the Fire Lands, so called from the fact that the State of Connecticut donated about half a million acres of land, in 1793, to certain persons whose property had been destroyed by fire, by the English, during the revolutionary war. That part of the county, from the mouth of Portage river, six miles west and five miles east, extending from the lake shore on the north, to Mud creek and Sandusky bay on the south, containing about 80,000 acres, may properly be denominated prairie, interspersed, however, with small groves of timber.

Skirting the lake, and two miles back from the lake, is a strip of marsh land eight miles in length, most of which produces wild grass, and except in extremely wet seasons, is used as pasturage. The land back of this narrow strip of marsh, gradually rises, and is slightly undulating, and was covered with valuable timber, the principal varieties of which were black walnut, hickory, black ash, white ash, burr oak, white elm, sycamore, poplar, cottonwood, locust, etc. The soil of this section of the county is a black loam, with an argillaceous substratum, in many places thirty feet in depth. It is very productive, yielding bountiful crops year after year, without the necessity of artificial fertilization. Corn and wheat especially, grow luxuriantly, and a large harvest rarely fails to reward the labor of the husbandman.

Oats, barley, and other cereals yield abundant crops, in seasons favorable to their growth and maturity, but are not relied upon with the same confidence as either wheat or corn. Blackbirds were so numerous, and so destructive to the growing crops for many years, that a reward of one half cent was paid for each scalp, by the County Commissioners, during the spring months.

The soil in the eastern part of the county is well adapted to fruit growing, but especially the grape, which, for the past few years, has been thoroughly tested, and has, without exception, proved a success, as the millions of pounds of grapes, annually produced, fully attest. The grape-growing district is confined almost exclusively to the eastern range of townships, including the island portion of the county, named, respectively, Catawba, Danbury, Portage, and Put-in-Bay. For detailed statement of products and other statistical matter, the reader is referred to the appended table, and the separate township sketches accompanying the maps published elsewhere in this work.

In the eastern part of the county there are portions of the surface covered with rocks, especially in Catawba and Danbury townships. Here are also found extensive quarries of limestone, which is shipped to Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo, and to other points, for building purposes. Lime-kilns have been erected, and large quantities of lime are here burnt and shipped to Cleveland and elsewhere.

In Clay township, also, immense quantities of lime are annually burnt and shipped to different points, and is in great demand, being a very white and superior quality of lime.

The fisheries have for many years furnished remunerative employment for a large number of men, residents of the lake shore townships and islands of Ottawa county. The business is still successfully pursued, although early settlers assure us the fish were far more numerous forty years ago than now, and that at the same rate of decrease for forty years to come, that has been witnessed in the past, will either make the catching of fish an unprofitable business or their consumption an expensive luxury.

The number of pounds owned and operated within the limits of the county, about 100.

Amount of capital invested will approximate $100,000.

Number of tons annually caught about 57.

Number of men employed, 300.

On the peninsula there are beds of gypsum, which are extensively worked, and large quantities of which are shipped in all directions.

This county was the theatre of a series of military operations long before its organization had been contemplated; indeed, many years prior to its first settlement, if we except a limited tract on the Peninsula. The first trial of arms in the second war with England, on the soil of Ohio, occurred on the 29th day of September, 1812, between a company of militia commanded by Captain Joshua T. Cotton, and a body of Indians, by whom our troops were greatly outnumbered. Most of our men behaved with calmness and courage, though, to their disgrace it must be said, that a few of them fled in dismay, taking the boats and rowing off to a place of safety, leaving their comrades to the mercy of an enraged and savage foe. Captain Cotton was ambushed, the red-skins concealing themselves in the tall marsh grass until our troops came within easy range, firing upon them and yelling like so many incarnate fiends, before their presence was suspected. Our troops were compelled to retire, which they did to the lake shore, where their boats had been left under guard; but finding them gone, guards and all, they retreated to a log house, where they defended themselves until the Indians, failing to either burn or drive them out, retired, and the survivors were relieved by a body of men who came in boats from the mouth of Huron river, three days after the attack. The general results of this skirmish were unimportant, and but a few were killed on either side.

During the war all of the early settlers were either killed, captured, or driven away, and everything left behind them was destroyed. Articles that could not be destroyed by fire were broken or otherwise wasted, and unfitted for use. A large pile of wheat—nearly 2,000 bushels, that had been brought over from one of the Bass Islands, and stored away in a large log pen built for the purpose,—was scattered in every direction, and the pen torn down.

The early settlers of this county and surrounding counties were called upon to make many sacrifices and endure untold hardships and toil, for the first decade or two after they began their pioneer settlements. Long journeys to mill, sometimes as much as fifty miles, with canoe or boat; sometimes over almost impassable roads, swimming their horses, making temporary bridges over the marshes, cutting out roads in the forest, sleeping out at night, often cold and hungry, and sometimes anxious for the safety of wife and children, who perhaps were left almost destitute of provision. The sick often necessarily suffered for want of medicine and medical attendance, as, perhaps, the nearest physician would be twenty, perhaps fifty miles away, with no road but the Indian trail between him and the settler's cabin. They were of course, without any of the luxuries they had enjoyed in their eastern homes, and were deprived of many of the ordinary comforts, not to say conveniences, of the older settlements. Churches and school-houses were not thought of for a number of years, and the missionaries who came this way were few and far between. There were occasional local causes operating to retard the rapid settlement of some parts of this county. Fever and ague prevailed at an early day to a fearful extent in portions of Northern Ohio, and Ottawa county was not exempt. One section of Catawba Island, and adjoining townships, had for many years a sickness among cattle known as "milk sickness." By eating a vegetable known as "tremble weed," the milk, and of course the butter as well, were so poisoned that their use caused an illness of the most terrible character, and even death sometimes ensued. Sheep and other animals, even wild animals, were poisoned by this weed—or by eating the flesh of animals that had died from its effects. One of the pioneers in Catawba told the writer that nothing else had so much retarded the settlement of that township as the presence of this noxious weed, from the effects of which some of his neighbors had suffered for weary months, and finally died.

Notwithstanding all the hardships, disadvantages and discouragements of those early days, the pioneer was a most hopeful and contented character; amid all the gloom and darkness that betimes gathered over him, the rainbow of hope was always visible to strengthen his arm, and encourage his heart.

The common hardships and common dangers of those stirring times bound the actors together by the strongest ties of sympathy and regard. You think of no one with whom you have associated, with so strong and deep a regard, as he with whom you have shared some great peril, or endured some common suffering or loss. So those frontiersmen, and their families, lived like a community of kindred, each interested in, and willing to share with his neighbor, whatever he possessed. There were no jealous rivalries; no efforts to excel in dress; none, or but little of the fashionable cant of the present day, and the thousand petty annoyances growing out of the demands of "society," as now organized, where your social position so largely depends on your bank deposit, your bonds and stocks, or your prospective financial standing, when a miserly parent has blessed mankind by leaving the world.

Despite all obstacles, they prospered in their labors, and were soon surrounded with "peace and plenty"—the possessors of their own homes—and, what is above all price, the possessors of a conscience undisturbed by the recollection of acts of cruelty or injustice to others.

Nearly all of the first settlers have gone to their long homes, and even those who came here a score of years later, belong to a generation who are rapidly passing away, leaving the fruit of their toil to those who shall succeed them.

PORT CLINTON, the county seat, is one hundred and twenty miles from Columbus. It is situated on a beautiful bay, on the right bank of Portage river. It has a fine harbor—in which is a light-house—is a place of considerable business, and has improved rapidly within the past few years.

There are three other incorporated villages in Ottawa county, Elmore, Oak Harbor, and Genoa, concerning which, some particulars are given elsewhere in this work.

The most noted event in the late war with England occurred on Lake Erie, only a few miles from the line of Ottawa. We mean, of course, Perry's capture of the enemy's fleet. As the island portion of the county is so connected with the history of this engagement, a brief notice of it will not be considered a digression from the object of this chapter.

The fleet under command of Commodore Perry, was built at Erie, and was ready for service in the month of August, 1813. It consisted of the ships Lawrence and Niagara, of twenty guns each, and seven smaller vessels, one of which carried four guns; one, three; two, of two guns each; and three of one gun each—in all, nine vessels, with fifty-four guns. Everything being in readiness, he sailed out to the head of the lake, and anchored in Put-in-Bay, opposite to, and thirty miles distant from Malden, where the British fleet lay under the heavy guns of the fort. Here Perry lay several days watching the movements of the enemy, and determined to give him battle the first favorable opportunity. The fleet of the British consisted of six vessels, carrying in all sixty-four guns, out-numbering the American fleet, ten guns. On the 10th of September, early in the morning, Perry saw his antagonist, Commodore Barclay, moving out, about ten miles distant, and immediately began to put everything in readiness for action, and bore up for him, having hoisted his Union Jack with the dying words of Captain Lawrence for a motto, "Don't give up the ship."

Cautiously they approached each other, until fifteen minutes after eleven, the enemy's headmost ship, the Detroit, sounded her bugle, and, amid the wild cheers of the entire fleet, she opened fire with her long guns on the Lawrence, which she was compelled to stand for forty minutes, without firing a shot, on account of the short range of her guns. Perry kept moving up as fast as possible, without waiting for the other vessels, which were not yet able, on account of the wind, to come up. Having gained a nearer position, the Lawrence opened her fire at five minutes before twelve o'clock, but was unable to do much damage.

All of the enemy's largest guns were directed against the Lawrence, whose deck was now streaming with blood, and covered with the limbs and mangled bodies of the killed and wounded. Her guns were dismounted, and the vessel reduced to a wreck. Leaving the Lawrence in command of Lieut. Yarnell, Perry hauled down his Union Jack, and taking it under his arm, ordered a small boat to put him on board the Niagara, which had now come up. Amid a galling fire of musketry and cannister, he boarded the Niagara. The signal for close action was now given to all the vessels, and at once bore up and passed the head of the two ships and brig, giving them a raking fire. The whole fleet were now in action, the Niagara moving up alongside of the British Commodore. The smaller vessels, now in close quarters, poured round after round of grape and cannister into the British vessels, which were now enclosed between these and the ship Niagara, which was thundering away with terrific force, carrying destruction in every direction. Every British vessel struck her colors, the engagement lasting three hours.

The Lawrence was so disabled that soon after Perry left her deck, she was compelled to strike her colors. Our total loss, on all the vessels, was, killed, 27; wounded, 96. Of these, 22 were killed, and 60 wounded on board the Lawrence.

The slain of both crews were committed to the lake, immediately after the action. The next day, the officers of both fleets who had fallen, were buried on South Bass Island, both the American and British crews uniting in the solemn ceremony.

