BRIEF HISTORY OF HURON COUNTY.

HURON County is situated in the northern part of the State of Ohio about midway between its eastern and western boundary lines, its northern limit lying from eight to fifteen miles south of the southern shore of Lake Erie. It is a part of the Connecticut Western Reserve, so called from the fact that that State, in relinquishing to the U. S. certain lands granted by its charter from King Charles II., reserved the lands now forming the north-eastern quarter of Ohio, from the Pennsylvania line to Sandusky and Seneca Counties, and from the Lake to the forty-first degree of latitude.

This County originally embraced all the Firelands of this Western Reserve; a name derived from this portion, (about five hundred thousand acres,) having been granted by Connecticut, in 1692, to the people of certain towns, notably: New Haven, New London, Danbury, and Norwalk, who had suffered from fire or depredations of the British army during the Revolutionary war. The lands were allotted to individuals according to losses suffered, in values varying from about nine thousand dollars to forty-two cents, as it is shown by the records of the County. It was formed by act of the Territorial government in 1809, but was not organized until January 1815.

Its name, Huron, is from the Indian tribe of that name, who lived in this part of the country, south of the lake. As many of the pioneer settlers were descendants of the original "sufferers," and many others came from Connecticut, it is natural to find, as we do, many of our townships and towns named from Connecticut towns, as Fairfield, New London, Greenwich, Norwalk, New Haven, etc. Roads, east and west, and north and south, through the County, were ordered made, in 1809, by the directors of the Firelands Company.

The first settlements were at Huron and Vermillion (then in the County) in 1809; the first within the present limits was at Norwalk in 1810, followed in the succeeding year by those at Lyne, New Haven, Greenfield, and Townsend. The County seat was at first in Avery Township, (now Milan), but in 1818 it was moved to Norwalk.

As originally formed, Huron County included what is now Erie County, which was separated from its northern part in 1838. In 1846, on the formation of Ashland County, the township of Ruggles, in the south-east corner of Huron County, was set off to the former. Including this township of Ruggles, the County was twenty miles from north to south, and twenty-five miles from east to west; it was surveyed into townships each five miles square, of which there are now nineteen. The eastern townships are in Range 20 of the Connecticut Western Reserve, and the western townships in Range 24. The south townships, next to the "base line" are designated as town one, those next north as town two, etc., and for the purpose of locating lands, recording titles, levying taxes, and so on, each township is divided into four sections, each of which is two and one-half miles square. The south-east one is known as "Sec. 1," the north-east as "No. 2," the north-west as "No. 3," and the south-west as "No. 4." Each "section" is sub-divided into lots which vary greatly in size and shape, and these lots are numbered, often very irregularly. In several townships the parcel of land set off to an individual is known as a Tract, and often embraces several thousand acres, as the Douglass Tract in Hartland, and the Vredenburg Tract in Peru Township. In some other townships similar parcels, originally set off to individuals, are known as Locations. As, for instance, the Mead Location in Greenwich.

The greater part of the County was originally heavily timbered, and our forests still appear dense and of massive growth to those from the older parts of the country, who see them for the first time. The early settlers found here every tree for use or beauty, the main trouble being that there were too many of them, and no means of getting them out of the way of their crops but by felling and burning them. The maple, from which the Indians knew how to make maple sugar, the oak, beech, white wood, hickory, black walnut; now almost extirpated, but valuable for lumber, chestnut, butternut, the gleaming trunks of the sycamores marking all water ways, the dogwood, basswood, tulip tree, all flourished in the "forest primeval" of this region.

And yet, with all this luxuriance of forest growth, this county has in its north-western part several thousand acres of prairie land, and it marks the eastern limit of the prairie region. These prairie lands in Ridgefield and Lyne Townships are very fertile, having a rich, swampy, muck soil. In some portions twenty crops of corn have been raised in as many consecutive years, every crop a good one.

