Judging

Evaluating history is a subjective process, but criteria and methods have been established to achieve fair decisions. Here is a description of how the judging process will work at the Ohio History Day State Competition.

Evaluation Sheets

Each judge will have an evaluation sheet for each entry they judge. They are instructed to use these sheets to write positive, critical evaluations of each entry. Written comments are stressed in judge orientation, because the evaluation sheet is the principal feedback students receive from this event. Rules are important for each category. Small infractions are not grounds for disqualification, but judges may take them into consideration when choosing finalists. Evaluations will be available to students no later than the Wednesday following the contest.

Interview

Each judge team will interview students about their entry. This gives students the opportunity to discuss their research findings and project creation process. Students should not have a formal presentation prepared. The interview does not weigh heavily in final decision-making. All Ohio History Day entries are expected to stand alone and be understood without the need for a student to explain or clarify. During the second round of judging, there will not be a question-and-answer session.

Ratings

All judging decisions are made by consensus of the judging teams. Judges are asked to evaluate projects based on a specific rubric. In effect, Ohio History Day judging is a jury process where the judges must reach a shared conclusion, rather than an arbitrary point system. Please note: Ratings vary from one judging group to another. Each set of judges establishes their own standards for ratings. Ratings cannot be compared across different judging teams.

Finals Round Judging

Categories with a single team of judges will have award decisions made by those teams. Categories with multiple teams of judges will have run-offs that will consider the top 2-3 entries from the initial judging groups. A new set of judges, or combination from the original teams, will evaluate the final entries and determine rankings. There may be run-offs in any category; however, run-off times will only be posted for the Documentary and Performance categories. Students in these categories are expected to be available for the final round of judging beginning at 1:30 p.m. The entries moving on to the second round will be posted outside at the main registration area in The Capital Center at 1 p.m. All times are approximate and subject to change.

Awards Ceremony

The Awards Ceremony will take place in The Capital Center Performance Arena at 4 p.m. Doors will open around 3 p.m., after second round exhibit judging is complete. Times are subject to change.