Commodore Barclay had lost one arm in the battle of Trafalgar. In this engagement he lost the use of the other, from a wound in the shoulder blade, and was otherwise severely wounded.

Commodore Perry's brief dispatch to our government, "we have met the enemy and he is ours," was hailed as the harbinger of peace, and carried joy to every loyal heart in the country.

A few facts concerning the early navigation of Lake Erie will be of interest to the general reader. The first vessel that crossed the lake was built at Erie, then called Fort Frontinae, by Robert de La Salle, in 1679. She sailed September 18th, the same year for Green Bay, having on board Father Lewis Hennessin, a missionary, and other passengers. She took on a cargo of furs, and while on the return passage was lost in Lake Huron, with all on board. She was sixty tons burthen, fore-and-aft rigged. Nothing larger than a birch canoe had been upon the bosom of the lake (Erie) prior to this date. In 1766 four vessels plied the lake, named respectively, Gladwin, Lady Charlotte, Victory, and Boston. A vessel named Brunswick made her first trip in 1767, and was lost the following season.

Messrs. Sterling & Porteous built the Enterprise at Detroit in 1769. The boatmen who went from Schenectady with the rigging and stores for this vessel to Detroit, were each to receive $85 and ten gallons of rum. They were seventy days on Lake Erie, and two of their number starved to death, and the survivors were so near famished that they used their dead bodies to decoy ravens and eagles for several days. At length they arrived with their cargo at Detroit, having subsisted for some time on the flesh of eagles and ravens, which, at the time, they were glad to get, but for which they were never afterwards known to hanker.

The so-called "patriots" of the Canadian movement for liberty, in 1838, made Sandusky one of their points of rendezvous, and the islands were their favorite strongholds. Near Pelee Island they had a skirmish with a force of British cavalry, on the ice.

The next figure on the page of this history, which we shall briefly view, comes down within the recollection of the present generation. Not a single decade of years has yet passed since the North was startled by the piratical exploits of a young Virginian, an officer in the rebel army, named John Yates Beall, who undertook to liberate the confederate prisoners of war then confined on Johnson's Island, numbering 2,480, all but 100 of whom were officers.

This island is located in Sandusky bay, about four miles from its mouth, directly off Sandusky city, and about one mile from the Peninsula. It contains three hundred acres, and is covered with beautiful forest. The government had leased the east half of it for the purpose of making a camp for prisoners.

The United States had but one war vessel on the lakes, the Michigan, carrying eighteen guns. The capture of this boat would render it an easy matter to rescue the prisoners, and destroy the cities bordering on the lake. John Yates Beall attempted to effect her capture in the following manner: The steamer Philo Parsons, plying between Detroit, the islands, and Sandusky city, on her regular trip between these points, landed on the Canada side, at Sandwich, where four men came on board, and at Malden twenty more, bringing on board an old-fashioned trunk. As there were large numbers escaping to Canada from the draft, or returning to their homes, this party excited no comment, and the steamer went on her way. After leaving Kelly's Island for Sandusky, four men came toward the clerk, who, in the captain's absence, had command of the boat, and leveling revolvers at his head, compelled his surrender. The innocent looking, old-fashioned trunk, at the same moment flew open, and the whole party armed themselves with navy revolvers, bowie-knives, and hatchets, and took possession of the defenseless boat. The course was then changed, and after cruising about for some time, she was landed at the dock of Middle Bass Island. While there, the Island Queen, a steamer running between the islands and Sandusky, came along side, and suspecting nothing out of the usual order, threw out a plank for the purpose of landing some freight. She was immediately captured by the pirates, her captain and engineer making all possible resistance. An oath of secrecy, for twenty-four hours, was exacted of the passengers, and they were allowed to go on shore. The Island Queen was scuttled four miles out from the island, and the Parsons steamed on alone. She cruised for some time, evidently looking for a signal from the shore; and finally, the attempt to capture the Michigan was abandoned, and the Parsons, with her pirate crew, put back to the Detroit river, with the fire pouring out of her smokestacks, "looking like a scared pickerel," in the language of an old fisherman, who witnessed her hasty retreat. After reaching the Canadian shore, the steamer was scuttled. There were two parts to this well laid plot, the first being Beall's expedition by water, and the second a conspiracy on shore, by means of which the officers of the Michigan were to be thrown off their guard, so that upon a given signal, Beall could run in rapidly and surprise and capture the boat, releasing the prisoners and destroying Sandusky, Cleveland, Erie, and other places along the shore of the lake. But the plot on shore, under command of a man named Cole, failed. He was suspected, and arrested on the very eve of success, and the signal was never given.

In less than four months Beall was captured near the Suspension Bridge, tried by a military court, charged as a spy in Ohio and New York, and other crimes, and was convicted and hung on Governor's Island, in New York harbor, on the 24th day of February, 1865, as a "pirate and spy."

Jefferson Davis, with his characteristic effrontery, attempted to save the forfeited life of the pirate, by recognizing these atrocious acts, and asserting that they were committed by his authority, and recognized as the acts of lawful belligerents; the court, however, pronounced the verdict of "guilty," and the death penalty was accordingly executed. The excitement of these years of war has passed away, and all is now as calm and peaceful on the islands, where these bold and reckless scenes were enacted, as the bosom of the placid lake itself.

This little group of islands, forming Put-in-Bay township, it will be seen, has its important page in the early, as well as in the more recent history of the military and naval achievements of the country, for they have been the witnesses of skirmishes, battles, plots, defeats and victories, from a period almost as remote as the earliest white settlement, to within the past ten years.

We may congratulate the citizens of Ottawa county that the art of war, with its concomitant evils, has given way to the pursuits and appliances of industry, and that under the march of a higher civilization, peace and prosperity, now reign supreme within their midst — may we not hope to be forever undisturbed.

The following are the proceedings under which Ottawa county was erected, and the seat of justice established:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That a new county, to be called Ottawa, be, and the same is hereby formed out of the north part of Sandusky and Erie, and the eastern part of Lucas county, commencing at a point two miles north of the southeast corner of the surveyed township number six, north of range sixteen, called Bay township, Sandusky county, running thence west, on section lines to the western boundary line of said county; thence north, to the Lucas county; thence east, six miles; thence north, till it intersects the Michigan line; thence with said line until it intersects the line between the British and American governments in Lake Erie; thence down the lake with said line, so that a line to the mouth of Sandusky Bay will include Cunningham's Island; thence up Sandusky Bay to the place of beginning.

SEC. 2. That on the first Monday of April next, the legal voters residing within the new county of Ottawa, shall assemble within their respective townships, at the usual place of holding election, and proceed to elect their different county officers, who shall hold their offices until their next annual election, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

SEC. 3. That the Courts of Common Pleas and Supreme Courts of the County of Ottawa, shall be holden at some convenient house in the town of Port Clinton, until the permanent seat of justice for said county shall be established.

SEC. 4. That there shall be commissioners appointed, agreeably to an act entitled "An Act for the Establishment of Seats of Justice," to fix upon a permanent seat of justice for said new county of Ottawa, agreeably to the above recited act.

Following the passage of the above bill, this resolution was adopted by the legislature of the State:

"Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That William Rayne, of Trumbull county, John Johnson, of Coshocton county, and Joseph Aukeny, of Holmes county, be, and they are hereby appointed commissioners to view and permanently locate the seat of justice for the county of Ottawa, at such point or place in said county of Ottawa as they shall deem most in accordance with the wishes, convenience, and interest of the citizens thereof; and said commissioners shall be governed in all their doings by an act passed February 3, 1824, entitled "An Act Establishing Seats of Justice."

(Signed) THOS. J. BUCHANAN,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
WILLIAM M. LAUGHLIN,
Speaker of the Senate.
March 12th, 1840.

The following notice of their meeting, pursuant to the above resolution, was published in the Sandusky County Democrat, published at Lower Sandusky (now Fremont), in the months of April and May, 1840:

"Notice is hereby given to the citizens of Ottawa county, that we, the commissioners appointed by the last legislature, to locate the county seat of Ottawa county, will meet at Port Clinton, on the 21st of May next, and proceed to the permanent location of the county seat.

(Signed) WILLIAM RAYNE,
JOHN JOHNSON,
JOSEPH AUKENY,
Commissioners."

The commissioners were sworn to the impartial performance of their duty, by William B. Sylvester, a Justice of the Peace for Portage township, on the 22d day of May, 1840.

After examining several points with a view to locating the county seat, Port Clinton was determined upon. Pending their decision, large numbers of the citizens came in to see the commissioners, and urge the claims of their respective localities; Hartford (now Oak Harbor), Marble Head, Ottawa City, and Port Clinton, being the principal aspirants. The excitement amongst the the citizens ran so high that the commissioners were reluctant to make their decision known to the assembled populace, and therefore deposited the following letter to the Court of Common Pleas:

"To the Honorable, the Court of Common Pleas, of Ottawa County, Ohio:

WHEREAS, by a resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, passed March 12th, A.D. 1840, appointing the undersigned commissioners to permanently locate the county seat of Ottawa county, Ohio, and in accordance with the act passed February 3d, 1824, entitled "An Act establishing seats of Justice;" we, therefore, on Thursday, the 21st instant, proceeded to an examination of the various points offered by the different individuals, and after visiting the different extreme boundaries of the county, and viewing the points impartially, we hereby locate permanently the seat of Justice in the town of Port Clinton, in said county.

Given under our hands this 27th day of May, 1840.
(Signed) JOSEPH AUKENY,
JOHN JOHNSON,
Commissioners."

Agreeably to the second section of the act creating a new county, the qualified voters residing within the limits of Ottawa county held an election for county officers, on the first Monday of April, 1840, who were elected to serve until the next annual election.

The following gentlemen were elected:
Henry J. Miller, Sheriff.
Cyrus Moore, Treasurer.
James Kingham, Auditor.
W. B. Craighill, Appraiser.
Stanton H. Brown, Clerk.
Sam'l D. Jones, Recorder.
Eli Fogleson, Assessor.

Judiciary —
W. B. Craighill, Probate Judge.
Samuel Hollingshead, Gilbreath Stewart, Roger Kirk, Associate Judges.

Commissioners —
Ezekiel Rice, William Gill, A. Bell.

This county, in point of population, is the smallest in the State, with the exception of Paulding, the population of that county being but 8,544, while Ottawa, in 1870, had a total population of 13,364, a gain of 11,116 since the census of 1840.