In the early days, and for many years, until the timber was largely cleared off, game was abundant. Bears and wolves were occasionally found, while deer and turkey were so plenty that an expert hunter not seldom killed a half dozen in a single day. Small game, such as coon, opossum, squirrels, etc., abounded everywhere, but at present even the latter are hard to find, and the hunters have to depend upon a few days' shooting at quail, woodcock, or rabbits, during the "season."

There are no lakes, navigable streams, mountains or high hills within the borders of the county, yet the surface is diversified by gentle slopes and low hills and valleys, which afford picturesque and attractive scenery.

The county is traversed by the Huron and Vermillion Rivers, which have their source a few miles south of the county, and flow northerly across it along fertile valleys. Their banks are often bluffs of considerable height, and their tributaries may be found on each mile of road throughout the county. The general slope of the county is to the north, these two rivers emptying into Lake Erie, following, with their tributaries, mainly a north-westerly direction.

There is an important and generally well defined sandy and gravelly ridge, or lake beach line, extending from near the north-central part of Townsend Township south-westerly nearly or quite across the County. In other parts, also, there are many other sand or gravel ridges, all very fertile. These ridges, rising almost imperceptibly from the surrounding region, vary in height from a few feet above the plain to nearly three hundred feet above the level of the lake.

In the south-west part of the County there is a marsh embracing several thousand acres, which, until recently, was covered with water a great part of the year, but which has been reclaimed by drainage, so that much of it is cultivated. Good crops are raised on portions where the "muck" is ten feet deep, while other portions, though well-drained, do not as yet yield profitable crops. Before this swamp was reclaimed and improved it was the home of much wild game. Immense flocks of pigeons came there during certain seasons of the year, so that a certain maple grove near the County line is known as the Pigeon Roost, where but a few years since incredible numbers of pigeons gathered, and were killed and captured in great numbers; while on the central and eastern parts of the marsh, wild ducks and geese afforded fine sport for the hunters. For many years parties from Norwalk had a Club House near the east end of the marsh, where at certain times they enjoyed opportunities for shooting, now only to be found in a few far away places. Where in 1860 they were shooting ducks from boats, may be seen bountiful crops of corn, or fine meadows.

There are some heavy clay lands in the County, but generally, with the exceptions already mentioned, the soil is a clay or sandy loam. Much of the low or flat lands, as well as considerable portions of the uplands, is being thoroughly underdrained with tile, and the productiveness of the soil is greatly improved. While there are many drain tile factories in the county, yet for the past two seasons they have been unable to supply the demand. Many of our best farmers are tiling land now, which a few years ago no one would have thought needed it. It has been the work of two or three generations to clear the land and open the roads, and it seems to be the work of the present generation of farmers to properly drain the land, a job quite as great as clearing it, except that they have a greater income from their land meanwhile. Our roads—to what generation will their improvement belong?

Before railroads were built, when Milan was the Chicago of the world in the wheat trade, there being a ship-canal for lake vessels from Huron to Milan, during the period from 1830 to 1845, and when grain was hauled over one hundred miles from the south, long strings of two, four and six-horse teams were often seen on all our north and south roads, while the "tavern" keeper at each cross-road did a flourishing business. But the railroads have changed all this. First came the old "Strap-iron" road, operated by horse power, from Sandusky to Monroeville; then in 1845 and later the steam engine, and the Sandusky, Mansfield & Newark road, now a part of the B. & O. system. Then the Cleveland, Norwalk & Toledo road was built, now the L. S. & M. S., which crossed the northern tier of Townships, and the C. C. C. & St. L. through the south-eastern part of the County. The W. & L. E., to the building of which the people of the county largely contributed, the "Nickel Plate," or N. Y. C. & St. L., passing through the north-west part, and lately the P. A. & W., and the Akron Division of the B. & O. R. R., through the south part of the county, afford convenient markets to all its parts, and make it one of the most prosperous counties in the State.