BAY TOWNSHIP was organized in 1830 while still a part of Sandusky county. Samuel Hollingshead was the first Trustee, and Lewis L. Mackey the first Justice of this township. It contains 11,365 acres of land, and a population of 509, divided as follows: Native born, 378; foreign, 131.

The value of real estate is $155,055, and of chattel property $70,173. Total tax for all purposes, for 1872, was $4,207.19.

Bay township has no "Town or Township" debt, while her State debt or sinking fund is but $180.18.

One of the earliest settlers in this township was Mr.

Samuel Hollingshead, who came here in 1824, nearly fifty years ago. He is now 84 years of age, and still lives on the farm where he began to build up a home in the then wilderness of the west half a century ago.

Mr. Hollingshead was a soldier in the second war with Great Britain, and came here as a member of Company A, Capt. Morrison. The regiment to which his company was attached was commanded by Col. Reece Hill. He came from Huntingdon county, Penn., and being favorably impressed with the soil and climate, determined to settle in this locality, where he, ever since 1824, has made his home. Mr. Hollingshead has been one of the prominent men of Ottawa county ever since its organization, having held several important official positions, the duties of which he has always discharged with fidelity and marked ability.

The first settlements here were made by the French; but they made but little progress for many years in clearing up the country, being confined principally to the occupation of hunting, trapping, and trading with the Indians. Like the adjoining townships, the soil of Bay is a rich, black loam, well adapted to farming purposes. Corn is the leading crop, though wheat, oats, barley, and rye succeed well.

During the early days of this settlement corn sold for 25 cents a bushel, shelled. Wheat from 70 to 80 cents per bushel, and other grain and farm produce rated proportionately about the same. Tea and coffee sold for about 60 to 70 cents per pound. Sugar at 6½ cents per pound. A pure article of whisky sold for 20 cents per gallon. There was not much drunkenness, and quarreling amongst the first settlers was rare indeed. The Indians were more addicted to the use of liquor than the whites, and, although generally peaceable, were disposed to be quarrelsome when drinking.

On one occasion Mr. Hollingshead came in from the field and found five drunken red-skins at his cabin. His wife was cooking at a fire outside of the cabin by a log, and the Indians had been threatening to steal her babe, which she had in her arms. Mr. Hollingshead ordered them away, whereupon one of them drew a butcher-knife and advanced to meet him, flourishing the knife and making threats. Mr. H. seized a huge pair of old fashioned tongs, and striking the Indian a glancing blow on the head, almost completely scalped him, the scalp hanging down over his left ear. This Indian immediately retired from the engagement, but the others pounced upon Mr. Hollingshead at once, when a rough and tumble fight ensued, the Indians coming off second best. During the fight Mrs. Hollingshead came to the rescue of her husband and did good service. They were at length driven away with the rifle, which was brought from the cabin before the conflict ended. During the first years the blackbirds throughout this entire settlement, near the swamps, were the great enemy of the farmer, lighting down in droves of thousands upon the grain. Unless constantly guarded, the crops were totally destroyed.

This section of the county was covered with dense forests of timber, honey locust being one of the principal varieties; they grew to an immense size, frequently three feet in diameter. Deer and almost all kinds of small game were abundant. Cattle and hogs ran out through the forests and frequently became as wild and difficult to capture as the wild deer. The lake and the streams emptying into it were literally alive with fish, hundreds of barrels of which were caught and shipped annually, commencing a few years after the first permanent settlements were made. Although there are still abundance of fish of several varieties, the early settlers say that forty years ago there were five times as many as at the present day. This is not surprising when we consider the large number engaged in the fisheries, the increased demand, and the improved facilities for catching which experience and inventive genius have introduced.

Products of Bay township in 1872 were as follows:

Wheat, 924 acres, 18,167 bushels; buckwheat, 3 acres, 60 bushels; oats, 585 acres, 25,187 bushels; corn, 986 acres, 48,395 bushels; meadow, 733 acres, 1,292 tons; clover, 303 acres, 690 tons, 571 bushels clover seed; potatoes, 35 acres, 4,831 bushels; butter, 20,075 pounds; sorghum, 427 gallons; grapes, 19 acres, 13,350 pounds, 1,030 gallons wine; apples, 5,347 bushels; 2,690 acres of pasturage; wool, 19,735 pounds; 1,437 acres of uncultivated land. The marshes along the lake shore produce a wild grass upon which the cattle subsist in part during the greater portion of the summer and autumn months, except during seasons when excessive rains cover the marshy tracts with water.

Ague and other forms of malarious disease prevailed here amongst the first settlers, more or less, but like other flat, level countries, these malarious diseases have materially abated as the country has become settled, and the forests have given way to cultivated fields, and the swamps and marsh land freed from water and noxious substances by the civilizing processes of the spade and ploughshare. What is the most surprising is the large number of the early settlers who still survive the exposure, hardships, privations and diseases incident to frontier life, a brief sketch of whom would be full of thrilling interest to the generations who shall succeed them, when their trembling forms are no longer seen amongst us. Some one competent to the task should gather up and preserve the data out of which to erect an enduring monument to their memory, which shall transmit a knowledge of their achievements long after they shall have passed forever to the "great hereafter."

HARRIS TOWNSHIP was originally a part of Sandusky county. It was organized in 1825--the first election being held at the house of Israel Harrington, on the 18th day of March. The first township officers were as follows:

Ezekiel Rice, Justice of the Peace.

Israel Harrington, Reuben Rice, and B. V. Havens, Trustees.

Ezekiel Rice, Clerk.

The following were all of the voters present at the first election:

Israel Harrington, E. Rice, R. Rice, B. V. Havens,

James Boggs, John Fletcher, John L. Lucky, John McBeth, Samuel Mahan, and Benjamin Kimball.

This township contains some of the finest agricultural land in this section of the state: the soil is a black, sandy loam, underlaid with lime stone, and for corn, is unsurpassed, while wheat, barley, and other grain are sure to repay the toil of the husbandman, in seasons at all favorable to agricultural pursuits.

Elmore, the chief village of this township, is on the line of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad (Northwalk Division), seventeen miles from the city of Toledo, and contained, in 1870, about 1,200 inhabitants. It is substantially built up of fine brick blocks, in the business part of the town, and displays an appearance of thrift and energy. Manufacturing of various kinds is carried on extensively.

Elmore has a good depot, and her shipping facilities are excellent. She boasts the finest school-building in the county. It is conducted on what is known as the "Akron system." The cost of the building was $18,000, and the monthly cost of carrying on the school aggregates $225 per month. There is one grist mill doing an extensive business; one grain elevator, owned by Magee & Smith; two wooden bowl factories; one pump factory; and one factory for bent work of all kinds. There are two hotels, one, the "Elmore House," kept by P. T. Rees, and the "American House," by Russell Rice, both furnishing good accommodations, and doing a thriving business. There are four dry goods stores, among the most extensive, perhaps, in the county might be named C. H. Dauschoder & Co., and J. H. Magee.

William Newbemyer and Gustavus Jeager, hardware merchants, have a fine stock of goods in their line, and do a large business. There are two drug stores and several grocery stores. There are two shoe stores, four blacksmith, and two wagon shops, one gunsmith, etc. There is also a fine jewelry store in the village. There are two large stave factories, both doing a prosperous business. There are two churches, and a Masonic hall within the limits of the incorporation, and quite an array of fine residences, some of which are palatial in appearance, surrounded by beautiful lawns, filled with shade trees and a variety of ornamental shrubs and flowers. Altogether, Elmore is a flourishing village, with facilities, energy and enterprise, backed by resources and capital sufficient to give her, ere long, a prominent position amongst the manufacturing cities of northern Ohio.

The first school-house in the township was by no means a pretentious affair, being but fourteen by eighteen feet in size; nor was it extravagantly expensive, costing, as it did, but $12 00. It was built by contract, John Boggs being the architect. Wesley Harrington was the first teacher who ever presided within the walls of this institution. There was no other school-house nearer than Fremont, sixteen miles distant.

In 1840, the United Brethren built a church, twenty-two by thirty-two feet, one and a half stories high, of hewed logs. There are now seven churches in the township, viz.: United Brethren, Methodist Episcopal, Disciple, Lutheran, Presbyterian, German-Methodist, and Roman Catholic.

The nearest mill being sixteen miles distant -- at Fremont, -- the early settlers suffered frequently for want of ground grain, and were compelled sometimes to subsist for weeks on corn grated on a grater made by "punching" holes through an old tin pail or pan, with a nail. The corn was soaked first in warm water to soften the grain, when it was grated.

Mr. John L. Lucky was once three weeks in going to and returning from mill, a distance of 32 miles, the round trip. Mrs. Anna Lucky, his wife, fearing that he was drowned, walked up and down the river, then known as Carrion -- now Portage, in search of his body. At length he came in with a cargo of musty corn meal in lumps, and half a bushel of salt, then one of the most precious articles of merchandise. He reached Lower Sandusky, by way of Port Clinton, hauling his canoe across the peninsula to Sandusky bay.

Harris township contains a population of 2,190; of these 1,789 are native born. It embraces an area of 17,522 acres.

Harris township is one of the best agricultural districts in the county, as the following list of her products in 1872 will show:

Wheat, 928 acres, 17,059 bushels; rye, 6 acres, 145 bushels; Buckwheat, 14 acres, 195 bushels; Oats, 512 acres, 22,743 bushels; Corn, 1,191 acres, 53,535 bushels; meadow, 781 acres, 1,030 tons hay; clover, 125 acres, 123 tons clover hay, and 258 bushels seed; potatoes, 104 acres, 9,228 bushels; butter, 27,455 lbs.; cheese, 241 lbs.; apples, 2,119 bushels; peaches, 424 bushels; pasturage, 1,219 acres; wool, 2,340 lbs.; uncultivated land, 2,851 acres.

The principal part of the territory known as "uncultivated land" is covered with heavy timber, which is gradually disappearing as the wave of population expands, and new homes are necessarily hewed out to meet the ever increasing demand, until the "uncultivated" fields will soon wave with "golden grain."

BEXTON TOWNSHIP was originally the north part of Harris, and was organized in 1850.

The whole number of votes cast at the first election was eleven, George Wright, Gideon Draper, George Berry, William Trescott, and Alvin White, being amongst the first electors of this township.

It embraces an area of 27,980 acres, with a population in 1870 of 1,152, of these, 742 are native and 410 foreign born. Included in the former number are seven citizens of African descent.

Lumbering is still the main business, but the land under cultivation is perhaps equal to any in the county for agricultural purposes. It is for the most part a level tract, containing no waste land, the soil being a rich loam underlaid in a portion of the territory with limestone. It is watered by Tousaint creek. The early settlers were subjected to the same privations and difficulties which were met by the pioneers of the same period, throughout this section of Ohio -- long and tedious, and often hazardous journeys, to market and to mill, being a part of the experience of all of the settlers of this part of the country. The first school-house was built in 1854, in the southern part of the township, on land owned by Gideon Draper. There are now six school-houses in the township. The first church was built by the denomination known as "Albright Methodists," in 1863, ten years ago. It was a rude log structure, making very little pretension to architectural skill, but sufficiently commodious to accomodate all of the denizens of that section who desired to attend public worship at that early day.

The Lutherans have since erected a comfortable place of worship in this township. The first saw-mill was built by Mr. L. A. Harman, which runs two circular saws, the motive power being furnished by a 100-horse power engine.

There are now four other saw-mills doing a large business. These are operated respectively by Shaenfeld & Borden, Henry Ryar, D. M. Day, and N. P. Hathaway. There is also a large stave factory owned by Christian Raible. The business done by this factory is quite large, and said to be remunerative.

The first Justice of the Peace in this township was George Wright. The first Trustees, George Berry, William Trescott, and Gideon Draper.

After the election was over, and the twelve votes duly counted out, Alvin White invited all present to repair to his house for dinner, which they did. Amongst other things remembered by our informant, is the fact that they had a wild turkey, which, when dressed, weighed twenty-six pounds, and that it was boiled in a large sugar-kettle. If "other things" were provided in proportion, we may have a clue to the origin of the idea of corpulency that formerly attached to the dignified office of Justice of the Peace.

The year following the organization of Benton township -- 1851 -- a Fourth of July celebration was arranged for, and while testing the capacity of a gun barrel, which was to be used as a cannon on the occasion, Larkin Wright, aged sixteen, son of Alvin Wright, was instantly killed by the bursting of the barrel, on the 3d day of July. Aaron Russell was to have made a speech on the Fourth, but the celebration was abandoned on account of this accident.

These early days furnish material for profitable reflection for the rising generation, who know comparatively nothing of the privation and hardship of building up a home in the midst of a wilderness. There are also many amusing things connected with the history of those early days, and especially with the manner in which justice was often administered in the inferior courts. We refer to these not in disparagement of the sturdy heroes who preceded us in the march of time, but to illustrate the rapid growth of the country in every department of life.

Justice Fetterley was once presiding in a case where suit had been brought by K. against H. for wages for work performed. The defence set up by H. was that K. had taken a contract to mow over a certain piece or parcel of meadow, for a stipulated price, but having worked a few days, gave up the job, and sued for the time he had worked. After the testimony had all been heard, the Justice arose to his feet, standing behind a chair, delivered himself as follows: "Gentlemen, I do n't know whether it is in place for me to say anything or not, but I know something about this case myself. Now K., you told me you had taken a contract to do this mowing. Now deny it, d---n you. If I had it in my power, I would make you pay for three acres of good grass, so help me God." According to the docket, K. was not the gainer by this piece of litigation. A. W. Lucky appeared as advocate for defendant in this case.

Justice Fetterley was afterward drowned at Oak Harbor, while under the influence of liquor. There being no minister in the neighborhood, John Jenny, Esq., conducted the funeral services, exhorting the audience to "prepare to meet their God." He wound up his discourse by saying; "Now some of you are in the habit of coming over here and getting drunk, and let me tell you, you notorious scoundrels you, you are just as likely to fall into the river and get drowned as the 'Squire was, and I warn you to be prepared for your fate."

'Squire Berry had a suit before him for hog stealing, brought by W. against H. Mr. Root, of Carroll township, appeared for the prosecution, and A. W. Luckey for the defence. During the progress of the trial the prosecutor called the defendant's attorney aside and admitted that he had himself killed a hog belonging to defendant, and it turned out that it was the mother of the hogs for which he was now suing. Verdict in accordance with that fact was rendered. There are many other incidents of a like character which would be read with more or less interest in years to come, but the above will serve the purpose for which they are inserted as well, perhaps, as if their number were increased.

Matrimonial alliances seem to have been formed with less deliberation, in some cases, at least, than at the present period. Many years ago a German settler on Tousaint creek committed suicide by cutting his throat. Soon after another German came to the office of A. W. Lucky, Esq., for license to marry the widow. But he had forgotten her name, and not being able to speak much English, he with difficulty gave Mr. Lucky to understand who he desired to marry by drawing his hand rapidly across his throat in imitation of the suicide and other equally expressive signs and gestures. The marriage ceremony was duly solemnized, and they lived together as husband and wife for nearly three weeks, when, with or without cause or provocation, husband number two left the wife of his bosom, and the home of his choice, and fled to parts unknown.

Products of Benton township in 1872: Wheat, 399 acres, 7,064 bushels; rye, 27 acres, 585 bushels; buckwheat, 3 acres, 26 bushels; oats, 358 acres, 11,283 bushels; corn, 603 acres, 22,813 bushels; meadow, 652 acres, 862 tons; clover, 23 acres, 16 tons, and 37 bushels seed; potatoes, 103 acres, 8,051 bushels; butter, 12,492 pounds; sorghum, 958 gallons; apples, 260 bushels; pasture, 202 acres; uncultivated land, 8,733 acres.

Nearly one-third of the territory of this township, it will be seen, is "uncultivated;" there is, however, no marsh or swamp land within its limits, and the uncultivated part of the township is heavily timbered, and the soil is as good as any of that now under cultivation.

CARROLL TOWNSHIP was organized in 1835, five years before the formation of the county of Ottawa. It was then a part of Sandusky county, but its boundaries remained undisturbed by the erection of the new county in 1840. The first settlement was made by Canadian French at the close of the war with the British, in 1814. They were for the most part trappers and hunters and Indian traders, and agricultural pursuits were neglected almost entirely, save in rare instances, until the country began to be occupied by a different class of people. About the year 1830 and '32 John McNutt, Francis P. McNutt and Henry Stults came into this settlement from the vicinity of Fremont. Galbreath Stewart came in about the same time from a settlement near where Greensburgh, Sandusky county, now stands. But prior to the emigration of either of the above named men, a gentleman named Carroll, from whom the township derives its name, settled amongst the French and began to clear out a farm in the almost unbroken forest. The early settlers soon erected their log cabins, with "puncheon" floors, clapboard roofs, and greased paper as a substitute for window glass, and at once began to clear off the ground and cultivate the soil. Many of the French settlers, like the Indians, lived in huts made of bark, for years neglecting to erect cabins or anything more substantial than the most primitive shelter of the most shiftless race of Indians.

Carroll township is the third in size in Ottawa county, so far as its territorial limits are concerned, having an area of 22,319 acres, with a population of 931 native and 105 foreign born citizens, making a total of 1,036. The total valuation of real estate in 1872, as published by the County Treasurer, was $218,907, while the chattel property for the same year valued at $70,753. The amount of tax levied for all purposes was $6,022.42. The total "Town and Township" debt is but $144.83.

The Roman Catholics erected a church of logs in 1845, which was the first church in the township.

The Methodists and United Brethren societies used school-houses as their place of worship up to 1870.

The first school-house was built in 1835. The nearest mill was at Fremont, thirty miles distant. There being no bridges for a number of years over the streams that must be crossed and re-crossed in going to market and to mill, the settlers frequently filled the streams -- La Carpe and Raushean -- with prairie grass in order to make them at all passable.

The first Justices of the Peace were G. Stewart and Henry Stults.

From 1835 to 1837 this section of the county was infested with a band of thieves who lived on the south side of the Tousaint creek, who not only stole whatever they wanted from the settlers, but broke open and robbed stores and shops in Toledo, Fremont, and Sandusky. They erected scaffolds along the lake marshes, in the tall grass, and there concealed their plunder. The honest settlers first ordered them to quit the county, and afterwards threw down or unroofed their cabins, and finally, as a last resort, turned out en masse with guns and hunted them out of the neighborhood. Some of them were afterwards caught, tried, and sentenced to State's prison for a term of years.

The soil of the principal part of this township is well adapted to agriculture, which occupies the attention of the greater number of the inhabitants, as will be seen by the following exhibit of products in 1872.

Wheat, 479 acres, 9,181 bushels; buckwheat, 21 acres, 285 bushels; corn, 764 acres, 34,524 bushels; oats, 338 acres, 14,284 bushels; barley, 9 acres, 255 bushels; meadow, 696 acres, 1,201 tons of hay; clover, 50 acres, 145 tons, and 39 bushels seed; potatoes, 51 acres, 4,885 bushels; butter, 14,700 pounds; cheese, 344 pounds; sorghum, 625 gallons; grapes, 3 acres, 4,060 pounds, 84 gallons wine; apples, 3,294 bushels; peaches, 419 bushels; acres of pasture land, 1,573; wool, 2,574 pounds; uncultivated land, 4,039 acres. There is but little waste land in this township, and taken, all in all, it ranks amongst the first in the county in the fertility of its soil, as well the energy, enterprise, and industry of its people.

SALEM TOWNSHIP was organized as a part of the territory of Sandusky county in 1839, one year before the formation of Ottawa county. It contains an area of 18,224 acres, being the fourth township in size in the county. The total valuation of land in 1872 was $296,754, and of the chattel property, $70,458.

There was levied upon this property for the same year a total tax for all purposes amounting to but $9,177 63; and the total indebtedness of the township was $734 42.

There is a population of 1,687, as shown by the census of 1870, but there has been a rapid increase since that time by immigration, and the unoccupied territory is settling up more rapidly than at any period since the first improvements were made. Of the population, one-third are of foreign birth; and of these, the greater part are from Germany.

Adolphus Kramer was one of the first settlers amongst the Germans who came into this part of the county. He located at Oak Harbor (then known as Hartford), and being a man of education and untiring energy, he soon took rank amongst the leading men of the county. He has held several important public positions, and is at present a member of the Constitutional Convention, now in session at Columbus.

In 1848, Chas. Maehlen, Rudolph Georgii, Otto Georgii, and Chas. Frauck, came from Esslingen, in southern part of Germany, Kingdom of Wurtemberg. They each bought a farm in the vicinity of Oak Harbor, paying on an average about $5 per acre, and immediately began to clear off the timber, and prepare for the cultivation of the soil. The same hardships that were met by the first civilized occupants of the territory in other parts of the county, were endured also by the early settlers here.

The nearest market was at Sandusky city, reached by canoe—the nearest mill was at Woodville, twelve miles distant. The first school-house was erected in 1846, known as Kramer's school-house; it was used by various denominations, from time to time, as a place of worship, until 1867, when the German Lutherans built what is known as St. John's church. St. Paul's, also Lutheran, has since been built by that denomination. The Roman Catholics are building a church, which will be ready for occupancy in a few months. There are now thirteen school-houses in this township, and the educational facilities furnished to the youth have kept pace with the material growth and prosperity that have marked the development of this section of the county.