There are in the County many flourishing towns. Norwalk, the County Seat, is a thriving city of nearly eight thousand inhabitants, and is known as the Maple City, from its beautiful shade trees. Main Street is celebrated far and wide as one of the finest to be found anywhere. The L. S. & M. S. and W. & L. E. railway shops located here employ many men. There are also several important factories here, one of the most extensive being the A. B. Chase Piano and Organ Factory, of which a more extended notice is given elsewhere. The Laning Printing Company, known the whole country over for its Fair publications, is located here. Many other industries are to be found in different parts of the city. Norwalk has never had a "boom," but has had a steady, healthy growth, which has brought continued prosperity with it.

Bellevue, partly in Sandusky County, has had a rapid growth since the Nickel Plate Railroad was built, and is surrounded by one of the finest wheat growing sections of the State. It contains many fine residences and business blocks, has many wealthy citizens, and shows evidences of thrift and business prosperity rarely found in a town of its size.

Monroeville, with her three railroads, and surrounded by some of the richest corn lands in the country, is a town of importance. Before and during the war, there were several large distilleries here, having a daily capacity in 1860 of about seven thousand gallons of proof spirits, consuming about two thousand bushels of grain daily, furnishing feed for about five thousand hogs, and furnishing employment for one hundred coopers, besides the men employed in the distilleries. Those who remember the days when Packard, Harkness, Zahm, Williams, Prentiss and Roby were doing business in Monroeville, remember it a busy, thriving town. The town has made some heroic efforts to renew her former prosperity, and the new houses erected in 1891, and the busy scenes on her streets seem to indicate that her excellent mills and factories, notably the new organ factory, have in great measure, if not entirely, brought it about.

Chicago Junction, in the north part of New Haven and Richmond townships, though it was only started in 1874, has become one of the first towns in the County. An important transfer station on the B. & O. Railway system, and giving employment to many railroad men, it gives promise of continued rapid growth. Some two hundred new residences have been built during the past year, yet a hundred more are needed.

Greenwich, about a mile west of the center of Greenwich township, twenty years ago was a little hamlet of two score houses, but has had a rapid growth and is now a thriving town with several substantial brick blocks, and hundreds of dwellings. Three railroads afford good shipping facilities, and being surrounded by an intelligent and progressive farming community, with no competing towns near by, it must always be the market for much stock and grain.

New London, on the C. C. C. & St. L. and P. A. & W. railroads, has several important industries. One of the largest factories of brick molds in the United States is here, and brick yard supplies and metal wheels are sent from here to all parts of the country. A butter-tub factory and a large grist mill add to the business of the town.

Plymouth, partly in Richland County, Wakeman, in the north-east part of the County, Collins, Clarksfield and West Clarksfield are thriving railroad towns.

Fairfield, about a mile west of the center of the township of that name, is pleasantly located, and contains many fine residences. This town shows fewer changes than any other in the County, while New Haven, once one of the largest manufacturing towns in the county, Steuben and Fitchville, show many evidences of decline.

By reference to the statistics of the County it will be seen that the population has followed the fashion of the world, the population of the towns and cities increasing at the expense of the country districts. The last decade shows a remarkable tendency in this direction, not only in this country but throughout Europe.

From its early settlement this County has paid marked attention to education. The old Academy and the Female Seminary, at Norwalk, did good work, and under the best obtainable teachers, sent out many young men and women well equipped for life's work. The system of common schools superseded these and, especially in the towns and villages, lays the foundations of a good education. In the country districts more systematic work than is done could be accomplished by an efficient system of county superintendence. School houses are frequent and churches hardly less so, attesting the interest felt by our people in education and religion. General intelligence is widely diffused through the medium of the larger papers and periodicals, while our own home newspapers, numbering sixteen, of which two are dailies, are well patronized.

The pioneer history of the County, the hardships and privations endured by the early settlers, and the many interesting and heroic incidents of their history, have been carefully collected and recorded by the Firelands Historical Society, and published in the Firelands Pioneer, which has been distributed and read in every township, rendering it unnecessary and almost impracticable to add anything new or profitable.