OAK HARBOR is situated on a beautiful harbor on Portage river, twelve miles from its mouth. The principal business of the town is lumbering. Along the banks of Portage river there is some of the finest timber in the country for ship-building.

Mr. John Jenny, who has been employed for a number of years in purchasing and sending to market this timber, had for ten or twelve years, on an average, sixty or seventy men employed along the Portage river, paying cash for the timber and labor, and thus aiding in building up and improving the early enterprises in this section of the county.

Rosa, Milinder & McGrath export on an average 4,000,000 of staves annually, and about 2,000,000 circular headings, which they send principally eastward. Lay & Kramer do an extensive business in window sash, their factory having been in operation since last year. Washington Gordon and Ausfrach & Bros. do an extensive business in lumber, these extensive mills being in constant operation, and the demand for sawed lumber generally greater than the supply.

There are three hotels in the village of Oak Harbor—the Clinton House, kept by Spiteer & Bro.; the American, by W. J. Chesnutwood, and Portage, by Christian Vogel. There are a number of dry goods and grocery stores, shops of various kinds, and not less than half a score of places where liquors are retailed within the limits of the village.

The first Justice of the Peace in the township of Salem was A. Kramer, who was at the same time Collector and Treasurer also.

Justice Fetterley, who was drowned some years ago at Oak Harbor, was among the early Justices of the county. He was a man of good native ability and good intentions, a lover of right, but wholly ignorant of the forms of law in the most simple matters that came before him. A. W. Lucky once went before him with a party who desired to acknowledge a deed, whereupon Mr. Fetterley very promptly told both of them to hold up their right hands. Mr. Lucky told the Justice that this was not necessary; that he simply wanted an acknowledgment, etc. The grantors in the premises then signed it in his presence, when he addressed them thus: "You acknowledge this to be your name, do you?" They assented, and he added, with great solemnity, "So help you God."

Mr. John Jenny, as stated elsewhere, although not a licensed preacher, preached Mr. F.'s funeral sermon. Mr. Jenny is one of the old settlers in Ottawa county, and has always been a prominent man in the politics of the town and county. He was a strong "war man" during the existence of the rebellion, and urged the people, by public speeches, to stand by the general government in its efforts to establish and perpetuate universal freedom. In one of his public speeches in Salem township, he was unexpectedly replied to in a short speech by Mr. George Keefer, who viewed the subject from a different standpoint.

Products.—Salem township in 1872 produced 18,759 bushels of wheat, from 937 acres; from 19 acres of buckwheat, 287 bushels, and from 928 acres of corn, 36,639 bushels; oats, 551 acres, 23,251 bushels; barley, 18 acres, 343 bushels; meadows, 807 acres, 1,227 tons; clover, 333 acres, 464 tons, and 683 bushels of seed; potatoes, 113 acres, 10,744 bushels; butter, 21,530 pounds; sorghum, 1,486 gallons; grapes, 7 acres; vintage, 6,350 pounds; wine, 316 gallons; apples, 958 bushels; peaches, 283 bushels; wool, 3,263 pounds; uncultivated land, 8,216 acres; pasturage, 641 acres.

Considerable land, it will be seen, still remains uncultivated in this township. A part of this is low land, on the Portage river, which is untillable on account of the water by which it is covered the greater part of the year; but much of what is known as "uncultivated land" is covered with timber, and the soil is as good as any of that now under cultivation, and will in time take rank with the best cultivated farms in the township. The land properly known as "swamp land" is not found to any great extent here, although there are skirting the rivers and creeks many acres of swamp land in isolated bodies, much of which, by ditching, will doubtless in time be brought under cultivation. Ague and kindred malarious diseases have prevailed here ever since the first settlement, but of late years have been of a milder type, and of less frequent occurrence, and will, from present indications, continue to abate, as the soil is gradually drained by its cultivation, the opening up of highways, and other causes which will tend to the improvement of the sanitary condition of the country; and these will come in the near future, when the increased population shall have subdued the forest, and the "solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose."

CLAY TOWNSHIP was formerly a part of Woodville township, Sandusky county, from which it was separated in 1840, when the new county of Ottawa was erected. It contains an area of 31,996 acres, and a population of 2,174, divided as follows: Native born, 1,654; foreign, 520; colored, 2.

Amongst the first settlers in this section of the county were H. E. Warriner, John Packer, Thomas Pitcher. They came in 1835, and settled in the vicinity of the site of the now thriving village of Genoa. There was no other settlement within five miles of their location. They were the first white men in Clay township. The Indians living in bark huts, living chiefly upon the game with which the county abounded, and driving a brisk trade in furs and the skins of animals.

There was fortunately no liquor sold in this township, and consequently no quarrelling, or disturbance of any kind, either amongst themselves, or between the two racers. Some of the Indians had their own wives, in imitation of civilized nations. One old half-breed, named Naggs, had two wives—one rather old, and very ugly, the other a young and rather handsome squaw. He gave as a reason for this dual alliance, that the former could help him to work, and the other was good at sewing. These settlers had to go to Fremont to mill and market, a distance of twenty miles.

The United Brethren built the first place of worship in the township, in 1859. The first school-house was built in 1841.

The soil of this part of the county is a hard clay, thinly covered with a rich, black muck. Corn, oats, barley, rye and other cereals grow luxuriantly, and fruit raising has proved successful also, and of late years large orchards of both apple and peach trees have been set out. Wheat has not proved so profitable here as other grain, yet considerable is gathered every year. This township contains great quantities of the finest quality of limestone, and the business of burning and shipping lime has become extensive. Three "Monitor" kilns (iron, with stone arch) are operated by G. H. Uthoff and others. Eight "Page" kilns (called after the patentee—Mr. Page); these are operated respectively by Sawyer & Co., Wymann & Gregg, Newman & Ford, and Wm. Habbeler. There are also half a score of the old style kilns operated by these parties. Frank Holt is also extensively engaged in the business. There is a steady and increasing demand for this product in the south, west and southwest—Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois being the principal markets, however.

This township contains some of the best grazing farms in the county, and for the past few years quite an interest has been awakened in the raising of stock, and the importation of a better breed of both horses and cattle, so that there is in this section some of the finest stock to be found in this part of the State.

GENOA is the principal village in the township, and contains a population of 560; of these 138 are of foreign birth. It is a very pleasant and desirable place for private residences, being in the midst of a healthy, rich and prosperous farming community, with a beautiful location and fine view, and as good water as the county affords. Manufacturing is carried on extensively for a town of its population. The leading interests are staves, shingles, lath, and the celebrated white lime, which is now shipped in every direction in large quantities. The flouring mill also does a large business. Mr. P. Warriner is the proprietor of the mill, where there is a cash market for all the grain produced in this vicinity.

Mr. H. Schnieder & Bro. are the proprietors of the establishment for the manufacture of cut staves, shingles, circular heading, etc., and are doing a good business. Wyman & Gregg are extensively engaged in shipping white lime, so greatly in demand on account of its superior quality. They are also engaged in merchandizing, and in the coal trade in Toledo. Schnieder & Bachman own one of the largest dry goods stores in the county at present. W. F. Ford also does a flourishing business in dry goods, boots and shoes, hardware, etc. There is a good stock of drugs kept by J. H. E. Uthoff. The only banking house in the county is located here, and was established in June, 1872. It is in a prosperous condition and its business increasing. Henry Habbeler is the President, and H. Raucamp, Cashier. There are two hotels—the "Genoa House," and the "Franklin House"—both well kept and doing a fair business. There is a small weekly paper—the Genoa Enterprise—published here, by William Humlong. There is a very fine school building—Union—a credit to the thrift and intelligence of the villagers.

The total value of real estate in the township is more than double that of any other in the county, being $797,448. The value of chattel property, as shown by return for same year—1872—was $79,427. The whole amount of tax levied for all purposes, township, county, and State, $15,003.60.

The products of this township in 1872 were: Wheat, 541 acres, 9,611 bushels; rye, 27 acres, 483 bushels; buckwheat, 27 acres, 380 bushels; oats, 619 acres, 27,243 bushels; barley, 4 acres, 85 bushels; corn, 1,312 acres, 66,641 bushels; meadow, 859 acres, 1,211 tons; clover, 221 acres, 246 tons, and 575 bushels clover seed; potatoes, 150 acres, 13,564 bushels; butter, 34,573 pounds; cheese, 800 pounds; sorghum, 284 gallons; apples, 2,782 bushels; peaches, 67 bushels; wool, 1,967 pounds; uncultivated land, 5,889 acres; pasture land, 1,933 acres.

Clay township, it will be seen, is not engaged in the cultivation of the vine, nor extensively in other fruits, apples being the principal fruit. Within two years, however, a large number of peach trees have been planted, and it is confidently believed that a portion of this township is well adapted to the cultivation of this fruit.

This section of Ottawa county is, all things considered, one of the finest within its limits, with resources in some respects almost boundless, it is destined to a rapid increase in population and material prosperity, as new facilities for manufacturing and transportation are added to those already in existence.

[NOTE.—Since the above was written another banking house has been established in the town of Elmore, known as the "Bank of Elmore," by Messrs. John H. Magee, Philip Smith, and Thos. E. Baynes.

John H. Magee and Philip Smith, President and Vice-president, are well known to the citizens of this and the surrounding counties, having been engaged in mercantile pursuits in this place for many years. Mr. Baynes, the Cashier, has had a banking experience of ten years, and has been connected with the First National Bank of Findlay, Ohio.]

ERIE TOWNSHIP extends nearly four miles southwest from the lake and has a lake frontage of over eight miles. It contains 9,419 acres, valued at $148,717.00, with chattel property amounting in the aggregate to $40,802.00. The total tax levied, for all purposes, township, county and state, for the year 1872, was $3,534.38. The township indebtedness being $322.28. The population, according to the census of 1870 was, native, 387; foreign, 68; total, 455.

This township was organized in 1844, four years after the erection of Ottawa county.

The first officers were, Luff Hull, Justice of the Peace, David Merion, Trustee, James Kirk, Collector.

The two last named, were the two pioneer settlers within the territory now embraced in Erie township. They settled here in 1828, 12 years before the new county was formed. About eight years later—1836—this section began to settle up quite rapidly. A colony of the Society of Friends, or Quakers, came in from the state of Maryland, amongst whom were Abraham Bell, Roger Kirk, Timothy Kirk, John Kirk, Nathan Kirk, Elisha Kirk, Immer Kirk, William Brown, James Bailey, Wm. Archibald and Caleb Alden. John and Henry Snyder, Joel Sylvester and Geo. Kleinhans, Luff Hull and William Carr came into this settlement about 1830, six years before the arrival of the colony.

The soil is well adapted to farming, and especially for growing wheat, for which it became noted at an early day, Mr. David Merion having harvested in 1834 over forty bushels to the acre. Corn and oats also were extensively cultivated and yielded a rich return, while barley, rye and buckwheat, in favorable seasons, produced an average crop. Farming and stock-raising, but especially the former, occupied the principal time of the early settlers, although some attention from the first was given to fishing during a part of the year. The first school was at the house of Mr. Luff Hull, in a small room, which was heated by means of coals made by burning wood, which were placed in a large iron kettle, in the middle of the room. Those who remember this "heating" process, speak of it as a rather cool affair, which would not have been essentially damaging to the contents of an ice-house. The greased paper in the windows of these pioneer educational institutions, obviated the necessity of glass lights, which of course have long since been substituted for the paper. Teachers received from one to two dollars per week for their services during the three winter months; the balance of the year their time was devoted to other pursuits. Female teachers of this period received less salaries than their more fortunate brothers of the same calling. Miss Knight, now Mrs. Kingham of Port Clinton, received but 75 cents per week, and boarding, for her services in "teaching the young idea how to shoot," as far back as 1840. The first school-house, built of unhewed logs, was erected in 1841. There are now three in the township. There are now two churches, the first of which was erected in 1852 by the Methodist Episcopal Society, and is occupied part of the time by the United Brethren.

Products of Erie township in 1872, were as follows: wheat, 333 acres, 5,882 bushels; buckwheat, 18 acres, 350 bushels; oats, 286 acres, 10,624 bushels; barley, 13 acres, 285 bushels; corn 437 acres, 18,465 bushels; meadow 380 acres, 643 tons; clover, 145 acres, 277 tons; clover seed, 218 bushels; potatoes, 27 acres, 2,715 bushels; cheese, 660 lbs.; sorghum, 570 gallons; apples, 2,672 bushels; peaches, 85 bushels; pasture land, 1,392 acres; wool, 4,960 lbs.; uncultivated land, 1,289 acres. There is considerable marsh land in this township, skirting the lake producing a tall, wild grass upon which cattle can subsist a part of the year. During wet seasons much of this marsh land is covered with water—a portion of it, near the lake and river, or creeks, throughout the entire year. These bogs are the natural home of the muskrat and other fur-bearing animals, the capture of which was the chief employment, and means of subsistence of the early French settlers, and their descendants, the "half-breed" Indians. Thousands of these animals are still trapped every year for their fur, for which there is an increasing demand.

The nearest mill was Venice, 22 miles by water. The first settlers sometimes swam their horses, and ferried their wagons and grain over Mud creek and Portage river and went to Fremont to mill, instead of Venice, after the erection of the flouring mill in the former place.

Ague and diseases of a malarious character prevailed to some extent amongst the families of the early settlers, but these of late years are less frequent.

DANBURY TOWNSHIP, as its boundaries now stand, embraces an area of 11,216 acres. It originally included Catawba, Kelley's, and Put-in-Bay islands, but was reduced to its present limits in 1861. The population in 1870 was 1,252, divided as follows: 810 native, 442 foreign, 2 colored.

The Hon. Zalmon Wildman, Epaproditus W. Bull, and some of the other early settlers on the Peninsula, as the body of land was then called, were from Danbury, Conn., and gave the name of their former home to their new home in the "far West," as Ohio was then called. The western boundary of what is known as the "Firelands," passed through this township as it was originally formed; but as now organized, Danbury extends only to the western line of the Firelands. Originally it embraced a territory nearly eight miles, extending west from Marblehead, with an average width of four miles, giving an area of a little less than thirty square miles. The eastern portion of the township is underlaid by limestone, very much resembling the limestone of Kelley's Island and at Sandusky. That portion of the township called "Prairie" in the center of the eastern part, the rock comes to the surface, which is almost entirely destitute of soil, and except in wet seasons, when it produces an inferior quality of pasture, is quite unproductive. Where there is sufficient soil, peach trees grow vigorously, even amongst the rocks. There is but little timber in this part of the township, except on the borders and occasional basins which furnish moisture, where thickets and small groves flourish. Along the shore slopes the soil is rich, well watered, and admirably adapted to the cultivation of all kinds of cereals and fruit. For grazing, also, it is unsurpassed in this part of the State. It was formerly thickly covered with timber, which has given way before the ax of the pioneer and lumberman, and in many places is replaced by productive vineyards. To the west of this rocky region, there is a broad level plain, with a loamy, rich soil, and a heavy substratum of clay, containing water-worn pebbles, and occasionally shells, and other indications that this may have been the bottom of a shallow part of the lake, long years before the soil of its western shore was pressed by the white man's foot. Black walnut, hickory, elm, ash, basswood, hemlock, and oak, were the varieties of timber most abundant.

There are on the peninsula several old earthworks and stone-mounds, which, it is believed, were the work of some former inhabitants of this country, now, perhaps, numbered amongst the tribes that were, but are not. One of these — the most remarkable — is on the northwest of Catawba Island, west of More's Dock, within the limits of old Danbury township. There is a rocky elevation on a promontory overlooking the lake to the west and north. On the summit of this rocky cliff and near the edge of the promontory, stands the ruins of a circular mound of stone. The point is called Sugar Rock, and is covered with timber. The mound is of small stone, built in circular form, sixty-five feet through the base and fifteen feet high.

Amongst the early settlers were E. W. Bull, Z. Wildman, Benajah Wolcott, Truman Pettybone, Isaac Ambler, Judge Ruggles, Horace Ramsdell, Jacob Ramsdell, John Ramsdell, and Valentine Ramsdell. Mr. Bull became the owner of a tract of land, including the island in Sandusky bay known as Bull's Island. He made arrangements with Mr. B. Wolcott, a native of Danbury, Conn., but then a resident of New York, to commence a settlement on his land, which he did in the spring and summer of 1809, coming with a party consisting of himself, wife, one son and two daughters, and two hired men named respectively Bishop and Osborn. (Bishop was murdered by the Indians, with Wood, on the bank of Portage river, in the spring of 1819.)

This party left Connecticut in a sleigh for this place on the 13th day of February, 1809, and arrived in Cleveland some time during the month of March. They could not proceed further on account of the ice. So, leaving the family, the men started on the peninsula to prepare quarters, etc. In the month of May the family came on, and after being well nigh lost in a storm, landed a little to the east of where Fox's dock now stands.

There were three orchards on the bay at that time, planted by the French-Indians. They were known as east, middle, and west orchards. The east and west orchards were bought respectively by Messrs. Bull and Wolcott. The latter named gentleman and his family were the first American settlers in this township. Joseph Ramsdell who settled here in 1811 with his family, on a point between the two harbors, was here as early as 1806 for a short time, with a surveying party from the east.

In 1811, Joseph Ramsdell, with a wife and four sons, came in an open boat, arriving in June, having been detained by ice, and otherwise, so that they were two months coming from Oswego, New York, to the peninsula. With this family came Mr. Abiathar Sherley and wife, the latter being a sister of Mr. Ramsdell. Mrs. A. Sherley gave birth to a daughter in the autumn or winter of that year, who was the first child born among the settlers. She married a gentleman named Atwood, of Huron, Erie county, Ohio.

No deaths are reported amongst the settlers prior to the war of 1812. They had no township organizations, no civil officers, no schools, no churches, and no mills or markets nearer than Monroe, in the State of Michigan, a distance, by water, of fifty miles. Their only provision often consisted of bread made of corn, which was grated down on a tin grater made for that purpose. Wild animals and small game were abundant, such as deer, squirrel, rabbits, etc. Wild turkey abounded, as did also wild geese, during a part of the year.

E. W. Bull died in the city of Cleveland, in the autumn of 1812, from fever which he brought on by exposure and over-exertion, in fleeing before the Indians when they attacked the peninsula after Hull's surrender. Prior to this event — Hull's surrender — the inhabitants of this peninsula, although suffering many privations, and enduring hardships peculiar to life in the wilderness, nevertheless, succeeded well, all things considered, and were looking forward hopefully, even sometimes joyfully, to the better days and brighter prospects, which, fortunately, are always just before us. But when this barrier which stood up to protect them from the foe, (the savage, merciless Indian, goaded on by the British authorities) fell, they saw nothing left them but in flight. While thinking of this, and counseling together, they saw vessels loaded with men nearing the shore, and supposing them to be British and Indians, they were filled with consternation, and resolved upon a speedy exit from the peninsula. There were in all thirteen families, who, seizing boats, canoes, and anything upon which they could float, started for Sandusky, then known as Ogontz Place, where there was but one log trading house, the only building then erected where the city now stands.

The names of the parties thus fleeing to Ogontz Place, as given by Dr. A. H. Agard, to whom we are indebted for these facts, and to whom we desire here to express our obligations, were Benajah Wolcott and family; Charles Peck; E. W. Bull; H. Patch; Saunders, with wife and two babes — twins; Major Parsons; George Bishop; Joseph Ramsdell; Abiathar Sherley; Dr. Parks; Col. Peter P. Ferry; Ezra Lee; and Messrs. Herrick, Cooper, and Woolsey.

The next day they learned that the men whom they had seen approaching the shore in vessels were our own soldiers, who had been surrendered by Hull, and had been paroled by the British, and were on their way to their homes. But this news only postponed the evil for a few days, for the Indians, as soon as the surrender was known to them, began to prepare for hostile operations in this direction. The settlers returned with their boats to carry away or conceal their property as best they could, knowing that all would be destroyed or carried off by the enemy if not speedily secured. A volunteer company, under Captain Joshua Cotton, came on to the peninsular in September, 1812. He was ordered by Gen. Perkins, early in September, to proceed in boats with a number of soldiers across the bay, and to land on the peninsula and proceed from thence to the "Two Harbors," on the opposite side, to look after some wheat and other property there. On landing, a guard was detached by Captain Cotton to take care of the boats. On his march back toward the boats, he was attacked by the Indians, who were concealed in the high grass. On reaching the bay, the guard, believing that "distance would lend enchantment to the view," had fled with the boats, leaving their companions to the uncertain chances of battle and the mercies of a wild and savage foe. The survivors took possession of a log house (not the block house, for it had been destroyed), and resisted as best they could during the night. The cowardly creatures who had escaped with the boats related the peril of their comrades, and John S. Reed and Captain Quigley, who heard the news next morning, at once started to the field of battle, calling upon every man they met with to join them, and on the entire route not a man refused the call. At the mouth of Huron river they met Amos Spafford moving his family to Cleveland. At their request, Mr. Spafford unloaded his boats, and they all started for the peninsula, where they arrived at midnight, and concealed themselves till morning, when they made for the house and found to their joy thirty-seven of our brave boys alive, but nearly starved, having had nothing to eat for over three days.