The amount of agricultural products in the County testifies to its fertile soil, and its successful annual fairs, to its thrift and social qualities. Its manufactures, though not so numerous as they might be, are yet the best of their kind, as the plows made by the Fairfield Plow Works, and the pianos and organs turned out by the A. B. Chase Company, of Norwalk, bear witness. Bostwick & Burgess, also of the latter place, manufacture a variety of small articles, which are found on sale as far away as New Orleans, and as for the fame of the Sprague umbrella, who has not heard of it?

So, in general, there is no county among the eighty-eight in the State, of which Ohio has better reason to be proud than old Huron.

THE A. B. CHASE COMPANY,

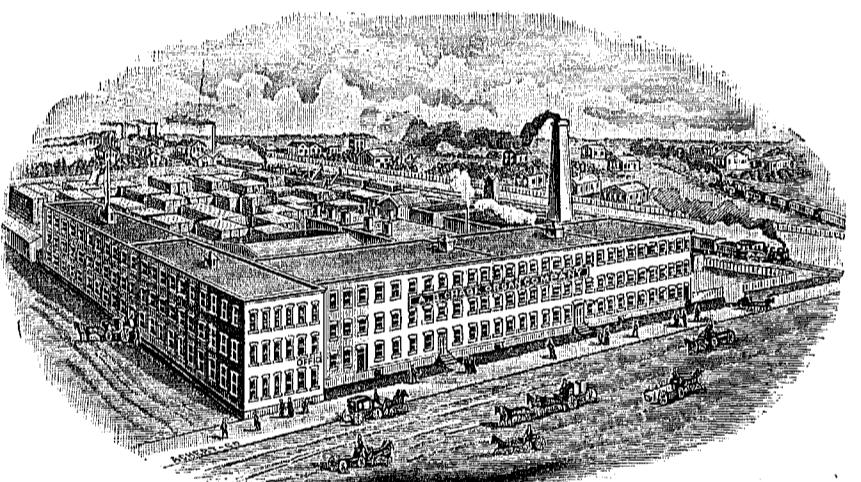

NORWALK, O.,

MANUFACTURERS OF PIANOS AND ORGANS,

Occupies a position in relation to the interests of Huron County that entitles it to more than usual space in these pages. In 1876 this firm commenced the manufacture of Organs. The first year they made and sold less than 100 instruments, the second year less than 400; but from this time their business increased rapidly. Additions have been made to their factory at various times, until now, in 1891, their plant is fairly represented by the accompanying cut; only this cut does not show a four-story brick addition 56 x 85 feet, which was built in 1890.

HISTORICAL RECORD.

- Sept. 1, 1875. Charter was granted, and Company organized to manufacture Organs and Pianos.
- Jan. 1, 1876. First factory building erected, 40 x 100 feet, three stories, frame.
- July 1, 1876. Their first organ was completed.
- July 1, 1880. First addition, 40 x 80 feet, 3 stories, completed.
- Sept. 1, 1880. Entire factory destroyed by fire. Loss $65,000.
- Jan. 1, 1881. Brick factory erected, 40 x 200 feet, 3 stories.
- July 1, 1883. Brick addition, 56 x 150 feet, 3 stories, completed.
- Jan. 1, 1886. Commenced the manufacture of Pianos.
- July 1, 1890. Second addition, 56 x 85 feet, completed.

STATISTICAL RECORD.

At this date, January 1892, 225 men are employed in the manufacture and sale of their goods. 25 different styles of Pianos, and 70 different styles of Organs are now being made. 200 Organs and 100 Pianos are turned out each month. 30,000 Pianos and organs have been made and sold by this company in the United States since it was organized. $10,000 is paid out by them each month for wages alone. $1,250,000 has been paid for labor in this County by this Co. since it commenced business. $2,500,000 worth of instruments have been sold by them. These have gone into all parts of the world, and the money returned to Norwalk, where a large proportion of it has been spent for labor and material.

These Pianos and Organs find a ready market in all the leading musical centers of the Nation. It is safe to say that no other similar institution has brought so much money into the County, or given as much good music and joy to the homes of the County as