In this skirmish Valentine Ramsdell, Daniel Mingus, Alexander Mason and a man named Simons were killed. Those wounded were Judge Eldred, severely; Mr. Manahan, slightly; and Captain Ramsdell, a Revolutionary soldier.

Horace Ramsdell gathered up all the bones of these slain heroes that he could find, two years after they had fallen, and buried them at a point near Fox's Dock. The place is marked by a stone, bearing their names, erected to their memory by Hon. Joshua R. Giddings, who participated in this battle, being then but nineteen years of age.

Mr. Giddings will long be remembered as a prominent anti-slavery leader in Congress. He and the survivors of this battle agreed to meet on the tragic spot fifty years from that day, if alive. Just fifty years from the date of the battle, Mr. Giddings alone appeared upon the ground, the balance of the little company having stacked their arms on the eternal camping ground on the other shore, where the great soul of Mr. Giddings has since joined them. Peace to their ashes! He visited Danbury township in 1862, and erected the stone which bears the names of the killed in the battle at the time of this visit.

After the declaration of peace, the settlers, many of them, returned to their homes on the peninsula, or rather to the site of their former homes, for everything of value was either carried off or destroyed by fire.

Samuel Lockwood, Samuel Scribner, and Alfred Richards came here, the latter from Canada, in 1816-17. John Kelley came into the township in 1832, from Kelley's Island, where he had removed with his father in boyhood, from the vicinity of Troy, N. Y. In 1815, Col. Peter P. Ferry, who had been an officer in the army of Napoleon, settled on the peninsula, and was the first acting Collector of the port at Sandusky. Truman Pettybone was his deputy. Mr. Pettybone was the first Justice of the Peace in Danbury township.

The Methodists built the first church in 1860, Rev. Thomas Guard being the pioneer preacher. There was a school-house erected in 1833. There are now five school-houses within the present limits of the township, and four churches—Methodist Episcopal, German Methodist, Lutheran, and Roman Catholic.

Lime stone quarries are extensively worked, and there are two large kilns from which an average of four hundred bushels per day are shipped, principally to Cleveland. Two more kilns are being erected. It is estimated that 10,000 square feet of stone are shipped daily to Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland, and other points along the lake. There is an almost inexhaustible quarry of gray marble on the tract of land owned by Clemons Bros., in the northeast part of the township. They are extensively engaged in shipping this to Cleveland, Erie, and other points.

The fisheries belonging to citizens of Danbury are quite extensive, and have been a source of profit to those engaged in that business. About one hundred hands are employed during the fishing season, and not less than forty tons daily are caught and shipped to Sandusky City.

Fruit growing, of late years, has been engaging the attention of all classes, and especially the cultivation of the vine. The soil is well adapted to this pursuit, and it has proved largely remunerative where it has been properly tested.

The following were the products in 1872, except the grape, which is given for the year 1871: Wheat, 461 acres, 9,179 bushels; oats, 275 acres, 11,152 bushels; barley, 120 acres, 3,599 bushels; corn, 627 acres, 32,600 bushels; meadow, 726 acres, 1,214 tons hay; clover, 53 acres, 100 tons, and 34 bushels seed; potatoes, 42 acres, 3,659 bushels; butter, 15,315 pounds; grapes, 339 acres, vintage, 1,203,200 pounds, wine, 24,010 gallons; apples, 4,158 bushels; peaches, 447 bushels; peas, 268 bushels; pasturage, 1,349 acres; wool, 9,228 pounds; uncultivated land, 1,947 acres.

DANBURY TOWNSHIP owns bonds not subject to taxation to the amount of $16,281. The real estate is valued at $237,547; chattel property, $132,313. Total taxation in 1872 was $0,074.71. There is no "Town or Township" indebtedness in this township.

PUT-IN-BAY TOWNSHIP is composed of a group of small islands, known as South, Middle and North Bass, and Rattlesnake, Green, Ballast, Sugar, Starve and Gibraltar. The names given to these islands by the Indians, are no longer known, and the names which they now bear were given to them by the sailors or settlers along the shore. Formerly the three Bass islands were called the "Three Sisters," and Kelley's Island was once known as "Cunningham's."

Put-in-Bay is said to have derived its name from Commodore Perry's answer to one of his subordinate officers, after the surrender of the British fleet on the 10th day of September, 1813, who asked "what will we do with the ships?" said, "Put them in the Bay." Another probable origin of the name may be found in the position of the Bay itself, being so formed that from any quarter, to escape a coming storm, vessels may "put in to bay" in safety. Whatever may be the origin of the name, and if there is "not much in a name," there can be but little in its origin. Of one thing there remains no doubt, and that is that although there is nothing striking or grand in the scenery of these islands, yet taken altogether they form a scene of surpassing loveliness and beauty. There is always a quiet, dream-like stillness resting on the calm water, in the shade of the trees and vines, so much in contrast with the bustle and excitement of city life, that it comes to the excited brain like a sweet rest to the traveler, at the close of a long and toilsome journey. It has of late years rapidly grown into favor as a summer resort, especially with southerners, who flee from the oppressive heat of their homes, and dreaded epidemics peculiar to the southern seaboard cities. They find the air and scenery cool and invigorating, and at the end of the heated term return to their business and homes vigorous and strong. The hotel accommodations are ample, and the ease with which the islands can be reached, being accessible either by railroad or water, from any part of the country, make this a very desirable and pleasant summer home.

The township embraces within its limits 2,818 acres, with a population in 1870 of 1,148, as follows: native 797; foreign, 351. Of the former, 70 are colored. That part of it known as South Bass or Put-in-Bay Island, was settled in 1811, by Seth Done, who came to the island from Euclid Cuyahoga county, O., as the agent or superintendent of Judge Ogden Edwards, of New York, by whom the island was owned. A number of laborers were imported by Mr. Done, and over one hundred acres were cleared off and sowed in wheat in the summer and autumn of that year. They had harvested, and were engaged in threshing the wheat, when the British soldiers drove them off the islands in the fall of 1812, destroying what remained of the crop not yet threshed, and afterward destroying nearly two thousand bushels that had been stored away in a large log pen on Catawba Island, where it had been brought in boats a day or two before.

After the war had ended, Shell Johnson came to this island, where he remained three years in the employ of Judge Edwards. Capt. Hill next settled there after Mr. Johnson vacated the premises, but remained a brief period, when Mr. W. Hyde next occupied the place. He brought with him five hundred head of sheep, the property of Judge Edwards, by whom he was employed. About 1830, Judge Edwards died, and his brother, Alfred Edwards, became the owner of the two islands, South and Middle Bass. John Pierpont was put in charge of the property, and built two docks, one in the harbor, and what is known as the west dock. These two docks were built in 1831.

In 1836 Mr. Pierpont and two Frenchmen started in a sailboat for Sandusky and were overtaken by a sudden storm, when their boat capsized, and all three were drowned. The next year Jacob Scott came to the island from Buffalo, N. Y., and took charge of the property, taking out timber and wood for steamboats, and building docks and otherwise improving the property. In 1838 a Spaniard, named J. D. Rivera St. Jurgio, bought the two islands—South and Middle Bass—from Alfred Edwards, and at once began to sell it off in farms and small lots. Phillip Vroman purchasing the first farm. During the same year, or soon after, he sold part of the same island to Lewis Harms. Also, to W. Rheberg and John Lutz. These men immediately began to improve this part of the township by the erection of substantial houses and other buildings, and the cultivation of the soil. Lewis Harms, a few years later, began to cultivate the grape, and soon demonstrated that both the climate and the soil were favorable to this enterprize, and has since been engaged in it extensively, and succeeded well. He is the pioneer grape grower of the island region, whose success has induced others to embark in the same pursuit, until more than one-fourth of all the land in the entire township was covered with vines prior to 1871, and thousands are now annually set out, so that ere long the unoccupied area of this whole archipelago will be a vast vineyard, separated only by the water which divides the islands.

The soil on the Bass islands is very productive, and seems to be perfectly adapted to the rapid and vigorous growth of the vine. If the soil is not naturally favorable, there is no art known to the most experienced cultivator that can render it favorable; but on the southern shore of the lake, and especially upon the islands, the grape flourishes in unrivaled luxuriance wherever it has been fairly and thoroughly tested.

The island known as "Rattlesnake" is said, by some, to derive its name from its resemblance in shape to the snake whose name it bears, while by others it is said to have been infested with rattlesnakes many years ago, being literally covered with them during the spring and summer months.

Starve island, according to rumor, derived its name from the circumstance that at an early day a man in some mysterious way got on to this island, and starved to death before he was discovered.

Unquestionably, Bass islands are so named on account of the great number of fish of that name that have always been found in this locality; and Ballast island is named from the fact that off this island Perry's fleet anchored, and took in ballast, the day before his engagement with the British fleet.

Gibraltar is a small rock-capped island, a mere speck in the water, upon which stands a beautiful summer retreat, whose tower stands out in bold relief, amid its watery surroundings. This little isle, with its neat and tasty villa, is the property of Mr. Jay Cooke, whose early home was in Sandusky City, a few miles distant. Upon the summit of Gibraltar there stands a memorial of Commodore Perry, overlooking the scene of his early conflict with, and victory over the British fleet.

Green island is the property of the United States Government, by whom it was bought of Judge Edwards, and upon which the lighthouse is erected.

All of the territory of this township was included within the limits of the "Connecticut Reservation," from which State, instead of the general government, came the titles of purchasers.

Fishing has been carried on quite extensively by citizens of these islands, and is still remunerative to those engaged in it. Large numbers have been caught and shipped annually from the fisheries within the limits of this territory, proving a source of profit during the few months of the year the business is pursued.

Products, in 1872: Wheat, 25 acres, 660 bushels; oats, 12 acres, 700 bushels; corn, 147 acres, 6,375 bushels; meadow, 9 acres, 18 tons hay; potatoes, 21 acres, 2,550 bushels; butter, 300 lbs.; grapes, 732 acres, 3,154,109 lbs.; wine, 169,590 gallons.

CATAWBA ISLAND TOWNSHIP embraces all the territory remaining within the boundaries of what was originally known as Van Rensselaer township, after the formation of Put-in-Bay township. The name was changed from Van Rensselaer to Catawba Island township, on account of the grape-growing interest of this section, the "Catawba" vine being the most popular at the time, and still taking the lead of all others with the most experienced cultivators and wine manufacturers in the township.

It embraces an area of 3,425 acres, the total valuation of which, in 1872, was $87,700. The valuation of the chattel property was, for the same year, $39,912. The township is free from "Town and Township" indebtedness. The amount of tax levied for town, county, and state purposes for the same year was only $2,064 02. The population in 1870 was 515, of whom 417 were native born.

This territory was occupied as early as 1795, by Canadian French, and their descendants, who were a mixture of French and Indians, known as half-breeds. They subsisted chiefly by hunting and trapping, leaving the pursuit of agriculture to those who had more taste for manual labor, confining their operations in this direction to the cultivation of a small garden, or patch of Indian corn. A few years after they settled here, if "settled" it may be called, a few apple trees of a very inferior quality were planted out along the lake shore, a few of which are still to be seen in places. Amongst these pioneer trappers was a "half-breed" named Jacco King, well known as an energetic and rather shrewd trader. M. La Fleur, Poskelle, Bebau, and Gorneau, were amongst the first French inhabitants of this region. The first permanent settlements were made here in 1836. Wheeler Porter, Walter and Asher Bardsley, Eli Moore Obdie, and Chauncey Tillotson, and Henry Ellithorp, with their families, came about the same time from the Eastern States, and erecting their log cabins, began at once to clear off the heavy timber and prepare for the cultivation of the soil. For a few years their nearest mill was at Venice, in Erie county, a distance of eighteen miles.

Up to 1840 no white fish had been caught in Lake Erie, or known to exist there. In the autumn of that year Mr. Henry Ellithorp discovered these fish at a point near Mouse Island, so named because of its diminutive size, and communicated the fact of their presence to Mr. Jacob Scott, of Sandusky, who had a small seine. The same evening these two gentlemen, assisted by others, concluded to test the matter thoroughly, and were rewarded by the capture of over nine barrels of genuine white fish, the first, so far as is known here, that were ever caught in the waters of Lake Erie. For many years past thousands of tons of these superior fish have been taken from the lake and shipped to all parts of the country.

The first school-house was erected in 1838. There are but two school-houses in the township. The citizens, without regard to sect or party, built a church, free to all denominations, but under the supervision of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Elder Beaty was amongst the pioneer preachers of this locality, and visited around from house to house, to awaken, if possible, an interest amongst the people on the subject of religion. He called at the residence of Mrs. S., and after introducing the subject of his mission, asked her if she was training up her children in the fear of the Lord. She replied: "Of course I am raising them up in the fear of the Lord, and of the devil, and everything else, for there is no telling whose hands we will fall into at last." This was an idea not comprehended in the theological disquisitions with which Mr. Beaty had made himself familiar.

Mr. H. Ellithorp and Mr. H. Newton were the first two men in this township to embark in the grape business, which they did in 1860. In 1871 there were 345 acres grape vines producing, and the vintage was 909,200 pounds of grapes, and in addition to what were sold, there were 40,253 gallons of wine made. At present there are not less than 600 acres of vines growing, and large quantities are planted every year, so that grape growing is emphatically the business of Catawba township. In 1862, Mr. P. E. Andrews had the largest number of vines owned by any one man on the island, but others have engaged in it more extensively since that period.

The soil is well adapted to other fruits as well as to the grape, and numbers of apple and peach orchards have been planted within the past two years. The soil and climate are also well adapted to agriculture and grazing. There is considerable waste land in this township, considering its limited extent. In one part there are marshes and swamps, and in other parts there are ledges of rocks coming to the surface, or so near it, that hundreds of acres from one or other of these causes, are unproductive. Much of the former will, however, be utilized in time by draining, while the rock will doubtless be worth more than the space it occupies. Both the still and sparkling wines are made here, and there is a wine cellar, owned by the "Catawba Wine Company," with a capacity of 130,000 gallons. Also one owned by Gideon S. Owen with a capacity of 40,000 gallons.

Products of Catawba island, in 1872, were as follows: wheat 165 acres, 2,637 bushels; buckwheat, 16 acres, 231 bushels; oats, 95 acres, 3,582 bushels; corn 225 acres, 8,791 bushels; meadow, 109 acres, 164 tons hay; clover, 64 acres, 76 tons hay and 89 bushels seed; potatoes 23 acres, 1,977 bushels; butter, 5,650 lbs; grapes, 345 acres, 900,200 lbs., 40,243 gallons wine; apples, 2,205 bushels; peaches, 694 bushels; pears, 116 bushels; pasturage, 1,933 acres; wool 1,330 lbs.; uncultivated land, 548.

PORTAGE TOWNSHIP originally embraced all the territory now embraced within the limits of Portage, Bay, Erie, Carroll and Salem townships, and was then a part of Sandusky county. It contains an area of 6,742 acres of land, much of which is well adapted to agricultural pursuits, grazing and fruit growing. There is, however, considerable waste land in this section of the county, on account of the marshes in the vicinity of the lake. Much of this will, in time, be redeemed by ditching, and otherwise, and thus will be added to the wealth of the county many acres of the best soil in the State. The opening of the railroad along the lake shore has already demonstrated what can be done in this direction. The soil, a rich, black loam on the surface, cannot be surpassed for growing corn. Wheat does well in ordinary seasons, but is not so reliable a crop as corn, which is scarcely ever known to fail.

Fruit does well also, and especially the grape. On the islands grape-growing and the manufacture of wine constitutes the principal employment of the citizens, and has proved a source of great profit in every case where it has been extensively engaged in. Other fruit, such as apples, peaches and pears are grown successfully. Thousands of peach trees have been planted in this section of the county annually for the past three years, and next to the vine the peach seems destined to become a leading interest.

During the war of 1812-14, a brush fence was built across the peninsula, (from the lake shore to Sandusky bay), one and three-fourths of a mile in length, and the peninsula was used as pasture ground for cavalry horses during the summer months, while the war with the British continued.

Until 1840, the nearest mill was at Lower Sandusky, sixteen miles distant. James Kirk, a soldier of 1812, residing two miles from Port Clinton, had what was then called a perogue, afterwards known as a "dug-out," twenty-four feet in length, three and a half feet in width, and two feet in depth; this was hauled across the peninsula by teams, to Sandusky bay, and loaded with grain, and by means of oars, and sometimes sails, was made the "mill-boy" of the settlement. The labor of transporting the grain and returning with the grist being performed alternately by those interested.

The first school-house was built in this township in 1838, by the joint labor of the neighborhood. J. W. Sylvester was the first teacher who occupied this house.

Christy Chapel, built by the Methodist Episcopal church in 1842, was the first church in the township. There are now four school-houses in this township, including a union school divided into four apartments. There are also five churches, viz: M. E. church (Christy Chapel) United Brethren church, known as "Union," and a United Brethren church in the village of Port Clinton, M. E. church and Roman Catholic, also in the village.

In 1819, two men, named John Wood and George Bishop, trappers, were murdered for their furs and traps, 8 miles from Port Clinton, on the bank of Portage river, by two Indians named Negoniba, and Negoshic, accompanied by a boy named Negossum. They were brought into the settlement by the Indians and delivered up, and were afterward tried, convicted and executed at Norwalk, Ohio.

David Mizner, the present Probate Judge of Ottawa county, rented a farm in 1825, where Port Clinton now stands, and in his agricultural pursuits met with no obstacles so great as the innumerable hosts of blackbirds that infested the country and destroyed the crops.

Frequently the early settlers were compelled to ride around and through their fields from morning till night, shooting and driving the birds from the ripening crop.

The population of Portage township is, native, 895; foreign, 351; total 1,246.

PORT CLINTON, the county seat of Ottawa county, is pleasantly situated on the bay, on the right bank of the Portage river. It is north from the capital of the State, 120 miles. It has a good harbor, in which is a lighthouse. The population in 1870 was 543; of these, 115 are of foreign birth. The village was laid out by General Lyttle, E. S. and E. H. Haines, O. M. Spencer, and others, mostly residents of Cincinnati, Ohio, and was incorporated November 13th, 1842. The first Mayor was Wm. G. Green; the first Recorder, S. O. Correll.

The first Trustees were J. W. Sylvester, David D. Dayton, Wm. L. Cole, and Alexander Borden. There was a block house built under direction of General Harrison, in 1812, within the limits of the present incorporation, and a fort, also, within less than a mile of the corporation line. The court-house was built in 1840, at a cost of $10,000. A union school building, which will be ready for occupancy soon, will cost, when completed, $15,000.

There are several fine stores and shops of various kinds, and considerable business is done at this point.

There are five hotels, and a total of nine saloons, including all places where liquors are retailed.

There is one Masonic lodge and a town-hall. There are also two churches, Methodist and United Brethren.

The Ottawa News, a live weekly newspaper, is published in Port Clinton. It was established by George W. Clarke eight years ago. Mr. Clarke is now the Clerk of Courts for Ottawa county, and the News is now owned and edited by Messrs. R. Stansbery and D. Taylor. It is well conducted, and has a large circulation. The business of fishing has been extensively carried on here, and is still followed to some extent. Fish were caught here, in the year ending June 1st, 1873, to the amount of nearly $9,000. There is a ship yard on the opposite bank of Portage river, where a number of vessels have been built. The present season a vessel 143 feet long, 26 feet 2 inches beam, 13 feet deep, costing $30,000, was built here for Captain John Duffy.

The value of the real estate in Portage township in 1872 was $219,441; chattel property, $66,432.

Products in 1872, except grape crop, which is given for 1871, were as follows: Wheat, 454 acres, 8,761 bushels; buckwheat, 9 acres, 119 bushels; oats, 287 acres, 12,492 bushels; barley, 65 acres, 1,568 bushels; corn, 599 acres, 31,360 bushels; meadow, 554 acres, 871 tons hay; clover, 201 acres, 352 tons hay and 372 bushels seed; potatoes, 34 acres, 3,193 bushels; butter, 13,200 pounds; grapes, 117 acres, vintage, 323,559 pounds, wine, 9,460 gallons; apples, 5,450 bushels; pears, 102 bushels; pasture land, 1,050 acres; wool, 11,624 pounds; uncultivated land, 3,439 acres.

The gypsum beds in the eastern part of Portage township, on the shore of Sandusky bay, are worked extensively, and the products shipped to various points along the lakes, and being of superior quality, finds a ready market where it has been introduced.
